YOUNG HOLD-UP MAN ROBS MOUNTAIN INN PROPRIETOR

Richard Griffith, Fedcral Weather Observer. Robbed of $18 Early Sunday Morning

OFFICERS STILL SEARCH

Officers are still scarching for a young bandit who stuck a gun against Richard Griffith, proprietor of Savage Mountain Inn, in this county, on the National Highway, four miles west of Frostburg, early Sunday morning, and made good his escape with $18.

Griffith is a Federal observer and at the time of the stick-up, was in the act of preforming his official duties. Griffith was about to make his weather call to Washington when the bandit ordered him to "throw up" his hands.

Officers Summoned

The man, thought to be about 25 years old, then cut the telephone lines, removed the money from a cash register, and ran. The robbery took place in the service station into which the bandit had apparently forced an entrance.

Griffith used an emergency telephone to call Sheriff Hugh A. Hotchkiss, of Allegany county, who began a search with Allegany county investigator Terrence J. Boyle, Curtis Kimc, detective, and R. C. Cassen, a Frostburg city policeman.

The bandit, Griffith said, wore a light cap and dark clothing. The nature of his offense may take a Federal twist, as Griffith was in the act of performing his official duties at the time of the hold-up.

NEW ROAD WORK IN STATE TO EMPLOY OVER 15,000

Six or Eight Projects To Be Submitted For Each County

Accepting by telegram an invitation of the Federal Government to participate in a $90,000,000 nationwide road improvement program designed to provide work for a large section of the country's unemployed, members of the State Roads Commission began working with the aim of taking full advantage of the offer.

The cost of the program to be carried by the Federal government, sixty-five percent coming from Federal relief funds, and thirty-five percent from Federal road aid to the States.

It was stated the commission during the winter could advantagcously spend $3,000,000 of Federal funds for useful permanent improvements and employ approximately 15,000 men thirty hours a week.

Most of the work contemplated is on secondary roads and partially improved county roads and municipal streets. There will be six or eight projects, of not more than $5,000 each, for every county in the state, with more for the more populous counties.

The improvements to be made include grading and draining roads and streets, largely by hand labor; widening of shoulders and inside curves, flattening bank slopes, laying of tile underdrains and cobble gutters, fencing rights of way, construction of dry masonry guard walls, surfacing and resurfacing with local materials, roadside clean-up, cleaning up streets, trimming trees, and producing road and maintenance materials.

WORST NOVEMBER STORM IN YEARS STRIKES HERE

Snowfall Reaches Depth of Five Inches; Many Places Drifted

What turned out to be one of the worst November snow storms in years struck Oakland and Garrett county Monday night, right on the heels of the first snow of the year which had barely disappeared from the ground.

Continuing all day Tuesday and Tuesday night, the snowfall reached a depth of about five inches, with drifts several feet high piling up where the hurricane-like wind touched.

Temperature remained around the freezing point until early Wednesday, when the thermometer dropped to 10 degrees above zero at the Government station at Weber's.

The sudden change in temperature yesterday brought the realization that winter is at hand.

A similar storm twenty years ago blocked traffic and made it difficult to get around. Tuesday and Wednesday, although the wind formed large drifts, the State Roads Commission reported that they "didn't amount to anything" and that all roads were open.

BOY IS THROWN 12 FEET INTO TREE IN CAR WRECK

Cars Collide on National Pike—Injure Friendsville Family

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Uphold and their three children, Carlos, Donald and Vernon, of Friendsville, were injured Tuesday when thrown from their automobile on the National Highway, just east of Flat Rock Park, Pa., and Willard Clouston, 23, Cheat Bridge, W. Va., who was held responsible for the accident, was sentenced to ten days in jail in Uniontown, for reckless driving and for operating without a permit.

Clouston, it is alleged, attempted to pass the Uphold machine and cut back to the right too sharp, causing Uphold to leave the road. The car overturned throwing all occupants free.

Donald landed in a tree about 12 feet from the ground, while the other occupants escaped serious injury. The child was recovered from the tree by State Officer C. E. Stillwagon, who investigated, and others attracted to the scene. He was apparently uninjured.

Held On Liquor Charge

George Gank, of near Hutton, is being held under $500 bond for his appearance before the March Term Circuit Court on charges of manufacture and possession of liquor as a result of a raid made by Federal officers and Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear last Friday night.

When Gank's home was raided on the night in question the officers discovered a fourteen-gallon still in the cellar, where there were also 400 gallons of mash and 71 gallons of alleged hard liquor. Following his arrest, Gank was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Charles F. White on Saturday morning who held him for the action of the grand jury.

More Loans Made to Farmers; Others Being Approved

Two more loans to farmers were executed this week through Paul Ulman, correspondent for the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore and the Land Bank Commissioner, involving approximately $5,000, it was stated yesterday. This makes a total of $35,000 in cash loaned to farmers of the community who are being pressed for mortgage payments.

Mr. Ulman at present is working on 20 applications for loans that have been approved, involving a sum of at least $40,000. Since last week Mr. Ulman has interviewed about fifty farmers who are seeking loans and more than half have made out applications.

A number of appraisers are in the county this week and after their work is completed more than 25 applications will be sent to Baltimore for approval or disapproval.

LEGION POST WITH SMALL MEMBERSHIP GETS SKUNK

Mountain Pussy to be Sent Out Each Week to Inactive Post

"Have you a little skunkie in your Post?" State Legionaires will be asking each other before the State-wide membership drive is over, and if their post has just such an animal they won't get a very high rating with the department commander. Or at least that is the present plan of Howard Cutler, chairman of the State membership drive.

A real live skunk has been obtained somewhere, maybe from this county. It has been named "Can't Make It." It goes each Friday to the district having the smallest percentage of Legion members, and the district commander in turn presents it to the post in the district having had the least advance in membership during the previous week. The low post must take care of the animal for one week.

Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, of Oakland, is in the Western Maryland district and according to J. M. Gonder, post commander, there isn't much likelihood of it coming to this town, as the local organization already has 50 per cent of last year's membership signed up for 1934.

A "Where's Elmer?" campaign is also to be conducted along with the drive. "Elmer," explained Commander Gonder, "is the Legionaire or ex-service man who hasn't paid his dues."

A regular meeting of the post is to be held Monday evening in the City Hall. In the meantime the drive for membership goes on to keep the skunk from the door. As if there weren't already enough of them in this county.

Red Cross Drives Continues With Thirty-three Joining

The drive for members in the American Red Cross continues this week and until Thanksgiving Day, November 30, and although no reports have been turned into Mrs. Samuel Cole, chairman, by community workers, thirty-three persons in various parts of the county, have joined at the public health office in the Court House, where Mrs. Cole has her headquarters.

Seventeen of these were named last week in The Republican and the 16 additional ones include Miss Ethel A. Miller, W. W. Dawson and George Hanst, of Oakland; W. Day Mullinix and Mrs. Mullinix, Misses Fern Folk and Miss Helen Folk, Grantsville; Wm. P. Bennett, Kempton; Lauer's Bakery, F. A. Smouse, Mrs. W. L. Gibson, L. B. Shaffer, T. A. Gonder, Mrs. Dora Coddington, Mrs. W. R. Offutt, Western Maryland Power Co.

Miss Christena Winterberg is in charge of the Grantsville section and will be assisted by the members of the student council of the high school of that town. Mr. O. P. Jones, Kitzmiller, is in charge there, and Mrs. A. J. Mason will supervise the Friendsville community drive.

The quota for the county is $600.

Ritchie Names State Farm Advisory Council

Sub-committees in each county to cooperate with the Maryland Agricultural Advisory Council were appointed by Governor Ritchie.

The council was created to work out methods of sealing down farmer's debts so that the farmers would be in a position to borrow federal funds.

The county agent of each county will act as secretary to the county sub-eommittee. C. E. Ellithorp, Bittinger; Charles W. Ream, Crellin; and Stuart F. Hamill, Oakland, were named on the Garrett county committee.

Is Kicked by Deer

Being kicked by a cow, horse or mule may be a common occurrence, but to be kicked by a deer is a distinction which Clarence Leighton only can boast.

While going to his mother's farm just west of town on Monday a small doe ran out into the road in front of his truck. It darted for the side of the road and became entangled in a wire fence.

In attempting to extricate the animal from the wires, Leighton grabbed a hind leg, but quickly let go when it gave a lightning like kick that landed on his body. The dot finally freed and went on its way unharmed. So did Leighton.

RELIEF WORKERS MUST INVESTIGATE THOROUGHLY

Certain Routine Required by Government Before Aid is Given

All Federal relief now being distributed in the county is based on the need of the individual applicant Miss Ethel Miller, relief director, stated this morning. Among the millions requiring the aid of the Nation in the present emergency, it would be strange indeed were there not many less worthy than the large mass of unemployed. Therefore our government, through its Federal Relief Administration, has promulgated certain hard and fast rules and regulations by which the county units in the several states must function. These County Welfare Boards are but trustees of the large amount of money now being expended in direct and work relief and must, therefore, comply strictly with both the letter and the spirit of these rules and regulations.

If the biggest problem in the present emergency is economic need, then the first task of any agency administering unemployment relief funds is to determine the eligibility of each individual applicant for this assistance. The applicant unable to get work to support himself and his family, is asking for this support from the community. Under the existing circumstances, is he entitled to receive this help and, if so, how much?

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has definitely defined the needs that can be met from these funds and the maximum within the applicant's family which can be supplemented. In order to determine these needs the following investigation is required:

A prompt visit to the home, in-inquiry as to the amount of real estate owned, bank accounts and other financial resources; an interview with at least one recent employer and other information of similar import.

In addition, information as to the number in family, ages, places of residence, last three steady jobs of the wage earner, names and relationship of other people living in the household is required.

All information obtained in these investigations and interviews is held in strict confidence, but this explanation was thought to be necessary on account of the many who wonder why all the questions must me asked, and all such information given before a person can be placed on relief.

The County Welfare Board has been advised that the half-ton carload of pork for distribution to relief families will arrive in Oakland Thursday night. This pork will be distributed by truck to various grocery stores throughout the county Monday. All families on relief will receive with their check this week an order for pork. This order will be filled by the grocery store nearest their home.

Seventy-five Attend Banquet of Accident Future Farmers

Seventy-five were in attendance at the tenth annual father and son banquet of the Accident Chapter F. F. A., given last Friday evening in the auditorium of the school building there.

Prof. George Quigley, University of Maryland, gave the chief address, comparing the present depression with those of the past and assuring farmers that better times ean best be brought about by their own efforts.

Prof. C. W. Seabold, of Glyndon; Prof. Charley B. Miller, of Friendsville, and County Agent John H. Carter, of Oakland, were among the out-of-town guests present at the banquet.

Music was furnished by the Friendsville Male Quartet and the banquet was served by the home economics class of the school under direction of Miss Eula Guthrie.

WHEAT ORGANIZATION IS NAMED FOR THIS COUNTY

41 Applications Are Sent to Adjustment Administration

The Wheat Production Control Association of Garrett county has now appointed a county allotment committee and applications and contracts have been sent to the office of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at Washington.

The committee appointed included J. G. Glotfelty, Oakland; W. F. Hone, Selbysport, and Bruce Friend, Fcarer. John H. Carter, county agent, is secretary, and Mr. Glotfelty is president.

There was available to Garrett county wheat growers $5,241, if they would sign the production control agreement. Out of the 497 wheat growers only 41 signed the agreement and applied for their percentage of the money. The 41 growers had an average acreage of 288 with an average production of 5,790 bushels of grain each year.

Hunting Season Opens; Many Licenses Have Been Issued

Hunting season opened yesterday in Garrett county, and despite the then prevailing stormy weather, many took advantage of the opportunty to look for rabbit, pheasant, wild turkeys and other legitimate game in this and other communities.

An article last week from the State Game Warden failed to state that squirrel could be hunted in Garrett county only in October, but a special regulation applicable to Garrett county closes the season on that game October 31.

Deer season will not be until December 1, and then only for five days, one of which will be Sunday, December 3, when it will be unlawful to hunt.

At the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, A. G. Ross has issued more than 1800 hunting permits with the likelihood of the number reaching 2000 or more before the season is at an end.

MORE REGISTRATIONS OF UNEMPLOYED BEING MADE

Four Hundred Enrolled Now—Additional Dates Announced

Unemployment registration will continue next week in the county when Kempton, Gorman, Bittinger and Accident will be visited, according to Milburn W. Mann, manager. Registrations are being made today in Swanton.

To date more than four hundred have registered, and it is now estimated that the total will reach 600. Forty were signed at Bloomington on Tuesday and last Friday 61 signed at Friendsville.

The schedule for next week follows, and Mr. Mann urges those who expect to register to pay particular attention to the time, as only part of one day will be spent in the communities.

Kempton, Davis Coal and Coke Co.'s store, Monday, November 20, 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

Gorman, Jacob Dilgard's residence, Monday, November 20, from 1 p. m. to 4 p. m.

Bittinger, O. C. Buckle's store, Friday, November 24, 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

Accident, F. E. Spoerlein's garage, Friday, November 24, 1 p. m. to 4 p. m.

Registrations of the unemployed in Vindex, Shallmar and Kitzmiller will be made at Kitzmiller at an early date, Mr. Mann stated. A second registration will be held at Grantsville and Friendsville at a later date.

Two More Members Added to Rotary Club On Friday

Two new members were added to the Oakland Rotary Club at its regular meeting last Friday evening. They were Dr. E. C. Peck, county health officer, and A. W. Wilson, a State roads engineer who recently came to Oakland from another section of the State. Dr. H. W. McComas delivered the charge to the new members and welcomed them in fellowship. The club now numbers 30, having upheld its membership throughout the past several years, never going below 27.

F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent, will be the speaker at the regular meeting of the club tomorrow evevning. Last Friday Rev. C. A. Shilke spoke on Martin Luther's life.

E. R. Jones, in charge of entertainment, is planning a three months' program which will bring every member of the club into activity.

CAR ACCIDENTS KILL TWO AND SERIOUSLY HURT ONE

1 ACCIDENT UNAVOIDABLE

Edgar Poleman, 18, of Shade Mills, Garrett county, was instantly killed, and Everett Durst, 24, of New Germany, Garrett county, was seriously injured when a car driven by Durst left the National Highway on Meadow Mountain, about five miles east of Grantsville, and struck some roadside trees, on Sunday evening. Two others in the automobile were less seriously injured.

Poleman received a fracture of the skull and internal injuries; Durst, who is a patient in Miners' Hospital, Frostburg, received internal injuries and is being attended by Dr. W. O. McLane. Walter Michael, 20, was unhurt, while his brother, David Michael, 18, received head injuries and cuts about his knees.

Following a coroner's inquest on Monday afternoon, which was conducted at Grantsville, the jury returned a verdict of "unavoidable accident" as being the cause of the death of young Poleman. The testimony was heard before Enos L. Folk, magistrate at Grantsville. Mr. Jacob J. Bender was foreman of the jury. Testimony introduced at the inquest by Charles Poleman, grandfather of the dead boy, and Walter and David Michael, indicated that there had been some drinking among the occupants of the car.

The case was investigated by W. W. Dawson, State's Attorney, Clarence Spear, deputy sheriff, and Charles W. Magaha, of the State police.

Poleman is survived by his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Poleman Wilt, of Shade Mill, and three half-sisters. The boy made his home with his grandfather.

Funeral services were held yesterday at Mount Zion Methodist church, Rev. A. C. Bell, pastor, officiating.

Dies From Injuries

Mrs. Clinton U. Lemon, Cumberland, died Monday morning in Allegany Hospital, Cumberland, as a result of injuries received in a head-on collision at a point on the National Highway east of Grantsville on October 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemon were in their car when a collision with the car owned and driven by Michael Lucas, a cattle dealer of Berlin, Pa., occurred near the Meyersdale road intersection at Stone House Farm.

An inquest has been scheduled to be held for next Tuesday before Magistrate Folk at Grantsville to inquire into the cause and place the responsibility on the party causing the accident and death of Mrs. Lemon.

Mrs. Lemon is survived by her mother, Mrs. Sarah Wilburn Coleman Lohr, of Deer Park; her husband and one sister, Mrs. Thomas Coleman, of Copeland, West Va.

Funeral services were conducted at St. Patrick's church, Cumberland, yesterday morning.

Annual Re-registration of Scout Troop to be Made Soon

The annual registration of members of Oakland Scout Troop No. 1, will be made within the next few weeks, according to George Hanst, scoutmaster. Blanks for the re-registration have been received from national headquarters with orders to list only names of scouts who intend to remain active in the troop.

Each year every scout in the country must register prior to the date of original registration and organization of each individual troop. The Oakland troop was organized in December of 1924, and at the beginning of 1934 will be starting on its eleventh consecutive year. There will be approximately 45 registered for 1934.

Fire Destroys Wildesen Barn

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the barn on the farm of Frank Wildesen, in the Ryan's Glade section of Garrett county on Sunday evening about nine o'clock.

At the time of the fire a considerable lot of hay was stored in the structure and also in the stable were cattle, horses and other live stock, all of which with the exception of a calf and the hay, were gotten safely out.

The loss to Mr. Wildesen is estimated at $2,500 with some insurance.

On the same farm about nine years ago a fire occurred which destroyed a barn at the time.

PAUL IN ATHENS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:16-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring. Acts 17:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Worshiping God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Preaching in a Famous City.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Do We Worship?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Seeking and Finding God.

I. Athens Full of Idols (v. 16).

Athens was the intellectual metropolis of the world at that time, the home of the world's greatest eloquence and philosophy. In spite of this fact the city was given wholly to idolatry, which so stirred Paul's spirit that he was there moved to preach the gospel.

II. The Parties Concerned in the Controversy (vv. 17-21).

1. The Jews (v. 17). True to his usual custom, Paul went into the synagogue and entered into earnest argument with the Jews.

2. The devout persons (v. 17). This doubtless included proselytes to the Jewish faith.

3. The philosophers (v. 18). From the Jews and devout persons he turned to such as were found in the market place. Here he came into touch with Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. When these philosophers heard his preaching they desired to know what new doctrine he preached, so they invited him to the Areopagus where he might speak to them. They inquired as to what this "babbler" might say. The word "babbler" means literally "seed-picker." They conceived Paul as a globe-trotter who had gathered up seeds of truth or error here and there over the world and that he was somewhat like themselves, interested in talking about that which he had seen and heard.

III. Paul's Address on Mars' Hill (vv. 22-31).

1. The introduction (vv. 22, 23). He introduced his discourse in a courteous manner, stating that he perceived that they were very religious. He did not accuse them of superstition as the A. V. would make it, but as the A. R. V., "very religious." He declared that as he was viewing their city he beheld an altar with an inscription, "To the unknown God." He proceeded at once to connect it with the idea of the true God, implying that this altar had been erected to him.

2. The body of his discourse (vv. 24-31).

a. A declaration concerning God (vv. 24, 25).

(1) The true God created the material universe (v. 24). This was a direct blow at the philosophy of both the Epicureans and the Stoics.

(2) God's spirituality and immensity (vv. 24, 25). Being essentially spiritual he demands heart-service, and being transcendent above all he is not confined to earthly temples.

(3) His active providence (v. 25). He gives existence to all things. He bestows needed gifts upon all creatures, and as sovereign directs all things.

b. His declarations concerning man (vv. 26-31).

(1) His common origin (v. 26). This was a blow at the foolish Athenian pride which supposed that they were superior to all other people. This proposition he proved from their own literature (v. 28). He argued that if men are the offspring of God and bear his likeness, it is utter folly to make images such as the idols were.

(2) Nations have their place by the sovereign purpose of God (v. 26). He argued that the position and mission of each nation is of God's appointment.

(3) Men should seek God (v. 27). His goodness and grace in supplying all human needs, and His sovereign ordering of the affairs of nations should move men to see and seek God.

(4) Pressing obligations to repent (vv. 30, 31). This was his supreme message. Though God had formerly passed over the idolatrous practice of the nations, he now calls all men to repent in preparation for the coming day of judgment, the guarantee of which is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

IV. The Results of Paul's Preaching (vv. 32-34).

1. Some mocked (v. 32). Men and women are today mocking the preacher who dares to preach the coming judgment.

2. Some procrastinated (v. 32). This is the common way of men. Many of them do not mock, but they hesitate to accept and act upon the urgency of the message.

3. Some believed (v. 34). Wherever the gospel is preached there are some who believe and are saved.

Commonplace Lives

The most commonplace lives have about them possibilities of romance, tragedy, and humor that discover themselves to the one who ministers to these lives with a brave and resolute heart.

Value of Prayer

Let us value prayer more! Let us use it more as a means! We can have the music of heaven falling down and filling our lives with the sweetest of melodies, of comfort and joy, if we will.

Response

The first response to the poem published last week was received here early Tuesday when the reverend gentleman, W. E. Waybright, of Red Lion, Pa., stated, "I was reading your ennobling poetry in Scoop's column this morning. It caused my conscience to hurt, so here is my check for the amount that you have charged against me. Hope it reaches you in time to prevent the 'no pants at all danger'."

Well, it just came in time. With this snowstorm this morning which looks like a regular blizzard, it certainly would have been embarrassing with my red flannels exposed, to say nothing of the inconvenience.

Some of the best peanut brittle I have tasted for ages went down my guzzle on Monday when Henry Lauer presented the Republican office with a box of it. The other members of the staff didn't get mad about it either.

Can't boost it too much, or this would look like an advertisement for him, but anyway, take my word for it, it sure was good.

To the other merchants around town. We accept cookies, ice cream, candy, apples, and a lot of other things too numerous to mention. All you have to do is to call 212 and our representative will call and relieve you of your gifts. But we won't lose any sleep waiting up.

Speaking of generosity, a national corporation which should be buying advertising space at 25 cents per column inch, has written to us offering a weekly release on suggestions for table settings, menus, diets, recipes, etc. They write, "As an editor you of course realize the importance of such a column and will be interested to learn that it is being offered to you WITHOUT CHARGE. All we ask is a quarter-page ad announcing the column, and place us on your circulation list."

Now wasn't that nice of them? And we threw the offer right in the waste-basket.

What to write about this week is certainly a problem. Gardening is out of the question and so is swimming. If you don't believe it, just look outside.

And with the snow there seems to be nothing going but loafing. Loafing is a fine art in itself, and may be treated specially in a later issue.

I have it! Loafing brings many people together. Some tell some awful tales, same have rather interesting experiences to relate, but tell them in a most uninteresting way. And you've got to listen or rudely leave.

I will tell you how you can become a pest with a very few lessons. A lot of people can become a pest without half trying, or even without a single lesson, but lessons undoubtedly help a little.

The article was suggested by a similar one I read some time ago, I've forgotten where, but maybe if I'll dedicate this spasm to the writer, he'll forgive me for poaching.

In the first place, the symptoms are clearly defined. If, while you are gassing, those around you begin to let their eyes waver to something trivial, other than yourself, you know you are on the right track to become a pest. If they make an occasional interjection into your story which has nothing whatever to do with what you are saying, you may be doubly sure. When they start breaking into conversation with someone else, you will know you have achieved success as a real pest.

The subject really means nothing. Any subject can be made boring. One of the best ways to make yourself out a pest is to speak in a sing-song manner, leaving out commas, periods, everything except gasps for breath. Keep the voice even, like the drone of a bumble bee that is just close enough to let you know he is around.

Bring in all the useless details that detract from the main thought; go back and find even more details. Think, deeply and worry over names, dates, days, it doesn't matter which.

Keep still for 30 seconds or more until your audience is sure you have finished and just as they start to speak, continue your story.

Speak indistinctly so that the listeners will have to strain to catch every other word. If they ask you to repeat, repeat just as indistinctly.

Repeat this dose every time you stop in a gathering, or when somebody rushes in and is in a hurry. Corner him and make him listen. Before long you'll begin to see results. It never fails.

When you have reached this stage, Scoop will present without charge a beautifully embossed goatskin diploma, to signify that you are an accomplished graduate with a degree of "P. P." (perfect pest.)

It begins to look like they were going to go to shooting one another again over in Europe. As I said once before, should the war cloud ever begin to gather in this country we hope Congress will conscript the money as well as men, and when they do that you will hear the millionaires, (If there are any left) go yelling their heads off for peace. There is no argument for peace like reaching for the bank rolls of the moneyed men.

The government would have to have a mighty long arm to find anything to conscript on us.

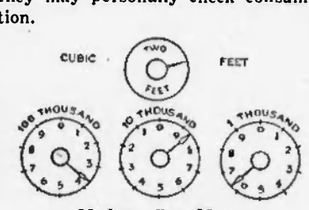
HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR MONTHLY GAS BILL

This is the last of a series of five articles describing methods of gas economy in the home. Other articles explained the adjustment of flames and burners, gas economy in cooking, boiler, furnace, water and room heater efficiency, and economic use of the oven.

Checking Gas Consumption

Many gas consumers do not know how to read their meters and it is suggested by gas company service departments that they learn so that they may personally check consumption.



Modern Gas Meter

Three dials are mostly used to record gas used. The reading starts toward the left. That dial records 100,000's of feet, the next 10,000's, and the one at the right 1,000's. A 1,000,000 foot dial at the extreme left of some meters moves so infrequently that it need not be considered.

Write down the smaller of the two figures between which the dial hand stands on the left dial. In the same manner obtain the figures from the second dial and place it after the first. Repeat with the third dial at the right. Then add two zeros, since meters do not record less than 100 cubic feet of gas consumed.

Deduct the figure you have obtained from the reading shown on the last gas bill and you will have the amount of gas consumed from the date of the last bill to the present reading.

The two-foot dial above the three larger dials has no bearing on meter readings. It is used by the gas company to check new appliances to determine if they are adjusted properly. It is also employed in determining whether there is a leak in the house piping.

Now, if you have followed directions closely and correctly, you will see that the meter above records 38,600 cubic feet of gas consumed.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The elections held in November this year seem to have resulted in something like a "dog fall" so far as partisanship politics is concerned. The Democrats lost New York City to Major LaGuardia running on a fusion ticket. The Republicans won the mayoralty contest in Cleveland, usually Democratic, and were successful in Springfield, Mass., an important New England city. But they lost in Philadelphia where a fuslonist candidate smashed the Vare machine and also in Pittsburgh where the first Democratic mayor in a generation was chosen. The Republicans gained in the New York Assembly and the Democrats gained in the New Jersey Legislature. Rather than a victory either for Republicans or Democrats, the results in most of the large cities indicated a defeat for the political machines. Since 1930 the people have been voting against the "ins" and in favor of the "outs." This is an infallible sign of public discontent, and the fact that the trend continues the same way this year indicates the public is still dissatisfied. What result this will have on the State and Congressional elections next year remains to be seen.

Perhaps the reason the results were so mixed from a partisan standpoint lies in the fact that the elections generally were fought out on local rather than national issues. The only instance where the election had a national flavor of any kind was in New York, and this was due to the fact that Postmaster General Farley, generally regarded as the political spokesman of the national administration, brought out Joseph McKee under a "Recovery" party label, in opposition to Major LaGuardia and Mayor O'Brien, the regular Democratic candidate. President Roosevelt made no statement about the election, but the fact that Farley was active in behalf of McKee gave the election a national flavor. The defeat of McKee who barely ran second, is certainly a blow to the prestige of Mr. Farley, who has been regarded as well nigh invincible politically since he became the Roosevelt manager in the pre-convention Democratic campaign in 1932. Mr. Farley gained a reputation for great political wisdom when he led the successful movement to nominate Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago. Although the election of Mr. Roosevelt was a foregone conclusion from the start, and he would have won without any National Chairman, the results added to the reputation of Mr. Farley who held that exalted political office. The result in New York is the first instance in which Mr. Farley has guessed wrong, and this error of judgment may have far-reaching results.

Already the Tammany leaders have issued a savage blast against Mr. Farley intimating that he ought to resign as Democratic State chairman of New York. In a lead editorial, full of fine sarcasm, the Democratic New York Times, which supported Major LaGuardia, suggests that Mr. Farley is too busy with the burdens of various duties and ought to step out as State chairman before the State committee removes him. Just what will develop remains to be seen. The Tammany Tiger has had his claws clipped, but is still able to do some scratching. The Republicans feel that their chances of carrying New York in 1934 have been strengthened. It has been a long time since they have had any encouraging news from the Empire State, so we can countenance their indulging in a few quiet chuckles.

But, although New York looks a little brighter to the Republicans just now, the situation in Pennsylvania is not so hot. In this G. O. P. stronghold the voters smashed the Republican machines in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The Democrats could not have done it without the aid of Republican votes, any more than Major LaGuardia in New York could have been elected without Democratic votes. The Republican ballots which helped Democratic plans in Pennsylvania were furnished by the faction of which Governor Pinchot is the head. Governor Pinchot is credited with ambitions to run for the Senate next year against Senator Reed. Here is a chance for plenty of trouble, and a widening of factional lines. However, as in the case of New York where the Democrats are in the worrying seat, it is impossible to predict very far in advance. The political situation has a way of changing over night, and the present liquid state of affairs generally is not conducive to political stabilization.

The Flowers Count!

We have often received compliments on the care we give to the floral offerings at funerals. While this detail is sometimes neglected as unimportant, we feel that it is a duty we owe not only to the dead but to the surviving friends who have made sacrifices to provide this beautiful tribute of affection. For this reason we have purchased special equipment for arranging the flowers in the most attractive manner possible, and give the matter the most careful attention.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

There is some indication that we may yet have raised in the United States the issue of the "free press." The basis of the issue is, of course, the much discussed code for the American newspaper under the NRA. Many newspaper publishers have been insisting that there be placed in the code a clause safeguarding the right of the editor to express his own free opinions without interference by the government. Some of the administration representatives helping to promulgate the code had replied that such a clause is unnecessary because the freedom of the press is guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States.

To this has come the inevitable reply that since things are now being done which seem to stretch some of the provisions of the Constitution, and if the clause of a free press is unnecessary, it is certainly not harmful, and that it ought to be agreed to. The very fact that there is some opposition to the insertion of a clause on the subject of freedom of the press has in itself given rise to suspicion, whether well founded or not, that there is a "nigger in the woodpile" somewhere and that some newspaper at a date in the future might find itself deprived of its right to operat, if those in charge of the code did not like the editorial policy of the paper. Licensing of radio stations, it is pointed out, has not had a tendency to increase the freedom and independence of the broadcasting companies.

One of those predicting "freedom of the press" as an issue in 1934 snd 1936 was former Senator Watson, of Indiana, who declared reeently in an interview in Chicago that the question would be whether or not the government could attempt to impose wartime regulations upon public discussion in time of peace.

"While the press has not been very friendly to me at times," the former Senator said, "in my judgment a vigorous attempt on the part of the government to censor editorial comment would lead straight to revolution."

He said the depression has left the people of America in a daze and that they are willing to try almost anything as an expedient, but that they would not consent to any attempt to abridge their right to speak out their sincere convictions.

"At no time in the history of this country, as I see it," he said, "was an absolutely unfettered press so indispensable as right now."

He said the "talk about newspapers being 'disloyal' and unpatriotic' at this time is all poppycock."

He added there were times when he felt like curbing one or two newspapers, but that he had the remedy of the libel laws if he had cared to use them.

"When I hear people talking about 'unrestrained license of the press,'" he said, "I know they are talking through their hats. It is just as unlawful for a newspaper to utter a libel as it is for any citizen. We ought to be done with the sophistry that criticism, based on ressoned judgment, is a libel or an unpatriotic thing."

Senator Watson said he believed Washington was making some grievous mistakes and that "they probably will make some more."

"And I propose," he added, "like every other citizen to say what I honestly think. And if I know anything at all about the editors of this country * * * there will be many of them laying it on the experimenters in Washington pretty heavily before many moons."

Anyhow, it can be said in passing, that those who feared there might be a dearth in the issues of the next campaign, can now cease their worrying. The campaigns of 1934 and 1936 promise to have as many issues as would ordinarily supply half a dozen campaigns.

One thing which is not conducive to the popularity of any administration is a lot of official inspectors going over the country looking at everybody's books.

Red Cross Poster of 1933 Appeals for Help for Needy

THE NEW PLAGUE

Ever since discussion of the NRA put the "boycotting" idea into the headlines, life the world over seems to have been one boycott after another. Of course it is not a new disease.

Appearing in America with a few attempted isolated cases of boycotts against those who failed to display the blue eagle, the plague became evident throughout the world.

Germany began her boycott against the Jews within her borders. The American Jews launched their boycott against Germany, and Americans of German birth began to retaliate by quietly but systematically boycotting the Jewish concerns of the United States.

The American Federation of Labor then announced at its recent national convention that it would boycott China, Russia, Italy and Germany because those nations have sounded the death knell of freely organized labor unions. The White Russians in the United States, of which there are hundreds of thousands, have announced that they will boycott Soviet Russia, American banks financing Soviet Russia or its trade, and firms purchasing Russian goods for sale in the United States. And Soviet Russia has boycotted Christ and His teachings.

The radical Milo Reno farm movement has announced a boycott on the American market until farm prices are raised. China has boycotted Japanese products, as has Russia, and to top the story off, the United States-government has in effect "boycotted" the Ford Motor Company, preventing the various governmental departments from placing orders with that firm because it does not fly the blue eagle, although it claims to be living up to or beyond the requirements of the automobile code as to wages and hours of labor.

If the plague is to continue Its devastating march, about all that remains now is for those who have not yet been affected by these actions to boycott one another. Then all of the wheels of progress will be at a standstill and we can go down for the third time with a scowl on our faces and resentment in our hearts.

THE RETAIL CODE

The much discussed and debated NRA code affecting the retail stores of America has been completed and signed by the President. Just how well it will work remains to be seen. It is designed to eliminate price cutting and cut-throat competition, and just how effective it will be along this line remains for the future to determine. There was a great deal of difference of opinion concerning the "sales at a loss" prohibition in the code. This prohibiting the practice of selling goods at a loss was designed to do away with the custom of certain stores in advertising a commodity on a particular day at a greatly reduced price in order to attract customers into the stores. It was first proposed that no article be sold at less than ten per cent above cost.

Groups representing farmers and other customers objected so strongly to this that the completion of the code was held up for several weeks while a compromise was sought. This compromise provides that goods cannot be sold at less than invoice price plus an allowance for store wages. Stores in towns of less than 2,500 persons were exempted from the provisions of the act. This is regarded as a further concession to the farmers.

It may not be favorably received by the National Retail Dry Goods Association which recently declared that unless the ten per cent mark-up value was included hundreds of retailers would fail within the next few months. On the other hand, those representing consumers claimed that the provision of a minimum selling price of cost, plus ten per cent, would make prices higher and thus discourage rather than encourage buying.

Now that the code has been adopted and merchants are prohibited from selling merchandise less than cost plus allowance for wages, it remains to be seen just how well the plan will work. Price fixing has been tried since the days of Diocletian back in the Roman Empire and has never been a complete success. The laws of supply and demand have to be tsken into consideration.

It is to be remembered, however, that the new code provides against profiteering as well as price cutting. And a point to be taken into consideration in these provisions is that of the enforcement of the provision for equitable prices. Who is going to determine whether a merchant is living up to the provision of the code against illegal price cutting, or illegal price gouging? Who will see to it that a particular article is not sold below cost plus an allowance for employes' wages? Does this mean the coming of another army of federal inspectors, checkers and double checkers, or does it mean a case of permitting the merchant's conscience to be his guide? Only time alone can tell.

In the mesntime the proponents of the code remind us that this is only one part of the scheme of planned reeovery for the depression and that we must view the plan as a whole to see how it works. We will all hope that it works well.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The public schools of the county had just opened for the school year.

Republicans of the county celebrated their victory at the polls early in the month with a torchlight procession in Oakland. Dr. Henry W. McComas was chief marshal.

Owing to the work connected with the removal of The Republican plant from its original quarters on Liberty street to the new building, which had just been completed, a paper was not issued that week.

F. H. Sharpless sold his grocery store to W. H. Malettte.

A lodge of the Jr. O. U. A. M. was organized at Accident, which was the seventh council of the fraternity to be organized in Garrett county.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

A regular mid-winter snow storm visited the county, blocking roads and breaking down telephone lines.

Baltimore citizens were talking of securing a giant Christmas tree from Garrett county for its annual municipal celebration.

Price for turkeys for Thanksgiving was expected to be 25 cents per lb.

While on their way from Accident to Oakland to place his wife on a train for Baltimore, in which city she was to become a patient in one of the hospitals, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Speicher were caught in a snowstorm on the State road. Mrs. Speicher remained in the car until her husband could procure a horse and sled by which to continue their journey. A delay of several hours resulted before their arrival here. Mr. and Mrs. Speicher were accompanied on the joruney from Accident to Oakland by Henry M. Speicher and Dr. W. Ravenscroft.

A basketball team was organized in Oakland and a hall for the play was fitted up in the First National Bank building.

W. A. Smith, living at Hoyes, only eighteen miles from Oakland, was compelled to travel 160 miles to reach his home, going from here via Cumberland, Confluence and Friendsville by rail and from thence overland by team to his home. The roads were completely blocked by snow and a blizzard was raging in all this section of country.

"Too Unanimous"

In "The Great Game of Politics" column, written by Frank R. Kent and printed in the Baltimore Sun of last Friday, Mr. Kent lays the lash on Postmaster-General Farley for the part he took in the recent New York City election. Mr. Kent's pen, always vitriolic when he lambasts those in public life, was exteremly so upon this occasion, when he, so to speak, laid the Posmaster-General over his editorial knee and gave him a drubbing that he will likely remember for a long time.

Writing from Washington to his paper, Mr. Kent said:

"Following the New York election it is astonishing how many people appear to derive pleasure from the fact that the urban and expansive Mr. Farley, Postmaster-General, National Chairman, State Chairman, patronage distributor and political strategist for the Roosevelt Administration, had, as they say in certain circles, 'taken it on the chin'—in other words, been slammed good and hard.

"There was once a rheumatic old gentleman in Maryland, who, slapped on the back in the club by a buoyant youth flushed with success at the races and generally full of himself, made a trenchant remark, 'Young man,' he said, 'the trouble with you is that you are just too damn unanimous.' There had begun to be something of that feeling on the part of the public about Mr. Farley. He slapped it on the back too often when it ached with pain. He was a bit too jolly and sunny. He rushed hither and yon, too often, letting people know his soul yearned for their good, snd indicating what they should do to be saved—often quite unnecessarily—as witness his telegram exhorting the people of Maryland to do their duty in voting for repeal—Maryland, a State which was for repeal when Mr. Farley still thought of the word in terms of bananas.

"He made speeches all over the place. He ardently advocated purity in politics. He played poker in the air over Texas, he preached the Administration program in Tennessee and he expressed faith in the wetness of North and South Carolina. Every now and then rumblings of resentment were heard over the wideness of the Farley swath, but so triumphant was his progress that these were largely unnoticed, and he has had a perfectly splendid press, under cover of which he got away with a great deal.

"But when he sponsored the McKee candidacy in New York, involved the Roosevelt Administration up to its neck in a local fight, put himself and the Federal machine into the fray—when he did all this in the name of good government and pure politics, he made a mistake. What a lot of people saw in this noble effort was the possible emergence of the Hon. Mr. Farley as the supreme political boss of the country, controlling, through his closeness to the President of the United States, the Governor of New York and the Mayor of the city, patronage in undreamed-of quantity, a wielder of unprecedented power. Some suspected, too, a Farleyish ambition to become Governor in 1936—in fact, that idea appeared in print conspicuously at the start, and was never wholly obscured by the argument that a vote against McKee was a vote against Roosevelt.

"Altogther Mr. Farley injected into the New York campaign a lot of issues and ideas that should not have been in it. He mussed up a clear-cut anti-Tammany fight and took a pretty bad tumble. Slapped on the back by the genial Farley and told to 'go to it', the people of New York, in effect, said, 'Young man, the trouble with you is you are too damn unanimous.' It is rather a pity, too, because Mr. Farley is a pleasant, likable fellow, with a good heart, and well adapted to the practical politics in which he has been steeped for years. However, it is a big step up to take in fifteen months—from State Boxing Commissioner to the Cabinet, from State Chairman to National Chairman, from local obscurity to country-wide promience. It is the sort of step that has made others in Washington besides Mr. Farley a little dizzy.

"As a result of his mistake, the Roosevelt Administration has suffered some in political prestige just at a time when it needed all it has to sustain its program against opposition and in the face of the incoming Congress. Others of the President's intimate friends, following the Farley lead, publicly proclaimed that a McKee victory would be a sign of approval of the Roosevelt Administration—a repudiation of opponents of its policies. All of this, plus the adoption by the McKee managers of the name 'Recovery party,' gave the election a national significance it should never have had. It is a very safe bet that the Administration will not take part in another local fight—not through General Farley, anyhow.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

SAINT MARK

Mark, the son of Mary of Jerusalem, was a relative of Barnabas. He was associated with Barnabas and Paul on their first missionary journey. He is also known in the Acts of the Apostles as John Mark.

This Gospel portrays Jesus as the Wonderful, dwelling more upon the things He did than upon the things He said. Mark omits the Sermon on the Mount and most of the long discourses of Jesus. He dwells especially on the miracles, showing Jesus' wonderful power. Mark's record is occupied mostly with the Galilean Ministry and our Lord's last week on earth.

Mark was not a personal associate of Jesus Christ, and it is commonly accepted that he never heard Him speak. Later, however, he attached himself to Peter, and wrote down accurately all that Peter said concerning the mighty works of Jesus. One Papias, a contemporary of the Apostle John, stated in a writing made while John was still alive, that he had inquired diligently of the elders and followers of the Elders as to Mark's place in the authorship of the Gospels. The result of this inquiry was his conviction that Mark received all of his knowledge of Jesus from the preaching and teaching of Peter.

This Gospel was written with the Roman or Gentile Christian in mind. It contains few references to Old Testament prophecy, and for that reason alone was not especially adapted to Jewish readers. Furthermore, the explanation of Jewish words and customs would indicate that the author had forcigners in mind when he wrote.

The main theme of Mark's Gospel may be stated as: "Christ, the Tireless Servant of God and Man." The life of Jesus is portrayed as crowded with benevolent deeds. His devotions are interrupted by clamors for help. He has not leisure to eat. His life revealed such frenzied activity that his friends said he was unbalanced. The people pursued him when He sought rest: Mark 6:31-33. "And He said unto them (the Apostle), Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile," for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat. And they departed into a desert place by ship privately. And the people saw them departing, and many knew Him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities and outwent them, and come together unto Him. And Jesus, when He came out saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep without a shepherd, and He began to teach them many things."

Among the distinctive features of this Gospel may be noted the following: It is the shortest of the four Gospels; the style is vivid and picturesque. Much of the subject matter is found also in Matthew and Luke, but it is not a mere repetition, for it contains many details not found in either of the others. It opens, like John's Gospel, with a declaration of the divinity of Jesus Christ, but does not enlarge upon this doctrine. His faith requires only the simple statement of what to him is obviously true. However, a careful study of the book reveals the fact that the author's aim is to let the wonderful works of Jesus testify to His deity, rather than frequent repetitions of the writer.

Nineteen miracles, demonstrating the supernatural power of the Master, are recorded in this short book. With this brief synopsis in mind, go to your New Testament and re-read the wonderful Gospel of Mark.

RED CROSS RELIEF AIDS DISTRESSED IN 120 DISASTERS

The American Red Cross has reached into the homes of six million families in the past year with unemployment and disaster relief, Chairman John Barto Payne announced.

"As the year closed the organization continued in readiness to serve in the forthcoming winter at the point of greatest need and to adjust its service to meet the calls of the emergency of unemployment and disaster," Chairman Payne stated.

In a year of greatest economic distress in the nation's history, in which the Red Cross ably discharged a relief task in distributing flour and clothing to distressed families in all but six of the nation's 3,098 counties, the organization also was called into action in 120 disasters, of which 96 were within the borders of the United States.

Earthquake, floods, hurricanes, fires and other cataclysms visited death and destruction upon the lives and homes of thousands of people. Red Cross statistics showed that in the 120 disasters almost a thousand lives were lost, 148,340 homes were destroyed or damaged, 13,275 persons were injured, and Red Cross relief was given to 452,879 individuals.

In giving aid in these disasters, in its unemployment relief and in handling the distribution of government wheat and cotton, the Red Cross expended from its national treasury the sum of $1,070,284.

During one period of twelve weeks, 46 disasters occurred in 23 states. Red Cross disaster workers were hard pressed in meeting all of these needs occurring at once, but everywhere misery was promptly relieved.

Support of the Red Cross work is through its annual roll call, conducted by chapters in the period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, November 11 to November 30. Every citizen who joins the Red Cross as a member aids in carrying relief to disaster victims and in other Red Cross services, such as preservation of life, child welfare through the Junior Red Cross, and direct service for the public health.

FIGHT AGAINST "PRINCE" PLAN BECOMING NATIONAL

New Idea Would Reroute B. & O. Freight Over Pennsylvania Road

The fight against the Prince Plan, which would reroute freight from the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to the Pennsylvania, is becoming nation-wide, as a result of the number of men it would put out of employment, the number of towns it would practically ruin, and the loss of taxes to cities, counties and states.

According to reports from all along the Baltimore and Ohio right of way, there will be stiff opposition to the plan. In Ohio and Indiana, several towns depending on the Baltimore and Ohio have seen their administrations adopt resolutions demanding that the Interstate Commerce commission reject for all time any plan which has for its purpose the taking of freight traffic from the Baltimore and Ohio.

Cumberland is fighting the plan as it would cause untold hardships in the business and family life of thousands, by the elimination of $200,000 monthly in payrolls alone.

The Prince Plan distinctly says, " . . . . all through passenger service between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Chicago, St. Louis and other middle west cities operated by the B. and O. will be withdrawn and travel accommodated on existing Pennsylvania schedules. The entire B. and O. heavy coal carrying lines between Pittsburgh and Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia would be reduced to the status of a single track branch line.".

Congressman Lewis stated the problem was how to conserve labor, not to destroy it.

The Baltimore and Ohio employs approximately 75 men in and around Oakland, and more than three hundred would be affected should any such plan be adopted in the future.

DIED.

WILLIAM CALLIS

William Callis died at his home at Hoyes early Saturday morning, November 11th, aged 76 years, 2 months and 16 days. Funeral services were conducted in the Hoyes M. E. church on Monday afternoon by Rev. H. E. Sumner, pastor of the church and of which church the deceased had been a devoted member for forty-seven years.

Mr. Callis was born at Mount Savage, Md., August 26, 1857, being a son of the late Edward and Hannah Callis. About the year 1860 his father moved to a farm near Glade Farms, W. Va., where the remainder of his boyhood and early manhood was spent. His ancestors for generations had been ironworkers, so in his twentieth year he could not resist the desire to hear the clang of metal and decided to learn blacksmithing. He went to Hazelton, W. Va., and apprenticed himself for three years to Levi P. Miller, a widely known smith and under whose instructions he became highly skilled in his trade.

In the year 1880 he established himself in the blacksmithing business at Hoyes, Md., which business was successfully carried on for thirty years. During twenty years of this time he was associated with W. A. Smith in the mercantile business under the familiar trade name of Smith & Callis. The remainder of his life he engaged in farming on what has been known for many years as the Ferguson farm being actively engaged until very shortly before his death.

He was married on January 31, 1881, to Caroline Deahl, daughter of the late Jack and Rhoda Deahl, of Hazelton, W. Va., and to this union were born the following children, all of whom survive: Mrs. Blanche White, New Martinsville, W. Va.; Charles B. Callis, Cumberland, Md.; Mrs. Dessa Harvey, Aurora, W. Va.; Burton E. Callis, Bessemer City, N. C.; Mrs. Lula Schlossnagle, Uniontown, Pa.; Mrs. Mary Feather, Kingwood, W. Va. He is also survived by his wife, Mrs. Caroline Deahl Callis, Hoyes, and by two brothers, Lincoln Callis, Mountain Lake Park, and Frank Callis, Accident, and by seventeen grandchildren.

WILLIAM LOUGHRIDGE

Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at Fellowsville for William Loughridge, 93, who served two years and seven months in the Union army in the Civil War. Burial was at the Old Mountain church.

Mr. Loughridge is survived by two sons and one daughter. During the last nine years his voice left him and returned 50 times. He kept a diary up until the time of his death and in it recorded the day and hour that each time his voice left and each time it returned. Sometimes he would be unable to speak for a few hours and other times for two or three months.

Mr. Loughridge was a brother of the late George W. Loughridge, of Oakland, and was an uncle of Mrs. Nettie Thrasher and Miss Beulah Loughridge.

Maryland Behind in Its Road Construction Program

Secretary Harold L. Ickes made public a letter to Governor Albert C. Ritchie, again calling on the executive to speed up work on its public roads program.

The letter said that of Maryland's allotment of $3,564,527 available since last July, only $834,000 was represented in contracts awarded up to November 8, which is only 23.4 per cent of the total. Similar letters were sent to governors of nine other States which were said to be lagging behind in their roads program.

The letter to the Maryland Governor further stated that it appeared that the amount of the allotment which has reached the stage where bids were requested was likewise low.

Public is Urged to Shop and Mail Early for Christmas

Anticipating a greatly increased volume of business during the Christmas season, Postmaster Lawrence M. Fraley is asking that preparations be made now or soon for Christmas mailing a packages.

During the holiday time the volume of mail increases approximately 200 per cent, he stated, and to assure delivery of Christmas presents, cards and letters by Christmas Day, the public is urged to shop and mail early. There will be no delivery on Christmas day, which falls on Monday this year.

It is said that a processing tax of two cents a pound on live hogs will raise the price of pork chops thirty per cent, and this time it will be the consumers who will do the squealing.

HEALTHMOBILE TRAVELS FAR; VISITS 85 PLACES

Covers 1,400 Miles—Eighty-nine Conferences Are Held

After its tour of the counties in Southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore, the healthmobile of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health has been dismantled and put away for the winter. Starting out just before the Fourth of July, and remaining in the field until the middle of September, the health bus covered more than 1,400 miles.

Seven counties were visited—St. Mary's Charles, Calvert, Prince George's, Kent, Queen Anne's and Somerset. Stops were made in accordance with plans arranged by the county health officers, at conveniently accessible places along the way. During the eleven weeks of the tour, 85 places were visited, 89 health conferences were held for the examination of babies and children under school age; and 1,589 children were examined an average of 29 or 30 each day.

As soon as a stopping place was reached, the big car was parked; the curtains attached to the side were stretched out to form dressing rooms; the steps leading up to the body of the car, which serves as the examining room, were adjusted, the scales used in weighing the children, and the supplies needed by the doctor, were put in their proper places; the dental chair and the equipment used by the dentist in examining the children's teeth were brought out on the green—and everything was in readiness for the mothers and children.

The staff of the health bus included a doctor, a dentist, the public health nurse of the county visited, and the driver of the car. Of the children examined, 1,137 needed follow-up care of some sort. Approximately one out of every seven—216—was underweight; 142 had unhealthy tonsils; 41 were "mouth breathers." Of the total number in attendance, 1,341 had a dental examination, and 767 were treated by the dentist.

There were 614 children from five to seven years old examined in preparation for their admission to school. Vaccination against smallpox had been neglected for 334—more than half of them—and the parents were notified that they would have to be vaccinated before they could be received at any public school in the State. When medical treatments were needed, the mothers were directed to take their children to their family doctor.

BUYING OF T. B. SEALS IS WORTHWHILE INVESTMENT

Money From Sale Is Used For Prevention and Cure of Disease

Beginning on Thanksgiving Day an opportunity will be given to every Marylander to make an investment—even if it is only a very small sum—in an undertaking that has been carried on for a number of years and that has yielded worthwhile returns to all who have been in any way interested in it. The sale will continue until the close of the Christmas season and will be conducted by the Maryland Tuberculosis Association. It will be the annual sale of the tuberculosis Christmas seals.

Thirty years ago, in far-away Denmark, a postal clerk working away at his job had a flash of inspiration. Money was urgently needed for a hospital for children who had tuberculosis. How could it be raised. He glanced at a letter in his hand. There was the solution of the problem. Stamps were used to finance the postal service: for revenue; why not have a special issue to build the hospital? Christmas stamps—or "seals", as we call them! Everybody buying some. Costing so little that everybody could help. The Danish government saw it as he did. So did the Danish people.

Of course the idea spread. And since then millions, billions, even trillions of the little stickers have been sold thruout the world for the benefit of hospitals, clinics, dispensaries and sanatoria for those suffering from tuberculosis, or to aid in the care of others who were sick or handicapped in some other way.

The money derived from the sale of the Christmas seals in Maryland is used toward the support of the tuberculosis clinics in the counties, for medical and nursing service, for the maintenance of the "Miracle House" at Calirborne for children threatened with the disease and for the support of the educational activities carried on by the Association.

In reminding Marylanders of the chance they have to help in the fight against tuberculosis, through the purchase of the Christmas seals, Dr. R. R. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said, "Practically every activity in public health is a partnership concern. This is particularly true of the organized warfare against tuberculosis. It is not a one-man fight. It is every man's fight. Everyone of us has a responsibility towards it, and enn share in it.

"In tuberculosis, as in other diseases that are spread from person to person, what we are striving for is to PREVENT the disease, or, if it has already gotten a foothold, to check it while it is in its early stages. Thirty years ago, one death in every seven in Maryland was due to tuberculosis. Lesss than half as many deaths occur now from tuberculosis, in proportion to population, than at that time. Now, about one death in every fourteen is caused by that disease. So you see we are making progress, but we still have a hard fight ahead of us.

"The Christmas seals cost only a penny apiece. Every penny spent for them helps in the battle we are fighting together.

Cheap Fruit Desserts for Winter

Let us turn once more to the lowest weekly market list suggested by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is a list of foods for an "adequate diet at minimum cost," or balanced supplies for 7 days' meals. It includes milk and cheese; bread and cereals; vegetables and fruits; fats; sugar; meats, fish and eggs. Let's talk of fruits this time. That leads, first off, to apples, which are more or less in season all the year, but especially in the fall and winter. In most places, too, apples are cheap. Dried fruits, however, are usually the cheapest fruits of all—especially raisins, prunes, peaches and apricots, besides dried apples. In this food budget for a family of five there are 1½ pounds of dried fruit and about 3½ pounds of other fruit, fresh or canned. Drawing from the cheapest fruits of their kind, what can you do with these quantities for one week's meals? The answer will depend upon what the family likes, but let us try them on prunes. The best "buy" in prunes, that is, the most prune meat for the money—is usually the smaller prunes which also cost less per pound than the larger ones. Half a pound, then, say 70 to 80 prunes, would make 6 or 8 prunes for each member of the family if stewed for dessert. Of course there are other ways of using prunes which some people find more interesting. Spiced prunes, for instance; or scalloped prunes; or, if you have the eggs, prune whip. If you don't want prunes for dessert you can use them in salad, stuffed with cottage cheese and a peanut apiece in place of the prune pit.

Raisins are cheap, and they go a long way in desserts. Rice and raisin pudding, suet pudding, raisin cookies or cakes, raisin muffins, raisins with your cereal for breakfast—all these are tempting uses of a nutritious fruit.

Scalloped Apples

Pare, core and slice tart apples of a kind that will hold their shape when cooked. Place a layer of the sliced apples in a baking dish, sprinkle with sugar and dot with butter. Put in another layer of apples and press down, add more seasoning and keep on until the dish is heaping full. Cover the dish and cook the apples slowly for from 1 to 1½ hours in a moderate oven. Fifteen minutes before the apples are to be served, remove the cover and spread buttered bread crumbs over the top. Return to the oven and let the crumbs become golden brown and crisp. The apples will be in whole pieces, almost transparent, and some kinds will be pink in color. Scalloped apples are good served hot with the main course of dinner or supper.

Apple Sauce Shortcake

Make biscuit dough, with added fat and a little sugar. Bake in a sheet or in biscuit size, split and butter while hot. Make a thick apple sauce and just before serving spread between and over the hot shortcake.

Prune Molasses Cookies

Two cups prunes, 1 cup shortening, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup white sugar, 3 eggs, ½ cup molasses, ¾ cup milk, 5½ cups flour (all purpose), 8 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ cup chopped nut kernels. Boil prunes 20 minutes, drain, remove pits and cut in small pieces. Cream shortening with sugars, add well-heaten eggs, molasses, milk and mix thoroughly. Combine with flour sifted with baking powder, soda, salt ami spices. Beat well, add prunes, nutmeats and blend together. Drop by spoonfuls onto greased pan and bake about 12 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.).

Prune Muffins.

One cup prunes, 1 egg, 3 tablespoons granulated sugar, 3 tahlespoons melted shortening, 4 teaspoons haking powder, 1 cup milk, 2¼ cups flour (all purpose), ½ teaspoon salt. Boil prunes, in water to cover, for 10 minutes, drain, remove pits and cut prunes into pieces. Beat egg, add sugar, the shortening, milk and when well mixed combine with flour sifted with baking powder and salt. Add prunes and beat just enough to mix. Pour into greased muffin pans and bake about 25 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F.).

Uncle Sam Links Farm to Factory

AN EXPERIMENT IN EMPLOYMENT GETS UNDER WAY IN WEST VIRGINIA

FRED GRAHAM

(Baltimore Sunday Sun, November 5)

High up in that section of Preston county, West Virginia, known to natives of the State as the tableland, Uncle Sam has just undertaken another great social experiment of far-reaching purpose. One thousand and ten of the fairest and fattest acres of Preston county were bought outright as the first step in a program that has as its objective a demonstration of how industry can be decentralized so as to afford relief to crowded urban centers and to transfer unemployed from the breadline to a small acreage where, with the cooperation of nature, government and some of the smaller wheels of industry, he may become self-supporting. It is the first of the Government's so-called subsistence farms.

The launching was an extremely quiet affair, both in an absolute sense and in comparison with the send-offs given to other phases of the recovery program. No ballyhoo worthy the name was turned loose; indeed, the magicians even neglected to label the project with any title other than the full words, Subsistence Farms.

But, ballyhoo or no ballyhoo. it is an impressive laboratory that the Government is using for its experiment in subsistence farming. Located atop a mountain range in a section famous in West Virginia for its many fine farms is Arthurdale, 1,010 acres of roling meadows, farmland and woodland. Originally the farm was the estate of Col. John Fairfax, relative of Lord Fairfax and intimate of Gen. George Washington, and was a great deal larger than it is now.

For the last thirty-odd years it has been the property of R. M. Arthur, gentleman farmer, who in late years, like many another farmer, dirt or gentleman, has found that farming is an expensive business. At various times since the sharp decline of farm values Mr. Arthur has been approached by buyers who sought to obtain some of the best parts of Arthurdale, but he refused to cut the estate into small farms, confident that one day a buyer who wanted the farm in its entirety would come along. Evidently Mr. Arthur had the right idea.

Today the old farm is a beehive of activity. Surveyors, map-makers, geologists, soil experts and various other Government technicians and suboffi-cials scurry from place to place in a fever of excitement. The Arthurs still occupy the ambling twenty-two room house and seem to be noticeably less excited and a great deal more composed than the small army of workers busy with the Government's latest polities-sociological experiment. Mrs. Arthur, who seems least affected by the charged atmosphere, did express a little surprise that officials of the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture " . . used that telephone right here in the kitchen to call the White House twice in less than twenty minutes—just as you'd call Reedsville!"

According to Government plans, Arthurdale is to be divided into 290 homesteads of from 1 to 1½ acres each and twelve homesteads of from 2½ to 3 acres each. A house costing approximately $2,000 and boasting of a cellar, electricity and running water, all rarities to the people who occupy it, will be erected on each homestead. Landscape gardeners will do their best to make the ground surrounding the houses attractive.

Besides the homesteads there is to be a 140-acre community farm and a 50-acre dairy farm. A school and several playgrounds for children will be built and there is to be at least one park. More than seven miles of hard surfaced roads will connect all parts of the farm when the work is completed.

About half a mile from the main group of houses will be located the part of the subsistence-farming that seems most important and also most doubtful. A factory, built with Government funds by the men who will live on the farm, will be erected for the manufacturing of heavy, brown twine used in postoffices, and as this will affect only manufacturers in Japan and China there should be no reason for complaint by industry at home. It is also made clear that private industry has been invited to locate there. This, indeed, is to be the mainstay of the whole program, for it hoped that enough work can be given the subsistence farmers in the factory to make them, with the aid of their own gardens, the community garden, and the dairy farm, self-supporting.

The government of the model community, according to present plans, is to be along the lines of the New England town-meeting, but should the people show a preference for some other form of local goverment, no obstacles will be placd in their way by the Federal Government. A majority of the public social functions of a public nature will be centered in the schoolhouse.

The people who are to live in the model village are to be chosen from among the unemployed miners of Preston and Monogalia counties. Many of them have been without work for several years, and some, it is said, have been without steady employment since the coal strikes of the early 1920's.

The present habitations of these unfortunates are usually grouped pitifully around the tipple of an abandoned mine, resting indiffently on props or perched precariously on the side of a mountain. Most of them are shabby, boxlike things of rough weatherboards or slabs from the sawmill. One door and one or two windows take care of the ventilation problem, and if they sometimes prove inadequate during the hot months, they are often too much when winters sets in. The sight of a dozen skinny, ragged, unwashed children around the door of a single shack is not remarkable.

In many cases the ground surrounding the miners' shacks is not capable of producing even a vegetable garden. Cows are almost as rare, and certainly as unfailing marks of position as they once were in Russia. The main part of the meagre living of these people, needless to say, is direct charity.

It is people such as these who are to be given new houses and gardens —and employment. Houses with windows and doors and cellars, and electricity and running water. Yards with trees and shrubs and flowers and gardens with fresh vegetables. It is no wonder that many of the miners do not believe the subsistence farm will materialize.

The occupants will be expected to pay for their house and farm in small payments stretching over a period of twenty years. After payment is made they will be stockholders in the community. During the twenty-year period they will pay no taxes, the project being under Government control up to that point. But after that time the community will again contribute the taxes to county and State expenses. When asked what would be done in the event a family decided to move elsewhere after living, say, eight or ten years on the subsistence farm, it was explained that the family would be allowed the full amount it had paid and the plot would be turned over to another family to take up on the same basis.

Arguments for subsistence farming as a means of relief won from Congress during the last session a $25,-000,000 appropriation. Individuals so far apart in personal philosophies of life as Henry Ford and Bernarr McFadden, high-priest of the bone-and-muscle worshippers, evidently have seen eye to eye in the matter and have for some time raised their voices, along with many others, in a curious chorus of indorsement. The idea has been tried by Ford. Many of his employes spend the greater part of the summer, the slack season in the automobile industry, tending their gardens, and the winter months in Mr. Ford's factory earning money to buy those things they cannot raise on their little plots of ground. It is the same idea that is to be tried in West Virginia.

Less practical advocates have shrilled the idyllic features of settling industry's labor surplus on the fat, plentiful acres of the land. What, it has been asked repeatedly, could be more certain than that strong, willing men with a fully developed sense of social responsibility, who can find no gainful employment in a dislocated society, would welcome the opportunity to turn to the soil and earn a living by the sweat of their brows and the ache of their muscles.

Back in the 1880's there was a considerable hubbub for farms for all. At that time it was pretty generally agreed that Uncle Sam was rich enough to give a farm to everybody who wanted one. And though that movement was driven by a power different in many respects from the present one, it was, nevertheless, founded on the same premise: that the Federal Government ought to lend a hand to every man, woman and child who wants to become self-supporting and independent. Almost anyone who wished for 160 acres of land could get it by agreeing to work it.

The new plan to return men to the soil is radically different from the old plan which was based on the idea that a man with 160 acres of wilderness ought to be self-supporting and independent in a substantial, if not an exactly stylish manner. The present plan would put the unemployed on small tracts of land where they can augment direct wages from industry with farming for personal consumption. At the very outset of the present plan it is realized that other sources of revenue must be tapped if a decent American standard of living is to be reached and maintained. And it is with those "other sources" that the Government looks for its hardest fight.

The work at Arthurdale goes on. By Thanksgiving Day, it is hoped, fifty of the two hundred families will be occupying their new homes.

Twenty-five erstwhile West Virginia coal miners, proved to be potential farmers by tests, were definitely picked at the White House last Saturday as the pioneers on the first Federal farm-factory project at Reedsville, West Va.

Bushrod Grimes, former West Virginia University professor in charge of the project, arranged for medical tests of the farmers at Morgantown to be made on Monday, proceed immediately to the project and start breaking ground for their homes on Tuesday.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosvelt was one of the group who decided the final details in the office of Louis Howe, secretary to the President.

"It will be a tough winter for them," said Grimes, in explaining why the 25 had been sifted from 800 applicants on a basis of fitness for the job, rather than being picked from the relief rolls on a basis of direct need.

"First each applicant was given a test that took 45 minutes to go through," said Grimes. "Then came simple tests to discover their agricultural background.,

"We had a plaster cow in the testing room, and we took them up to it and asked which side to milk it on. We had plates filled with 16 kinds of garden seeds, lettuce, onion, celery, parsnips and pictures of the vegetables cut from the catalogues. They were to put the right picture on its plate of seeds. We asked simple questions on poultry—pointing to a Plymouth Rock hen and a Plymouth Rock rooster we asked which would lay the most eggs.

"Those who passed this test took a more technical one. For instance, they were shown a number of hens and were asked which one had been laying the most eggs. A poultry man can tell the difference between the liars and the layers.

Homes are Visited

"Then came a final test of education, physical fitness, attitudes and ambitions, and agricultural ability.

"The homes of those with high ratings were visited, and the women of the family interviewed. Some women said they wouldn't go back to the farm and that ruled the family out. In some families, tuberculosis was found, and they couldn't go up into the winter snows, of course."

Grimes said the families finally chosen were found, with a very few exceptions, to be native West Virginians who once had been farm families, but had been drawn into the coal mines by the high wages paid at one time.

BITTINGER

During the entire week the weather in this section was decidedly wintery. The week began with a heavy sleet ice, which clung to the trees for two or three days, then there came rain, which quickly turned to snow and by the end of the week the drifts of snow in the roads were sufficiently deep to hinder travel. The temperature remained between twenty and thirty all week and most all farm activities were suspended.

On Wednesday of last week the County Demonstration agent, Miss Burtis, Oakland, and Miss Mason, of the State Extension service, came to this village and met a group of more than thirty ladies, members of the Bittinger and Grantsville Homemaker clubs, in the Lutheran parsonage, and discussed the making of rugs. The demonstration was a thorough one and lasted the entire day.

Messrs. Charles Wiley and Lawrence Brenneman returned from a brief visit to Baltimore and Reisterstown last Thursday afternoon.

W. E. Buckle, who is employed in the C. C. C. camp, No. 60, at Bond, spent the week-end with his family here.

George Stark, a farmer residing near this village, captured a large mink one night last week after the animal had killed a large turkey and a number of chickens on his farm.

Elmer Wiley left his home here a few days ago for Uniontown, Pa., where he will be employed in a coal mine.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Buckle motored to Oakland on business last Saturday.

The following named pupils were present every day during the last month, according to the records of the village school: Harry Brenneman, David Buckle, Alma Fazenbaker, Owen Stanton, Olis Wiley, Margie Hetrick, Nona Brenneman, Dale Brenneman, Max Buckle, Robert Hetrick, Olin Fazenbaker, Dorothy Buckle, Roy Broadwater, Hoye Stanton, Clark Hetrick, Helen Brenneman, Elmer Brenneman, Kenneth Buckle, Richard Buckle and Ruth Wiley.

IF HORSES COULD TALK

. . . . . Here's one that would tell you why you need a telephone on your farm.

A VALUABLE horse became dangerously sick. Something had to be done by the farmer at once.
Rushing to the telephone he called a veterinarian who arrived just in time to save the animal's life. And by bringing help so quickly the telephone paid for itself for many years to come.

The rates for telephone service are so low as to put it within reach of every farmer. Ask at our Business Office about them.

MT. LAKE PARK

Now that it is settled that the Allegheny Tableland Festival for 1934 will be held at Mountain Lake Park and that probably Clarksburg and Morgantown, W. Va., Uniontown, Cumberland and Bedford will participate, it is up to us to cooperate in every possible way. There are those, of course (they are always with us), who do not look beyond their noses and consider only the immediate money return from such a meeting. That is indeed a short sighted policy. Of course financial returns from any project is highly important, but it will be remembered that in the various talks given by Nat Frame he emphasized the fact that the setup of the Tableland project was for a possible ten-year period. If the results can be be accomplished in a shorter period, so much the better. But Rome was not built in a day—neither can any lasting permanent good be accomplished for Garrett county in a few months or even years. Whether the idea can be worked out successfully depends on the cooperation of all who are affected.

Many would like to lay hands—violent hands—on the bird who predicted a mild winter, basing his opinion on the width, position and color of the rings on the caterpillars this fall. In spite of the rings (or is it because of them) Tuesday was about the worst day we have experienced for a long while. Wind and snow and plenty of both, thank you. And the coal and wood piles melted as an ice cream cone in an August sun. But as Mark Twain remarked, "there is no topic more frequently discussed than the weather, but no one seems to do anything about it."

Lowell Thomas announced over the radio Tuesday evening that Mussolini had dissolved Parliament and that hereafter Italy would be governed by a Supreme Council. We wonder if he has taken a leaf out of Maryland's history. You know that was an early form of the government of our State.

* * *

We are still obsessed with the idea that there is something for Garrett county and possibly Mountain Lake Park in the vast reemployment and work plan of the Federal Government. Beginning November 16 a very large appropriation was made to pay the wages of 2,000,000 unemployed workers on public parks and playgrounds. At least it is worth looking into.

* * *

The Civic Club's Library has justified itself, if anyone ever had any doubt about it. At the rate the books are being used this winter a new supply will be in order. We understand a number of new books are already in the hands of the Club to be placed in circulation early next spring. From personal observation, it would seem as though they are needed this winter while there is so much unemployment and both men and women have the leisure to read. During the spring and summer most of the reading public is employed and therefore has less inclination and time to improve with the aid of good books. We hope the club members will consider this angle.

Colonel and Mrs. J. Harvey DeVore, who have been house guests of the former's sister, Mrs. E. L. Winchell, for the past three weeks, left Saturday for their home in Elwood, Indiana. Col. DeVore is the father of Major L. S. DeVore and Capt, Gerald B. DeVore, U. S. Army, who have spent many summers at the Park.

Miss Marianne Palmer Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe C. Brown, Marietta, Ohio, and William Preston Carey, Jr., also of Marietta, were married on Friday afternoon, November 3. The bride is a niece of Mrs. J. W. Traver, of the Park, and Mrs. E. L. Winchell was among the 75 guests who witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. R. L. Cunningham and son Lawrence, Fairmont, spent the day in the Park, having motored here from their home.

Mrs. Calhoun and daughter Miss Bonnie have returned from an extended visit with Cumberland relatives.

Mrs. Mary Busselle, of Allenhurst, who has been ill, is recovering.

We are glad to learn that Dr. Carr, who has been suffering from a cold at his apartment in Baltimore, has recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cale, of Terra Alta, were guests of Mrs. Cale's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comerford, recently.

Mrs. Cora Bishop and daugters have moved into the Wildman cottage for the winter.

As a usual proposition we pay but little attention to the caterpillar, the chestnut burr and weather prophets, but when Mr. Murray White, who is strangely accurate in his weather forecasts, predicts 22 more snows this winter—well, we simply shed cal salty tears of grief and ordered another bottle of rubbing oil to remove the snow-shoveling kinks in our back.

Miss Virginia Peddicord, Mrs. Paul Friedmann and Mr. Maurice Reinecks, of New York City, were week-end guests of Mrs. George Peddicord and son George.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Branch and sons Jack and William, who spent the summer here, are now located at Tucson, Arizona, according to word received.

Akron Man, Nephew of Mrs. E. L. Winchell, Writes Description of Tiger Hunt In India

Tiger hunting in the jungles of India—that's something to write home about. Which is exactly what Elliott McKee, of Bombay, India, did when he killed a large tiger near Kathiwar.

The letter was written to his mother, Mrs. S. G. DeVore, of Akron, Ohio. The writer is a nephew of Mrs. E. L. Winchell, of Mountain Lake Park.

"Hunting in India seemed at first like a feather-bed compared to African hunting. In Africa, one goes right in the 'blue' stumbling through the dense underbrush on foot. Not so in India. You ride along on an elephant until you come to the designated hunting spot.

"Climbing a tree, plenty high, is the next step. This is done by means of a rope. I then tied myself securely to the tree, lit a cigarette and peacefully at first, waited for the native beater to drive the game to the tree.

"The grass was four feet high. The jungle almost impregnable. I waited. A wild pig, the most dangerous animal that roots the ground, came by. I didn't shoot. Why? Waiting for bigger game. The next animal was a panther—a beauty. Being secure you'd be surprised how brave I was. Didn't shoot. Again waiting for bigger game.

"Word came that the beaters had driven a tiger within 400 yards of the tree. By the time he came it seemed like 400 miles. It took four hours to drive him near me. I nearly fell while waiting, except that the rope held me.

"Along came the tiger, as proud as a peacock, brave as Al Capone with eight bodyguards and four guns. He stopped directly beneath me. I took aim; was scared cockeyed. It must have been the rattling of my teeth that pulled the trigger because I don't remember doing it, I was so excited. Mister Tiger takes a good forty-foot leap and adois. He's mine.

"But the beaters waited one hour before approaching him. Official verdict by the natives was 'death due to gunshot.'

"Then came the fun. Nothing is as enjoyable as security. I spent an hour tieing myself to the tree. It took the natives almost two hours to untie me. It cost most of my clothes, some nice face scratches and a foolish feeling. Finally I did get to see my kill.

"He measured 11 feet from head to the tip of his tail. The shot had killed him clean. The natives skinned him. Another good souvenir. By the way, the trip cost 350 rupees—$125 depreciated American dollars. That paid for two licenses, 150 natives, rope, the rented gun and clothes."

And that's how tigers are killed in India. McKee has been there two years working for the Goodrich Rubber Company. He was sent from Akron four years ago to Africa, and was later transferred to Bombay, India.

Says He Is Innocent

Fred L. Otto has written to The Republican to state that he is innocent and that he would not do such a thing of which he is charged. Otto is being held for attempted extortion.

The letter follows:

"I had nothing to do with receiving the thousand dollars which was asked from Dr. Davis. The party or parties who put the letter in my mail box ordered me to send it to Dr. Davis under threat if I did not comply with their request.

If I would do that they said I would not be harmed or my family. They were to get the money if Dr. Davis had put it where they demanded it be put. In order to escape punishment on myself and family I complied with their demand, thinking I would get the letter so I would have it to show Dr. Davis and give it to an officer to investigate. I received no letter and nothing to show but I have an idea how it all came about.

Spite and revenge, which I think will all come out. I have some clue of who put the letter in my box ordering me under threat to get me in trouble. I had nothing to do with or receiving the money whatever. The letter which was put in my box was signed "Clu Clan."

Respectfully,
FRED. L. OTTO.

New Deal On Cattle Again

Today Bill Tarber, wife and their daughter-in-law from Big Creek section visited the county-seat. Mr. Taber reports the New Deal on cattle is not helping in his part of the county. He sold two heifers and five steers for $24 and it took all of them to pay his taxes. He told us a neighbor sold a good cow for six dollars. And with all this, meat at the local markets still sells at war-time prices.—Taney County (Mo.) Republican.

IMMUNIZATION AGAINST DIPHTHERIA TO CONTINUE

Health Department Arranges For Treatments Next Week

There are two ways of producing immunity to diphtheria, and a test which shows whether the person is immune, stated Dr. E. C. Peck, public health officer.

If he is immune that means that he will not take the disease under ordinary conditions. When there is a case of diphtheria in the family, antitoxin, containing thousands of units of power, is used to treat the patient and also may be used to produce a temporary immunity in the other members of the family. This temporary, or borrowed immunity which antitoxin gives to the brothers and sisters of the patient, last only a few weeks, averaging six weeks. After this temporary immunity wears off the children are just as susceptible to diphtheria as before.

The other way of protecting them against diphtheria is by the injection of toxoid, which causes the person injected to develop antitoxin in his own blood and tissues. This antitoxin developed by the person himself protects him against the disease and lasts for many years. Its disadvantage is that the protection takes several weeks or more to develop, so that foresight is necessary to protect children against the disease six weeks or more before a case occurs in their family or in that of their friends.

The injection of toxoid leaves no scar and in little children produces hardly any irritation and soreness of the arm. Every baby six months of age or older should have this treatment. The toxoid used now is similar to the toxin-antitoxin which was used several years ago, but has been so improved that one dose is as effective in protecting the baby and produces less irritation than any one of the three doses of toxin-antitoxin which used to be given.

As children grow older many of them become accidentally immune to the disease, due to contact with extremely small numbers of germs, at various times. Wherever it is possible it is best to test all children over seven to see whether or not they are immune by accident or from injections given at previous times. Experience shows us that about one-third of the school children in this county usually are immune when first tested. The test is a harmless, small injection into the surface layers of the skin on each forearm. It tells the doctor whether the child needs an injection to make him immune and also detects those cases occasionally found among older patients who would be apt to have a sore arm if a full sized dose of toxoid were given.

The Health Department has arranged with the school authorities and doctors of Oakland to carry out an immunization program. Next week the Schick test will be done on all children in the Oakland schools whose parents request it. Beginning December 4, the local doctors will give toxoid in their offices to all children who need it, regardless of whether or not they can pay. On Monday of that week, Dr. McComas will be at his office prepared to give toxoid to all who come. The Health Department will aid him so that patients who cannot afford to pay will receive the treatment also. On Tuesday of that week, the Health Department will assist Dr. Baumgartner at his office and on Wednesday they will assist Dr. N. I. Broadwater; on Thursday Dr. Hinebaugh will be assisted in the same manner.

The Schick tests at the schools will be done free of charge. The toxoid immunization at the doctors' offices will also be free of charge to those who cannot afford to pay. This offers an opportunity for everyone in the Oakland district to be protected against the disease.

There have recently been ten cases of diphtheria on the southern border of the county near Kitzmiller and two cases in Friendsville. One child died of diphtheria near Grantsville last summer, so the danger is real.

A similar program has been carried out in Friendsville last week and this week. Over 140 patients were given the toxoid by the local doctors and the Health Department. One hundred and two Schick tests were done last week and those who were positive are being given toxoid this week.

Highway Deaths in two Counties Total Twenty

There have been twenty people who died as a result of auto accidents in Allegany and Garrett counties since January 1, according to State police official records, and not 25 in less than two months, as has been reported.

The total number killed on the highways in Allegany and Garrett counties and in the neighboring sections of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, is much larger. Deaths on highways in the two counties, however, have not taken any sudden spurt.

HOME LOAN CORPORATION HAS RELIEVED DISTRESS

Has Paid Out $103,500 In Bonds And Cash to Date

The Cumberland branch of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which includes Garrett county, has paid out to date in actual cash and bonds for the relief of distressed home owners in the Sixth Congressional District the sum of $103,500, of which the sum of $8,500 has been paid in State and county taxes, the balance being in bonds.

More than 100 foreclosures have been prevented in Allegany, Garrett, Washington and Frederick counties, the amount involved in stopped foreclosures being more than $89,000.

In one case in the district, it is said, the sale advertisement was published in a newspaper and the distressed home owner wired the President, the telegram was relayed to the Cumberland office and in less than 48 hours the Cumberland office had secured bond consents from several lien holders and stopped the sale on the day it was to take place.

Baseball Trophy Still In Bayard's Possession

The baseball trophy, a silver loving cup, is still in possession of the Bayard players, according to State's Attorney W. W. Dawson, and as they have refused to return it, the only thing left to do is to swear out warrants for the arrest of those who were said to have come to Brown's store over a week ago and walked off with the prize, he stated.

The cup has been awarded to Friendsville.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, NOVEMBER 23, 1933. NUMBER 41.

SPECIAL ASSEMBLY WILL MEET TODAY AT CAPITAL

Six-Point Program to be Carried Out, Involving Liquor, Relief, and State Revenues

BANKING LAW REFORMS

Governor Albert C. Ritchie has called for the special session of the legislature to meet Thursday, November 23.

The Governor, who originally intended to call the session for Wednesday, postponed it a day on account of the state's part in the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the Ark and Dove, ships which brought the first Marylanders to this country.

Six-Point Program

In his call Governor Ritchie asked for consideration of bills falling under six heads as follows:

The regulation and control of intoxicating liquors.

Legislation to allow Maryland and its political subdivisions to benefit fully under the provisions of the federal government's public works and relief programs.

Legislation to provide for relief of the unemployed, and of those damaged by storms, by the state and local governments.

Legislation to expedite the administration of criminal justice and criminal court procedure.

Banking Law Reform

Legislation necessary to put the state banking laws in line with recent federal legislation on the subject.

Legislation "pertaining to the fiscal affairs of the state and the public revenues of the state and the political units thereof."

SCHICK TESTS ARE MADE IN OAKLAND PUBLIC SCHOOL

Forty-seven Pupils Found Who Are Not Immunized

Two hundred seventy-one Schick tests have been made in the Oakland elemetary school, according to Dr. E. C. Peck, county health officer, and in a total number of 73 that have been completed, 47 were positive, which shows that these children could take diphtheria should they be exposed to it. The remaining 26 showed a negative test, which indicates that they are immune and would not contract the disease even if exposed to it under ordinary conditions.

"These forty-seven pupils should be taken to their family doctor and become immunized," Dr. Peck stated. He also said that the slips which the parents of the children had signed should be returned to the children, who would take them back to the parents, as the result of the test was written upon that slip by the health department.

Schick testing will be done in the Oakland High school today and tomorrow, Dr. Peck said. He is being assisted in the work by Mrs. Peck and Mrs. Yolanda C. Cole, county health nurse.

There is but one case of diphtheria in the Oakland district, according to the health department, and scarlet fever throughout the county has not increased any during the week.

Conditions Near Friendsville

Owing to cases of diphtheria in four families in the vicinity of Friendsville there has been considerable anxiety among the parents and many have kept their children out of school unnecessarily, according to the health officials. There have been over two hundred children immunized in the town and community during the last month and about fifty others were proved to be immune by the Schick test. A check-up in the Friendsville school yesterday showed that every child in school then except one had been immunized.

Another Deer Struck By Motor Car on State Road

Another deer, this time a yearling buck, was struck by a passing motor car at the top of King's Hill, a short distance north of Oakland Saturday afternoon and so badly injured that it could not get away. Later the animal was seen by another automobilist who reported it to the Sheriff's office when it was taken in charge by Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear who dispatched the animal, giving the hide to Gorman Thayer, who was on his way to town with the deer when the officer met him.

BITTINGER AND ACCIDENT UNEMPLOYED TO REGISTER

No Out-of-Town Registration Dates Announced For Next Week

Registration of the unemployed in Bittinger and Accident will be made tomorrow, according to Milburn Mann, manager, and there will be no registration made during next week at any point in the county outside the town of Oakland.

The hours for the Bittinger registration are from 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon at the O. C. Buckle store, and at Accident the headquarters will be at the F. E. Spoerlein Garage from 1 o'clock to 4 o'clock p. m.

During next week, anyone in the county wishing to register is requested to come to the Oakland office which will be open the entire week for that purpose, Mr. Mann said. He also added that if it was not convenient or possible for anyone to get to Oakland for that purpose during the week that a return visit would be made at a later date to various sections of the county.

At present there are approximately five hundred unemployed registered in the county.

GARRETT'S SEED POTATOES PRODUCE LARGEST YIELDS

Mason Variety Proves Best Producer in County

Mason (smooth rural) potatoes, with the seed being produced in Garrett county, take first place among all other varieties planted in units on the William S. Friend farm near Oakland in an experiment last spring.

According to a bulletin compiled by the State Department it is shown that the Mason variety led far in advance of its nearest competitor, and that it produced 468 bushels of U. S. No. 1 potatoes to the acre. The bulletin also pointed out that a total of 564 bushels of potatoes were yielded per acre from the seed produced in Garrett county, which consisted of the 468 bushels of the No. 1 variety, 52 bushels of the No. 2 and 44 bushels of culls.

The next highest yielding seed potatoes were those produced in Worcester county, Md., being of the same variety as those produced here, with a yield of 420 bushels of No. 1 U. S. grade and a total yield of 484 bushels.

The bulletin covers all varieties planted on the Friend farm and shows a great variation in the producing qualities of seed potatoes which can be grown in Garrett county. One variety, the Irish Cobbler, coming from the State of New York, had a yield of only 134 bushels to the acre with only 80 bushels being of the U. S. No. 1 grade.

The Friend field was planted in tuber units on May 23, 24 and 25. Irish cobblers were harvested August 30 and the late varieties on October 21. The field was sprayed seven times with Bordeaux mixture 4-4-50.

Summer Home Robbed

The summer home of Mrs. W. B. Burruss, located in which is locally known as "Hemlock Hollow," a few miles south of Oakland, was broken into and robbed of clothing, bed clothing and other articles, the loss being estimated at about $200 with no clue as to the identity of the guilty party or parties. The robbery took place some time during the week preceding Saturday.

A committee in charge of the service includes Nelson Brenneman, Chas. Savage, T. H. Hawkins, Asa Glotfelty, C. H. Merrill and Hariand Glotfelty.

New Germany C. C. C. Camp Was Snowbound Last Week

The Civilian Conservation Corps camp on Negro Mountain, near New Germany, was snowbound last week. The stoves for the barracks had not arrived and Captain Joyner, commandant, had two stoves placed in each barrack and moved the men in to alleviate somewhat the intense cold from which the men had been suffering while living in tents.

THANKSGIVING DINNERS WILL COST APPROXIMATELY SAME AS LAST YEAR; SURVEY OF LOCAL STORES MADE

Prices on Some Foods Has Risen —Turkeys Expected to Bring 25 to 30 Cents Per Pound

Thanksgiving dinners this year, as a whole, will cost approximately the same as in the past two years, in spite of the rise in price of some of the articles recently, and it is estimated that a dinner may be prepared for about half as much capital outlay as in 1918.

With a bountiful yield of crops in most sections, practically every product of the farm is being offered at reasonable prices and canned goods are near the figures they brought last year.

Although there is no definite price yet for turkeys, the merchants of town feel that there won't be much of a change from last year's figures. The general opinion was that they would be from 25 to 30 cents dressed, and from 15 to 20 cents in the rough. Turkeys are expected to be plentiful.

Chickens were priced from 20 to 25 cents dressed, and from 12 to 18 cents in the rough. Three years ago, live chickens were priced at 20 cents.

Cranberries, always thought to be a Thanksgiving Day necessity, are selling for 15 cents per quart. Sweet potatoes are 3 and 4 cents per pound, with white potatoes 20 to 25 cents a peck.

Eggs are taking another jump with the latest price being 35 cents, making it about the same as last year. Butter of the highest quality is quoted from 25 to 30 cents.

Apples are bringing from $1 to $1.35 per bushel; good oranges, 30 cents per dozen; celery, 10 cents per bunch; pumpkin, 10 to 15 cents per can; and oysters, 50 to 60 cents per quart.

From this list one can figure the approximate cost of the Thanksgiving dinner, depending on the quantity desired and the number of mouths to feed.

SAVE A LIFE CAMPAIGN IS TERMED SUCCESSFUL

More Than 1,400 Cars Have Been Inspected at Oakland Garages

Notwithstanding a considerable increase in the number of automobile fatalitics during this year's annual Save-a-Life campaign, which officially ended last Wednesday, the campaign has been considered a success. Fifty-two persons lost their lives in motor accidents during the one-month period ending November 15, as compared with thirty-seven during the same period last year. Only one of the deaths, however, was caused by faulty mechanism in the machine involved.

The campaign is designed to reduce deaths resulting from motor accidents caused by faulty mechanism.

Approximately 1427 automobiles were inspected at nine garages in Oakland it has been reported, and about 75 per cent of these were in good running condition. Cars were inspected for lights, breaks, windshields, tires, etc.

Many people negelected to have their cars inspected before November 15, and State police have instructions to stop all uninspected cars and stay with them until they are taken to a station and marked O. K.

One garage owner has received word to continue inspecting the cars, and if this is correct, it contradicts a former order stating that there would be no extension of time this year.

There are about 3,000 cars in Garrett county, according to the assessment books in the office of J. J. Ashby, Jr., county treasurer.

Hunters Practice Turkey Calling In Effort to Lure Birds

If practice makes perfect, turkey calling has become quite an art among Garrett county hunters who in great numbers have turned their thoughts to making the "redlegs bite the dust."

This is the first open season on this species of game in Garrett county in several years and not only the old seasoned hunters but so-called "greenhorns" have been testing their skill, or luck, just as you choose, in shooting down the birds.

Most of the turkey hunting is being done in the Steyer and Ryan's Glade communities where there are said to be several flocks in the wooded sections.

Four hunters are said to have been successful in bagging this truly American bird thus far during the season. Max Welling, Oakland shot two, Carl Frazee and Ross Stup one each and a resident of Ryan's Glade community also got one of the birds. The weights ranged from 10 to 16 pounds each. During the coming days more hunters are expected to take to the woods.

May Form Basketball League

An attempt is being made this year to form a basketball league of fire department teams within this area. The committee appointed by the local firemen to be in charge of Oakland's team has heard from several teams desiring such a league.

Teams from Thomas, Davis, Bayard, Parsons, Kingwood, Terra Alta, Masontown, and Aurora, W. Va., and Oakland and Friendsville, might be included. Practice sessions for the local team are expected to start soon.

Commercial work will include courses in typing, bookkeeping, business English, business arithmetic and shorthand.

Agriculture will include a study of animals and shop work.

Classes began on Tuesday evening, November 21, and at present plans are being made for class sessions each Tuesday and Thursday evenings, but Monday may be chosen instead of one of the other evenings.

The work of renovation on the Grantsville school building is nearly completed. The improvements as required by the State Firemen's association have been made and include a fire escape, all outward swing doors and panic locks on all outside exits.

Additional Loans Are Made on Garrett County Farms

Five additional farm loans have been made during the past week thru Paul Ulman, correspondent for the Federal Land Bank, Baltimore, which aggregate $8,500. Of this amount the sum of $700 went into the County Treasurer's office in payment of taxes due, according to the correspondent.

The loans made this week, together with those previously made since Mr. Ulman took the matter over, approximate $40,000 and within the next week, or before Thanksgiving Day, an additional six loans will have been completed, aggregating approximately $15,000, it was said this morning.

Appraisers from the department in Baltimore will be in Garrett county in the very near future when they will investigate and appraise farms upon which applications have been made for loans and which have come into the office of the correspondent since the last visit the appraisers made here.

CHURCHES TO JOIN FOR THANKSGIVING SERVICE

The young people of the church are planning to decorate the choir and nave of the structure in suitable fashion and it is also planned to insert in the service a few moments when the congregation may present donations in the way of canned foodstuffs, fruit, flour, etc. These donations will be turned over to the relief board for distribution in this locality.

CORN-HOG GROWERS CAN GET BENEFIT PAYMENT

Letter Goes Out To Farmers From County Agent

In a letter being mailed this morning from the County Agent's office to the farmers of Garrett county, information concerning another plan of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is given, and relates to benefit payments to corn and hog raisers.

While information relative to the amounts to be paid for elimination of corn acreage or the reduction in the number of hogs raised has not yet come from the department, it is said that a substantial benefit payment will be made in such cases.

All corn raisers who have been planting ten acres or more, and all hog raisers who have been keeping three brood sows or more are eligible for and can participate in the corn and hog campaign if he chooses to do so, it was stated at the County Agent's office.

A blank is included in the letter to the farmers which is to be filled out and returned to John H. Carter, County Agent, stating the number of acres of corn planted in 1933, and also the number of brood sows kept in 1933.

All farmers who desire to participate in the campaign are requested to advise Mr. Carter.

In Garrett county alone the sum of $7,046 weekly will be paid in salaries to men who are now doing relief work or who have been on direct relief in the county.

New Program Gigantic

The Baltimore meeting was called by Federal officials there in order to hasten a "work and pay by Thanksgiving" program and was attended by all relief directors and county chairmen from all sections of the State and by Charles W. Ream, F. E. Rathbun, and Delbert Davis of the local committee, who were there in company with Miss Miller, and according to the director the program is gigantic and unlike anything ever before attempted.

Work projects in the county may be carried on under this plan and the remodeling of public buildings, school houses, the Court House and other such edifices about the county may be reconditioned, but it is pointed out that no new building may he erected under this plan. Road work will be the main project here.

For work done under the direction of the new plan, controlled by the Civil Works board, the wage scale in Garrett county is expected to be about 30 cents per hour, or the existing scale of State road workers.

Washington officials set the price of skilled laborers at $1.10 per hour, with unskilled laborers at 45 cents per hour, but this was for work on remodeling of buildings, etc., and not for road work, according to Miss Miller.

Wages will be paid with Treasury notes, never before used for any such purpose, and such notes are transferable and redeemable at any bank. The amount due the workman is written into the note by the local paymaster, who will be heavily bonded.

Garrett county's quota under the Civil Works board is 596 men, and while there are now a number of men in excess of that figure doing R. F. C. work, or who are on direct relief, it is estimated by the local director that elimination under several new requirements set forth in the new plan will automatically cut the roll of workmen down to approximately that quota.

At a meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening, 596 men were authorized to be taken from the relief roll and placed on the Civil Works fund, and plans were made for continuing the work projects now under way. The remaining 400 or more who were on R. F. C. work will be placed on direct relief. "Everybody is to be taken care of," Miss Miller stated.

All workmen are covered by compensation under the new plan and transportation will be furnished those who are required to travel any great distance to their work.

"I think the plans are just great," Miss Miller replied when asked her opinion of the new setup, and continuing, she said, "it is the first real bright ray of hope I have seen during my relief work experience."

The new plan went into operation Monday following the close of the meeting held in Baltimore.

The district investigators present at the meeting held in Oakland Tuesday included Mrs. Cora M. Lohr, James Frame, Miss Ida V. Engle, Miss Dorothy Edwards, Miss Vera Ream, Miss Helen Townshend, Mrs. Friend, Miss Kathryn O'Donnell, Mrs. Harry I. Wilson. Others present were Miss Helen Jones and Miss Beryldine Fulk, of the local office, and a representative of The Republican.

PAUL IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-17; I Cor. 1:1-2:8.

GOLDEN TEXT—For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. I Cor. 2:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Care at Night.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Gets New Courage.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Work With Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Unity in Christ.

The establishment of the church at Corinth is an example of missionary endeavor for all ages. The method employed and the messnge delivered which resulted in success then will result in success now.

I. The True Missionary Method (Acts 18:1-3).

Paul came to Corinth a stranger in a strange city. His method of gaining a foothold was.

1. Finding a home (v. 2). This he found with Aquila and Priscilla who had recently been expelled from Rome. Being of the same nationality, there was a natural affinity with them.

2. Toiling for daily bread (v. 3). Paul was of the same craft as his host. Every Jewish child was taught some trade by means of which he could gain his livelihood, should occasion require. Missionaries should not be above honest toil.

II. Preaching in the Synagogue at Corinth (Acts 18:4-8).

1. Compelled to toil for a living (v. 4). Though compelled to toil for a living, he did not lose sight of his main work. He reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, persuading the Jews and the Greeks.

2. His activity increased through the coming of Silas and Timothy (v. 5). This was caused by.

a. Favorable report from the church at Thessalonica. This report put new vigor into his labors.

b. They brought pecuniary gifts from the Macedonian church (Phil. 4:15; II Cor. 11:9). Being now free from the necessity of toiling for a living, he could devote more time and energy to preaching the gospel.

c. Silas and Timothy became helpers to Paul in the work.

3. Increased opposition (v. 6). Paul's increased activity met with increasing opposition.

4. Paul announces his purpose to turn to the Gentiles (v. 6). This was necessitated because of the opposition and blasphemy of the Jews.

5. Paul in the house of Justus (vv. 7, 8). He remained sufficiently near those whose hearts God had touched that they could easily find him. His success here was such that Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, was converted. Paul departed from his usual custom and baptized Crispus.

III. Paul's Vision (Acts 18:9-11).

This vision was for the purpose of giving encouragement to Paul at this time. His experiences in Europe were most trying.

1. "Be not afraid" (v. 9). The one who is doing the will of the Lord need not be afraid.

2. "Speak, and hold not thy peace" (v. 9). The one who has heard the voice of God cannot refrain from speaking.

3. "I am with thee" (v. 10). All who faithfully carry out the divine commission can be assured of the divine presence.

4. "No man shall set on thee to hurt thee" (v. 10). No harm can come to the Lord's servant until his work is done.

5. "I have much people in this city" (v. 10). The one who goes forth with the divine message can be assured that his ministry cannot fail.

IV. Party Spirit in the Corinthian Church (I Cor. 1:10-18).

In this church rival factions were contending against each other. Some were for Paul, some for Apollos, some for Peter, and some for Christ. The cause of this threatened division was failure to see the true headship of the church. Christ is the one and only Head, and the members composing his body cannot be divided. Membership and interest all center in Christ. By one Spirit all were baptized into the one body (I Cor. 12:13). Sectarianism is an evil to be deplored. The factious spirit in the church mars its testimony and retards its growth. Those who understand the oneness in Christ will be joined together in the same mind.

V. The One Supreme Message of the True Preacher (I Cor. 2:1-8).

It is Jesus Christ and him crucified. Prejudice and human limitations prevent men from seeing eye to eye. Christian unity is possible only as the members of his body grow up into Christ.

Christ Uses All

It is amazing what use Jesus makes of frail mediums. None of the Twelve appears to have been a man of outstanding position until Jesus took them and made them men of might and vision. That is what is continually happening.

No Hanging Back

You must cast yourself on God's gospel with all your weight, without hanging back, without any doubt, without even the shadow of a suspicion that it will give.—Alexander Maclaren.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

This change in the weather Sunday night was too much for me. I kept the same amount of covers on the bed that had been on the night before and while the night was yet young I began to roll and toss. They say that one dreams all his dreams in the fraction of a second, but that was before Sunday night.

I maintain that I dreamed the entire night. And it seemed so real, too. I began by gathering hickory nuts in Mr. Offutt's woods, and he caught me in the act. He wanted the other nuts of the community to have a chance and he called up Bun Nethkin to run me in. But my subconscious mind did me one good turn, for before we got to the hoosegow the subject changed and I was hunting tigers in India with Ross Stup. He had a hot-air gun with which he planned to kill a real man-eater, but before he got to do that he changed into the form of Paul Ulman and the gun turned to be a real rapid fire make.

My subconscious mind had a horror of tigers evidently, because the next thing I knew I was out with Tommy Graser and Walter Dawson calling wild turkeys. I really never heard such bragging about what would happen should they see a turkey.

Well, we really did see one, but he was as big as a house, and he started chasing Walter and Tommy and just as he was about to make two juicy morsels of them they ran down a rabbit hole. The turkey then turned about to chase me, but before it had gone far it wasn't a turkey at all, but Gen. Samuey Johnson, NRA czar, who was going to give me a good fanning for not liking his program. He got too close for comfort and he seemed to be growing by leaps and bounds, but by this time it wasn't Johnson any more, but Grover Stemple and he wanted my scalp because I printed the story of the municipal building before the members of Council wanted it given publicity. Grover never grew much until he was eighteen and then he sprung up like a weed and here he was getting bigger all the time. I tried to get away by climbing a mountain but his long legs seemed to follow me everywhere. But it turned out to be Luke Harvey for no reason at all.

Returning from the mountain top, I caught sight of a skunk and beside it was Joe Gonder who was crying because his Legion post had been low for the week and they had to take care of the animal. But the skunk wasn't hard on the nostrils at all.

About that time the covers must all have been around my head, for I was in the midst of a forest fire and we ran for our lives. Two men were coming to fight the fires, both with heavy beards. One said his conservation armies had deserted him, and when I asked him who he was he said "I am President Roosevelt." The other man with him was Litvinoff.

But by this time a siren was blowing (the one that didn't sound off for that fire Sunday night, I guess), and all the firemen were arguing the best way to put out the flames. By this time I was cooked and was reading my own obituary in The Republican. Blaming such a rotten write-up on Archibaldson, I decided I wouldn't go to Baltimore any more and furthermore I would write my own notice of passing to the great beyond.

About that time Mike Maryone came along with his dump cart and shovel and said he was waiting to bury me. But just about that time I saw the boss editor with a big jag on and it was only then, folks, that I knew I must be dreaming.

George Weitzell is the next gentleman on the honor roll for coming in to pay up his subscription simply because he saw the plea in this column about our pants. And he came just after the boss editor had pushed his knee thru one of the legs of his trousers.

Three cheers for my alma mater. They won their first football game of the year last Saturday. And a good thing, too, because they were playing Wesleyan, and if Wesleyan had won two of my former scouts, Walter Dawson, Jr., and Lewis Jones, students at Wesleyan, would have never let me rest in peace.

Lizzie Tish, the girl in the front office, has been wearing blinders all week. Di-di Jim, the office devil, got busy and washed the windows.

FRIENDSVILLE

Dr. Cotterman Speaks at F. F. A. Banquet

The Friendsville chapter of Future Farmers of America held its ninth annual father and son banquet on Friday evening at which time Dr. H. F. Cotterman was the principal speaker.

More than eighty guests, fathers and sons of the local unit, assembled in the school auditorium and were served an excellent dinner by the students of the home economics department of the school under the direction of Miss Ethel Grove. Mr. Charley B. Miller, adviser of the farm unit, directed the activities of the evening. Wayne Hook was toastmaster and the invocation was made by the Rev. H. E. Sumner. Mr. Glenn, principal of the school made the address of welcome; Mr. Miller introduced the guests; County Agent Carter made an address on readjustment and leisure time, which was followed by Dr. Cotterman, whose address was on vocational education and rural life. Paul Sebold was presented the Frederick Fair prize for his part in the judging contest held there. Music was provided by W. Eisentrout and M. Nedrow.

Mrs. Skidmore Entertains

Mrs. Howard Skidmore entertained at her home last Tuesday evening when she had as her guests a number of friends. Rook was the diversion of the evening when Mrs. John Williams won the honors and Mrs. Melvin Kessner was awarded the consolation prize.

A rook party was also given by Aleta and Carol Rush on Saturday evening at their home.

Personal Mention

Mrs. M. E. McCullough spent the week-end with her granddaughter, Miss Helen Statler, at Frostburg, where she was a guest at the mothers' week-end party, which is an annual event at the Normal School and is much enjoyed by the mothers and students.

Mrs. W. J. Glenn and Mrs. Howard Skidmore were Cumberland shoppers on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Rush and Playford Ryan spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Collins at Bruceton.

An independent girls' basketball team has been organized here which is composed of excellent material and a number of good games are anticipated during the winter months by those who like the sport.

A boys' basketball team, sponsored by the local firemen was organized one evening last week. With the two high school teams these organizations should afford Friendsville plenty of sport in this field.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Wheeler have moved back to town again and are residing in a flat over the Wolfe store room.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Coddington died last Friday of diphtheria. This is the first case of the disease to result fatally in this community, although there are a number of others, who are showing improvement. So far there are no cases of the disease within the town limits.

Miss Kathryn Filsinger spent the week-end here.

Helen Barr is spending the week with her mother, Mrs. R. R. Friend.

Homemakers Column

By Miss Margaret Kirby Burtis
Home Demonstration Agent

The housekeeper who is very hard pressed counts literally every pint and pound, as well as every penny that goes into the family meals. She probably plans her main dish, not just for today, but for each of the next several days. The money goes further when she figures it out that way—down to the number of pounds of potatoes, tomatoes, beans, greens, and other vegetables, fruits, meats, milk, bread, and so on, to see the family through the week. But if you have not been planning as closely as that, you may find it hard to work into your list all the foods that are needed to keep the family well and fit. This is usually hardest to do when it comes to vegetables. As a guide for this purpose, the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has figured out a low-cost vegetable budget. If the family includes father, mother, and three children under fourteen years of age, the bureau says you need at least the following quantities of these different kinds of vegetables for a week: 13 pounds of potatoes, 6 pounds of tomatoes, 7 pounds of leafy green or yellow vegetables, 2 pounds of driend beans, peas, peanuts, or peanut butter, 3½ pounds of other vegetables. That is enough vegetables to balance the cereals and meat and sugar and fats you will need, says the bureau, although more vegetables would be better. This budget will provide, for the family of five, potatoes or sweet potatoes every day, greens, tomatoes, dried beans or peas each, several times a week, with other vegetables now and then.

The list provides 7 pounds of leafy or other green vegetables, or yellow vegetables, and some one of these is intended for every other day at least. Raw cabbage is counted next to tomatoes for vitamin C; and that suggests cabbage salad or cold slaw as good ways to use some of your cabbage. But panned cabbage, and five-minute creamed cabbage are other inviting possibilities—always being sure to use the greenest leaves, and cook them a very short time. Turnip greens, or collards, or spinach, or kale, carrots or yellow squash, or yellow turnips, snap beans, or green peas, (canned for this time of year), are other items for this part of the vegetable list.

Potatoes, greens, tomatoes, and dried beans or peas are the regulars in the low-cost food schedule because of their unusual food values and the many ways they can be used. Plenty of these vegetables are needed to make sure of minerals and vitamins enough to balance the starches, proteins, and fats and sugars of the other foods on your weekly list. Your family is better off with more minerals and vitamins and your table is more attractive with a greater variety of vegetables. And the chances are you would not eat enough of the same foods over and over, because you would grow tired of them.

Scalloped Cabbage, Spaghetti and Cheese

1½ cups spaghetti, broken in small pieces; 3 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons butter or other fat, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ lb. cheese, 1 quart shredded cabbage, ½ cup buttered bread crumbs.

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water for 20 minutes, and drain. Make a sauce of the flour, fat, milk and salt. Shave up the cheese, add to the hot sauce, and stir until melted. Put the cabbage, spaghetti, and sauce in a buttered baking dish in layers and cover the top with the buttered bread crumbs. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Frostburg State Normal School Students Entertain Mothers

The students of the State Normal school at Frostburg had their mothers as their guests on the campus on Saturday of last week. They came from Washington, Garrett and Allegany counties and a busy day was planned for their entertainment.

The resident students had charge of the first part of the program, which began at two o'clock in the auditorium. At four o'clock the mothers were guests of the 4-H Club at a tea. The evening activities were in charge of the Dramatic Club, Glee Club and Y. W. C. A.

This was the first Mother's Day at the State Normal School at Frostburg and was sponsored by the Student Congress which is made up of representatives of all the organizations on the campus and under the enthusiastic leadership of Miss Helen Statler, of Friendsville, president of the Student Congress, all students on the campus had a part in showing the State Normal to their mothers. Miss Statler is a senior in the school and is one of the most popular students there. She has taken an active part in all school activities. During her freshman year she played on the basketball team, and as a junior was a member of the Student Council, Dramatic Club and Alpha Tau. In her senior year she was elected president of the Student Congress and is a member of the Dramatic Club.

The mothers and friends who were guests from Garrett county were: Mrs. Charles Harmon, Accident; Mrs. V. L. Blocher, Miss Gleaves Keefe and Mrs. John Opel, Grantsville; Mrs. McCullough, Friendsville, and Mrs. M. P. Sollars, Oakland.

The Flowers Count!

We have often received compliments on the care we give to the floral offerings at funerals. While this detail is sometimes neglected as unimportant, we feel that it is a duty we owe not only to the dead but to the surviving friends who have made sacrifices to provide this beautiful tribute of affection. For this reason we have purchased special equipment for arranging the flowers in the most attractive manner possible, and give the matter the most careful attention.

GOSPEL OF SELF-RESPECT IS ONLY DRY WEAPON LEFT

"Why will less liquor be used after all the laws against the manufacture and sale of this drink have been repealed?" is a question asked in a front page editorial of the DeKalb New Era, published at Decature, Ga. Continuing the New Era asks: "If conditions are to be better after repeal than before, just what is to make them so?

"To the casual observer, it appears that the cause of temperance with all of its interference with clear thinking and fine living is to be pushed back to the uncertain status of temperance in the seventies. Then those, who wanted liquor, got it, drank it and frequently brought unnecessary trouble upon themselves or others who were in no way responsible for what occurred. The only weapon which could be used against drinking in those days was merely an appeal to the moral sense or the self-respect of individuals. There was no law to restrain the making or the selling of whiskey and there was nothing to prevent any person becoming intoxicated who could not or would not refrain from drinking the required amount.

"Without laws to protect it from the ravages of debauchery, decent society did the only thing it could do. It made long and relentless warfare against drunkenness and sought to combat the liquor evil by the most powerful possible appeal to the moral sense of those who sought to lead sober upright lives.

"It is contended that much of the drinking of the present day is done by young people and women. No reason whatever is given why these persons will cease drinking when the liquor laws are repealed. It is absurd to expect them to do so.

"Stores of all kinds seek good locations because experienced business men know that convenience and accessibility to the crowds bring more customers. Future liquor dealers know the same thing. With all legal restraints gone and large stocks of drinks temptingly displayed, it is perfectly natural for people to buy liquor who formerly did not care to go to the trouble necessary to obtain it.

"After national repeal goes into effect, the whole burden of enforcing the state dry law will fall on the sheriffs and police forces of the State. * *

"The only weapon which can henceforth be used by the friends of temperance is the old broad sword of past generations—an appeal to the moral sense and self-respect of those who wish to lead upright Christian lives."

BUREAUCRACY AN ISSUE?

One of the favorite targets of the political orators in time of campaign is old man Bureaucracy. When the political fight is on, he seems not to possess a single friend. Everybody's hand is against him, and it would appear that his days were numbered. But when the election is over, he seems not only to thrive and hold his own, but actually to wax fat. He continues his hold on the governmental machinery in Washington and probably in every state capital. He is harder to get rid of than a frozen asset.

We heard a great deal about the evils of bureaucracy in the last campaign and in the one before that. But it seems that the bureau system with its red tape and its fat payrolls is not only a permanent but a growing institution.

Many political prophets are predicting that bureaucracy will be a real issue in the next political campaign. Certainly, if it is not, it will not be because of a dearth of material. Among those who prophesy a bureaucratic issue in the next campaign is Oliver McKee, Jr., Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript, who has compiled a partial list of new bureaus and divisions at Washington, and who adds that the list could be extended much further. But the list which speaks for itself is as follows:

The NRA—State, county and compliance boards have been established generally in the states, with the district offices of the Department of Commerce doing much of the routine work.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration—Agents by thousands are now distributed in the states, checking on acreage, processing taxes, etc.

The Farm Credit Administration—Appraisers and others are in many states examining mortgages and farm property with a view to possible loans from the federal government.

The Home Loan Bank Corporation—State and local boards have been established from New England to California.

Public Works—The organization of the PWA parallels that of the NRA, with the federal government represented in state engineers, regional advisers, etc.

Wheat and Hog Curtailments—Here, too, federal agents are active in agricultural states.

The Civilian Conservation Corps—There are nearly 1,400 camps, under federal supervision and direction.

Deposit Insurance—State banks, more than 8,000 in number, if qualified for benefits of the legislation and if accepted, hereafter will submit to a measure of federal control.

The R. F. C.—Through liquidation of banks and through loans of various kinds, the R. F. C. reaches out directly into a large part of the business community of the country.

The Employment Service of the Department of Labor—In cooperation with the states, local employment offices are now in operation in many American cities.

Federal Emergency Relief—Here, too, the federal government, through its inspectors and other agents, enters the field of relief previously controlled by the local communities.

The Veterans Bureau—The new boards, created to overhaul expenditures in behalf of veterans, have been set up with federal representation in every state.

It would appear, on the face of things, that if bureaucracy grows as much in the next few years as it has in the past several months, that it won't be long until everybody will be drawing a salary from Uncle Sam. And when this time comes who is going to pay the taxes to provide the salaries? Perhaps the bureaucrats then, like the famous Kilkenny cats, will eat one another. All other methods of decimating their number seem to have failed.

G. O. P. CAUCUS ACTS ON PARTY'S LEGISLATIVE PLAN

Chairman Tait Proposes Study of Maryland's State Road Financing

PRINCE PLAN RESOLUTION

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 22.—The State House tonight began to hum with excitement as legislators and political leaders gathered here for the opening of the extraordinary session of the General Assembly tomorrow.

The Republicans held the center of interest as the state leaders met with the minority members of the two houses in caucus, but prominent democratic leaders gathered in the halls to exchange greetings and talk over what the governor's message may contain and other state matters.

Addressed by Leaders

The Republican caucus was slow in getting under way as the party legislators first listened to talks by several of their state leaders, including Galen L. Tait, chairman of the Republican State Committee; Wendell D. Allen, chairman of the Baltimore committee, and others.

Tait, before going into the meeting, handed out a statement in which he urged the minority legislators to study the finances of the State Roads Commission, to encourage federal aid to stat eand local relief projects and to oppose the "Prince Plan" for consolidation of the railroads, among other recommendations.

Saying "let Maryland see the pay rolls and the balance sheet," Tait in his statement before the caucus, urged the Republican delegates and senators to make public the accounts and employment list of the State Roads Commission.

Condemns "Prince Plan."

Another joint resolution should be passed condemning the Prince Plan (now before the Federal coordinator) for uniting the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads. This, he said, would be in approval of the position of opposition taken to the plan by the Baltimore Association of Commerce.

"The Prince Plan for forcibly welding the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to the Pennsylvania Railroad would be deeply and damnably damaging to the interests of Baltimore and all the territory and business people of Maryland."

Ritchie Backs Maryland Lottery

A bill intended to clear the way for the legalization of state and city operated lotteries will be introduced at the special session of the Maryland legislature which opens tomorrow, Democratic leaders, said today.

The measure is expected to have the support of Governor Albert C. Ritchie who several months ago announced that he believed state operated lotteries and sweepstakes would go far toward solving Maryland's revenue problems.

Announcement that the bill would be introduced was made by E. Lester Muller, president of the Baltimore city council, after a long conference with the Governor. Delegate Phillip Wallace, of Baltimore, will present the bill he said.

Expected to Pass

The proposed bill, which Muller indicated was expected to pass, would provide for a state-wide vote next November on an amendment to the state constitution which now bans lotteries. The amendment would not allow private lotteries but would allow the state and the city of Baltimore to conduct both lotteries and sweepstakes on Maryland horse races.

When he addresses the two branches of the legislature in joint session tomorrow, Governor Ritchie will give much attention to recommendations for liquor control legislation. His program, he has announced, calls for legalization of drinking places—called "taverns" in the administration bill— and the issuance of three licenses for different forms of sales by the drink.

Licensing Proposals

One, low cost license, will allow only the sale of beer; another would allow the sale of beer and natural wines; the third, which would cost a "tavern" $500, and a hotel $1,000, would allow the sale of all alcoholic beverages. The governor put fortified and sparklin wines in the hard liquor class.

Another administration liquor recommendation, that which is expected to draw considerable fire, was for a $1.10 a gallon excise tax to be charged on hard liquors and the more powerful wines.

Though he recommended that all liquor sales be regulated by the provisions of a state-wide law, the governor added that "local option" should be allowed—not only to those counties that wanted to be "bone dry" but also to those who wanted the sale of beer only, or beer and wines only.

MORE THAN 200,000 DIRECT MAIL APPEALS TO BE MADE

Maryland Residents Will Receive This Number During Month

Uncle Sam, beginning on Thanksgiving, will deliver more than 200,000 direct mai lappeals throughout the State of Maryland, in the interest of the twenty-seventh annual Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Sale of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association and its affiliated branches.

"The annual Christmas Seal sale has played a prominent part in the reduction of the tuberculosis death rate in the past twenty-five years," said W. B. Matthews, the managing director of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association. When the first Christmas Seal was sold in the country in 1907 the death rate was nearly three times higher than it is today. However, the job has not been completed by any means. Tuberculosis today is still the major health problem in the ages of greatest economic value. It is the greatest cause of deaths between the ages of 15 and 45. It kills almost twice as many girls as boys between the ages of 15 and 20. It is the greatest cause of deaths among school children between the ages of 5 and 20 (except accidents). More than one-fourth of all the deaths among young women, and almost one-fifth of the deaths of young men between the ages of 15 and 30 are due to tuberculosis. Among negroes the mortality is between three to four times higher than among whites.

The funds obtained from the Christmas Seal sale in Maryland are used to finance the following activities of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association:

The Miracle House, known far and wide as the perventatorium for Maryland children predisposed to tuberculosis.

State-wide free chest clinics; these clinics have been conducted for nine years. More than 18,000 examinations have been made.

The Association also maintains a year-round health education campaign in the interest of prevention and control of tuberculosis, and also assists in medical research.

The Seal sale campaign which opens Thanksgiving Day continues until Christmas.

At Princess Anne, Md., the county jail was recently quarantined because of two cases of diphtheria therein, which prevented any prisoner from being committed or released for the time.

Time to Pay Taxes on Autos

With Christmas just around the corner and the end of the year 1933 following immediately thereafter, it has been suggested that motorists and automobile owners begin thinking about the acquirement of new license tags for 1934.

Several hundred automobile owners and drivers will not be given their 1934 license plates because they have failed to pay personal taxes on them, it has been announced. Unless the tax is paid and the plate application cards so stamped, the state will not issue licenses.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

SAINT LUKE

Luke is referred to by St. Mark, in his Epistle to the Colossians, as the beloved physician. He appears to be the author of the Acts of the Apostles as well as the Gospel which bears his name, both of these works being addressed to Theophilus, a disciple who had been instructed in Christian doctrine, and was thus further indoctrinated by the truths set forth in Luke's writing. All we know of Theophilus is his name; but he must have been a close friend of Luke, and a person of considerable prominence to be thus singled out by Luke as the original recipient of these precious documents.

This book, like Mark's Gospel, was written especially for Gentiles, as indicated by internal evidence. Pains are taken, as in the case of Mark, to explain Jewish customs, and sometimes Greek names are substituted for Hebrew. Its purpose, as stated by the author, is to give a connected and orderly narrative of the life of Christ as seen by eye-witnesses. The key verse of the book is in Chapter 1:4: "That thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed."

It is no easy task to set forth the distinctive features of books which deal in every line with matters of such profound significance as do the books of the New Testament. Yet we are able to find in each of them certain mountain peaks from which a vision of the whole may be had. Certainly these features of the Gospel of Luke must be evident to all thoughtful readers. It is a Gospel of the universale grace of God. It is a Gospel of "The Son of Man." It emphasizes Christ's sympathetic attitude toward the poor, the lowly, and the outcasts. It reveals His compassion upon the poor disciples; the sinful woman; Mary Magdalene; the Samaritans; the deserted beggar, Lazarus; publicans and sinners; the dying thief. It is a devotional Gospel, especially emphasizing prayer.

This Gospel strikes a note of joy and praise. Some of the great Christian hymns have their inspiration in this Gospel, such as "The Ave Maria," the words of the Angel of Annunciation. Chapter 1:28-33. "The Magnificat," Mary's song, Chapter 1:46-55. "The Benedictus" of Zacharias, Chapter 1:68-79. "The Gloria in Excelsis" of the heavenly angels, Chapter 2:13-14. "The Nunc Dimittis," Simeon's rejoicing over the Savior's birth, Chapter 2:29-32.

Luke greatly honors womanhood in his narrative; Mary, the wife of Joseph; Elizabeth, her cousin; Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus of Bethany, where Jesus loved to visit, live before us as we read. The daughters of Jerusalem are compassionated because of the woes which must fall heavily upon thm. The aged widow Anna, who, though unable to leave the temple, where she served God with fastings and prayer day and night, spoke of Jesus the Redeemer to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

The narrative closes with a series of events concerning the Resurrection and the Ascension, a chapter of fifty-one verses. One of the most beautiful of the incidents recorded in the last chapter of Luke is the story of the Easter Sunday afternoon journey of Luke and Cleopas to the little town of Emmaius. The risen Lord joined the disciples with the question, "What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad?" They told Him of their sorrow for their Lord, of whose resurrection they were still ignorant. Then He opened unto them the scriptures, and showed why the things that caused their sadness were inevitable. Coming to Emmais, they invited Him, still ignorant of His identity, to share their frugal meal. "And as He gave thanks for bread, their eyer were opened, and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight."

SAINT JOHN

Of all the Gospels John is the best beloved. It was probably written late in the first century, and gives evidence that the main purpose of the Apostle was to inspire faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God. Its opening sentences are a sublime confession of faith, and represent the most profound conviction of fact. To John, Jesus Christ was the Eternal Son of God. This book opens in exactly the same words that are found at the beginning of the Book of Genesis. John declares: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not made anything that was made."

This Gospel is considered by many to be the deepest and most spiritual book in the Bible. In it Christ gives a more complete revelation of Himself, and of God, than in any of the synoptic Gospels.

The fatherhood of God is emphasized by John, who quotes about one hundred sayings of Jesus, relative to this great doctrine.

Perhaps the most notable of the many peculiarities of this Gospel is the fact that more than half of the space in the book is given to the events in Christ's life and his sayings during His last days.

Among the discourses and conversations of the Master found only in John are the conversation with Nicodemus concerning the New Birth; the meeting with the woman of Samaria at the well of Jacob, and Jesus' promise of the water of life—an indication of His direct approach to the Gentiles; the parable of the Good Shepherd, dear to the hearts of straying, suffering humanity; and his comforting words to His disciples recorded in Chapter 14, words that have been balm and healing to the broken hearted ever since: "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Eight of Christ's miracles, beside His own resurrection, are recorded by John, to prove His divinity. Of these six are found only in this Gospel. His first miracle, wrought at Cana in Galilee, the water made wine; the healing of the nobleman's son; the healing of the man at Bethesda's pool; healing of the man born blind; the raising of Lazarus; the second draught of the fishes.

John records the matchless, high-priestly prayer of Jesus, in the 17th chapter—a prayer that could only come from the heart of the Good Shepherd, yearning for the ingathering of all his sheep, in all the centuries of man's life on this planet. The burden of this petition is that "They all may be one."

There are two great currents of thought running through this book, "Faith" and "Eternal Life," Chapter 5, verse 24, is typical of the Faith current: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life."

The eternal life current is revealed in the high-priestly prayer of our Lord. Chapter 17, verse 3: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

A great deal of discussion is now being had in the newspapers and among politicians, as to what subjects will form the issues in the 1934 and 1936 campaigns. All of the speculation is of course, more or less idle, as conditions are bound to change considerably within the next few years and this will vitally effect the political issues. There is one issue, however, which will be upon the country before the next election, in fact within the next few weeks, unless the signs go astray, and that is the issue of inflation. Unless all signs fail the problem will become acute when Congress meets the first of the year, providing, of course, it is not settled in the meantime. One prominent news service is authority for the statement that inquiries reveal the fact that more than a majority of the members of Congress now look with some favor on the inflation idea, and that comparatively a small percentage of the members are willing to go on record as opposed. Quite a few of the statesmen, of course, are not yet ready to make any public statement of their position.

Already organizations are being formed in various parts of the country to oppose inflation. How successful they will be remains to be seen. One of the most convincing arguments to date against inflation was made recently by Dr. W. S. Landis, a prominent American business man, who recently returned from Europe and has studied the effects of inflation in the various European countries which have experienced it in the past. According to the New York newspapers, Dr. Landis in a recent address to employes of his company, expressed the opinion that there are some erroneous impressions abroad in American concerning inflation, and he added that monetary inflation, judging from the experiences of countries across the Atlantic, does not in the long run reduce debt, aid industry and boost the value of common stocks. These countries found, he said, that while the debts of governmental units and various enterprises were cut or cancelled by inflation, they had been forced to borrow additional sums to carry on because of the increased costs incident to inflation, and the interest cost of the new debts was greater than that of the old.

Dr. Landis said that he believed that in America the new debts made necessary by inflation would exceed those which might be wiped out by reduction or cancellation. A study of the course of 300 stocks in France during the period of inflation, the speaker declared showed that at the end of the inflation period they had only reached one-half of their previous gold value, and this, on the average, only during the 1929 stock boom.

"Investment in common stocks is extremely hazardous in an inflation period," Dr. Landis is quoted as saying, "because of the tremendous mortality in business. This, in turn, is due to the shrinkage in the value of the working capital, the added cost of operation, and the tendency to the overissuing of securities."

Speaking of the effect of inflation on wages, Dr. Landis declared that in France, while the wages of the working men seemed to me going up they were actually being cut in half, while in Germany the plight of the workers during the era of inflation was desperate. In addition, inflation in France and Germany cut the value of insurance companies bank deposits, trust funds, mortgages and bonds. Dr. Landis also pointed to the fact that inflation in the United States would greatly reduce the value of the securities which the various state governments require savings banks to invest in.

It is easy to see that inflation is not a quick and easy way of reducing or paying debts. Indeed it is apt to have the opposite effect on the total indebtedness, and to wipe out the savings of the thrifty, while at the same time bringing intolerable hardships to those who work for a salary or a daily wage. Certainly, in handling inflation, now is the time to "stop, look and listen."

Mary's Surprise

By ALICE DUANE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service

"IT ISN'T as if there was any nourishment for me in meeting the Castles," argued Mary. "Mr. Harold Castle's married, and if he wasn't I wouldn't consider being the wife of a college president. So that settles that. So far as any social advantage that I can get by passing around tea and microscopic sandwiches at your friend, Mrs. Wilson's, while she and the wife of the new president stand in the front of the house and shake hands with two hundred and more women—well, I'm sure I don't see the point in it."

"Mary, you don't mean half you say," said her mother. "Of course, it is something of an honor to be asked to assist at the tea. Only seven other girls have been asked—but, anyway, even if there weren't any 'nourishment' in going to the reception—what do you have in mind for this afternoon that would be 'nourishing,' as you call it?"

Mary raised her pretty eyebrows. "I haven't decided what to do," she said. "Maybe I'll start west to seek my fortune."

And so it happened that on the day when all the women who were considered of any social importance around Blissville—the seat of Tome college—were attending the reception given in honor of the new hostess of the president's house, Mary Vernon, daughter of one of the leading trustees of the college, was driving her car toward the lake shore in a direction where there was little automobile traffic during the week days.

She had been speeding along for about fifteen minutes when she noticed a none too good-looking car drawn up at the side of the road and a little later a tall, well-built man peering into the opened hood of the car's engine. Mary stopped her car and offered whatever assistance she could provide.

The man smiled and explained that he didn't have the least idea as to what was wrong. But the way it jumped had annoyed him and he knew something was radically wrong with the old bus.

Mary, who liked to tinker with her roadster, looked in at the engine. Her knowledge of the mechanics of automobiles was better than the average girl of her class because her brother had taught her considerable. She smiled at the man and asked if he had a tool kit.

After tightening a couple of bolts and readjusting a wire connection, she asked the stranger to try turning on the motor.

"I think it will be all right now," she said. "I hope you won't be late wherever you're bound for."

The man thanked her and laughed. "I wasn't going anywhere in particular. And I hope I haven't detained you from some very important engagement."

Mary laughed. "I wasn't going anywhere, either—I was just out killing time."

"Want to kill some more time?" asked the man, and then he suddenly seemed embarrassed at what he had said. "I was wondering," he added, "if you would consider ourselves sufficiently introduced to warrant my asking you to stop in a little shop for some tea—there's a nice little place a few miles along this road."

Over the teacups Mary became more or less confidential as she talked to this man. Somehow his dignity seemed to invite her confidence. She told him that she had retreated from a reception in honor of the wife of the new college president. The man asked a few questions and then looked surprised, and after that, very much amused. Finally Mary added that she had been brought up in more or less of a college environment, and in her opinion most college presidents and professors as well as their wives were insufferably dull.

The man smiled and the smile developed into a hearty, good-natured laugh. As they arose from the table and it was time for them to separate, the man produced his personal card and handed it to her.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have waited so long to introduce myself," he said. "My name is Harold Castle—"

Mary looked bewildered, then she blushed and she wished she could sink right through the tea-room floor. But Mr. Castle held her hand reassuringly in his. "You see, I'm just a dull sort of college president—but at any rate I'm glad I'm coming to Tome for awhile. Perhaps, then, I'll be able to see you occasionally."

"I didn't suppose," stammered Mary, "that college presidents who have wives picked up girls on the road and took them to tea. It's perfectly all right with me, and I won't divulge the pleasant time we've had to anyone, but it's quite a surprise, Mr. Castle."

"That's the funny part of it all," said Mr. Castle. "There just isn't any Mrs. Castle. My sister is my hostess."

Mary arrived home a little while later. At the dinner table Mrs. Vernon couldn't keep her bit of gossip to herself.

"There really isn't any Mrs. Castle, Mary," she said. "Mrs. Wilson made a mistake and sent cards out to meet Mrs. Castle instead of miss, and when she found out about it, it was too late to send out other cards. So really the new president is a bachelor. Perhaps he'll marry one of the girls in Blissville—"

"That would be nice," responded Mary. "Wouldn't it, mother?"

MT. LAKE PARK

Each Wednesday morning at this season of the year, the writer begins making inquiries of various friends seeking news items for this column, but usually with mighty slim results. Of course, during the late storm period about all we could do was to keep the home fires burning and any social functions that might have been programmed were deferred. Those from the lowlands were afraid to risk the slippery roads, so there were few visitors in the Park. But after all, with so many big things happening in the world at large, with gigantic experimental projects calling for the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars being launched, and with the minds of our people filled with the problem of bare existence, minor local happenings are of small moment. With it all, we predict that this column this week will be slimmer than usual—if possible.

There is one thing, however, we must mention, even against the advice of friends. It concerns the burglarizing of two unoccupied residences—the Armstrong home and Braethorn. We understand quite a lot of valuable bed clothing was taken from the latter building and much of value from the former.

With respect to these depredations, the Park is no exception, for the public press reports a like condition in almost every community. Despite the enormous sums being expended to relieve the needy, there are still very many who are feeling the pinch of poverty and the lack of warm clothing. However, this, of course, is no excuse and absentee property owners ought to be made feel secure.

The town authorities, considering the lack of funds and the large acreage within the corporate limits, are at a great disadvantage. It would require a large force of officers to properly patrol the Park and even in cities, with a policeman on nearly every block, burglaries are constantly occurring.

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Martha McCann Jarvis, relict of Lemuel D. Jarvis, late of Harrison county, West Va., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. Brent Maxwell, in Clarksburg, W. Va. Several children survive, among whom, in addition to Mrs. Maxwell, is General Melvale Jarvis. Mrs. Maxwell and General Jarvis and family are summer residents of the Park.

Friends will be glad to know that Mrs. Harry Clayton has recovered from a fall which she experienced several weeks ago. Mrs. Clayton is now occupying an apartment in the home of Mrs. Anna Smouse, in Oakland.

There will be preaching in the U. B. church, Loch Lynn, Sunday night, by the pastor, Rev. J. A. Jessee.

Delbert Bittinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bittinger, underwent an operation one day this week at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland. During the past summer the patient was injured while at work in the plant of the Mt. Airy Canning Company in Loch Lynn with the result that an operation was necessary to correct the condition existing. Reports are favorable.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Nelson moved here from Fairmont on Monday.

J. W. Traver was a business visitor at Richmond, Va., recently.

Mr. George Peddicord motored to Fairmont Monday. On his return he was accompanied by his sister, Miss Virginia Peddicord.

C. A. Oswell and Mrs. Isobel Hill motored to Washington, D. C., a few days ago. Mrs. Hill has closed her home here for the year.

There is one branch of endeavor that is materially aided by unemployment. We mean that of hunting. Hunters in the woods all about us have been rewarded by shooting all manner of game, including wild turkeys, but so far no deer have been reported—the season has not yet arrived.

DIED.

HENRY KAMP

Following an illness of several months, Henry Kamp, aged 75 years and 7 months, died at his home in Accident on Friday, November 17. Born on a farm near Accident, he resided on the home place until a few years ago, when he and his wife moved to Accident. Mrs. Kamp died in April, 1929, since which time the deceased resided with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Kamp. The surviving members of his family are Clarence, of Minnesota; Harrison and Jonas, of Accident; Harry, of Keyser's Ridge, and a sister, Mrs. Clara Conley, of Kingwood, W. Va., and thirteen grandchildren.

Mr. Kamp served as judge of the Orphans' Court in Garrett county for a period of nineteen years. He was a staunch Republican and during his entire lifetime he was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran church at Accident, serving as deacon and elder on the church council. "His timely advice and service in the church and for the community in which he lived for so many years will be missed," was a tribute paid him by a friend. His funeral occurred Monday, the services being conducted by his pastor, the Rev. A. B. Harper, with interment in the church cemetery.

JACOB A. BEACHY

Mr. Jacob A. Beachy, aged 70 years, well known farmer of Casselman, Md., died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Irvin Baker, with whom he had made his home during the past years, on Saturday morning, November 18. Death was due to paralysis.

Mr. Beachy was a son of the late Aaron and Catharine Beachy, pioneer residents of this community. He operated a farm near Casselman all his life, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Children of the first grade of the public school of Oakland were being taught in the building formerly occupeid by The Republican on Liberty street. Miss Martha Hinebaugh was in charge of the pupils.

The thermometer went down to zero and many were enjoying skating on the lake at the Park.

A new Methodist Episcopal church was erected and dedicated at North Glade.

A porker killed on the farm of Mrs. Caroline Frazee in the Cove, weighed 456½ pounds.

Mrs. Fannie R. Read was to resume the management of the Glades Hotel on December 4th, and was to have associated with her in the management of the famous hostelry her sister, Mrs. Crook, widow of the late Gen. George Crook.

A man was attempting to buy a lot at Red House for the purpose of setting up a liquor store or saloon. Under the Glade Valley items in The Republican concerning this, it was said: "People here are quiet and sober, so let us hope we may never see the day when whiskey will be sold at Red House."

An account of the marriage of Dr. and Mrs. Mahlon C. Hinebaugh was reprinted in The Republican from the Baltimore Sun.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Harry Paugh was shot in the arm when a gun which was laid across a stump in the woods was accidentally discharged by a child who unobserved by Mr. Paugh pulled the trigger of the firearm.

D. R. Smith, Hoyes, was injured in Cumberland when struck by a passing train.

A new arrangement of stars in the American flag was acepted by the War Department in Washington.

An order came to Dr. McComas to secure and ship to Baltimore a mammoth pine tree to be used for a municipal Christmas tree in that city.

A camp of the Sons of Veterans was to be organized in Oakland if sufficient members could be secured.

Eggs were bringing 45 and 50 cents per dozen in Baltimore and the women of the city were threatening to boycott the egg dealers.

While hunting near his home in the Bittinger section, Harvey Stark killed a large blue crane which was five feet tall and measured six feet from tip to tip of wings.

Charles Bosley, Arthur Lawton, John Sweeney and Harper Bartlett returned from the woods after a day's gunning, bringing with them ten rabbits and five pheasants.

RECEIVER OF BANK GETS POWER TO SELL SECURITIES

Petition Cites Reorganization Plan of Frostburg Bank

In connection with its proposed reorganization, a petition has been filed in equity in the Circuit Court of Allegany county by Thomas B. Finan, receiver, and William C. Walsh, attorney, in which application is made for authority to sell certain securities held by the Citizen's National Bank of Frostburg.

An order of court has been signed by Judge Albert A. Doub granting this authority, provided permission is given by the U. S. Comptroller of the Currency.

The petitioner has filed a list of securities of the approximate value of $118,000.

The application sets out that a plan of reorganization which contemplates the opening of a new bank with acceptable assets, to be purchased from the Citizen's National Bank, Frostburg, has now been approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, Treasury Department. This provides for the sale by petitioners of certain securities and which are held as free assets. Authority is also asked to deposit with the properly organized committees of unpledged securities which are now or may hereafter become in default.

In Washington, President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar, agreed on points, for the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States.

In New York, the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution condemning the administration's monetary policy and demanding a return to the gold standard.

To Hold Rummage Sale

The Oakland Civic club will hold a rummage sale in the McIntire building, entrance on Alder street, on Saturday, December 2. Contributions are being requested of any clothing, furniture, carpet, rugs, dishes, and everything used in a home.

Persons having coal or gas stoves, for heating or cooking, who wish to donate them or sell them for a small sum, are asked to notify a member of the club. Bundles will be gathered if the club is notified where to call.

TOOTHBRUSHES, PINK AND OTHERWISE

The New York Herald-Tribune, in its issue of October 30, devoted some space to a radio address by Col. Louis M. Howe, secretary to the President, on the subject of "retail price gougers." Colonel Howe, according to the newspaper, told how the public could institute an inquiry into price gouging and quoted the law to the effect that "No retailer shall increase the price of any merchandise sold after the effective date of this code over the prices existing June 1, 1933, by more than is made necessary by the amount of increase in production, operating replacement or invoice costs of merchandise or by taxes or other costs resulting from action taken pursuant to the national industrial recovery act since June 1, 1933, and in setting such price increases retailers shall give full weight to probable increases in sales volume. It is provided, however, that if any price on June 1, 1933, was a distress price, an equitable adjustment may be made."

This, the Colonel is quoted as saying, means that if a customer feels that he is being charged too much for an article in the store he can file a complaint and find out about it. Mr. Howe believes that in most cases it probably will be found that the price rise is beyond the retailers control, and he assumes that if the customer, after investigation, finds he had not been gouged, the investigation will work to the advantage of the retailer.

In the filing of a complaint, Colonel Howe is quoted as making this explanation:

"This is what you do. You feel that you are charged ten cents too much for a toothbrush as compared to what you paid before. You march down to the postoffice and say: 'Give me a blank.' They give you a blank, and you merely write on it something like this: 'I went into the such-and-such store yesterday. They charged me sixty cents for a toothbruch which last week cost only fifty cents. Please have this investigated.' You then march yourself back to the postoffice, hand in the complaint and the machinery starts to move automatically and will never stop until it has run down the reason for this price increase, if it has to go clear up to the manufacturer himself before it finds the answer."

All of which is decidedly interesting and opens many possibilities. Of course if this practice of filing complaints is indulged in to any great extent it will mean a great deal more investigation work for the government to do, and this in turn ought to result in employment for many thousand additional hungry political laborers who up to this time have not been properly recognized.

And as nearly every community we know has at least one person who makes a hobby of complaining at retail prices, comparing them with the prices in surrounding communities and in the mail order catalogues, just think how much fun these folks are going to have in using the postoffice pens, filling out the blanks and watching the wheels of the government grinding in an effort to chastise Mr. A or Mr. B for asking price on a bottle of olives or a cake of soap.

We can see only one additional step necessary. If we are overcharged ten cents for a toothbrush and get the dime back, that is one thing. But suppose the price is all right but the bristles fall out of the brush even before they have a chance to turn pink. What is the government going to do about that, and where do we send our blanks?

KITZMILLER SPRINGS BIG SURPRISE IN SOCCER TILT

Local Champions Defeat Bruce High of Westernport, Last Year's State Champs, 2 to 1

For the first timc in thirteen years Garrett county emerged victorious over Allegany county in the state soccer tournament when Kitzmiller High school, coached by Thomas V. Baucom, eliminated Bruce High school, Westernport, defending State champions, from the running by defeating the latter Friday at Westernport by the score of 2 to 1.

Five hundred persons assembled at the Westernprort field to witness the closest game in the history of the inter-county series. In previous years the scores ranged from 1 to 33 to 1 with Allegany county always on the long end.

For the last twelve years teams from Garrett county, representing Oakland, Grantsville and Kltzmiller, were unsuccessful in their attempts to stop Allegany county elevens from Barton, Beall and Bruce high schools. In fact Kitzmillcr had gone down to defeat seven times in the past 12 years at the hands of teams from Allegany county. But Friday it was a different story as one of the lightest teams in the history of the inter-county series provided a stunning upset by defeating Brue high school on its home field.

Mosser's Goal Decides

Bruce high broke into the scoring column 20 minutcs after the game had started when Captain Joe Harvey booted a penalty goal to give his team a 1 to 0 edge at half time. Twelve minutes of the second half had expired when Charley Mosscr, center forward of Kitzmiller contributed what proved to be the winning goal when he booted the ball through the uprights from a scrimmage in front of the goal. Coach Grindlc's crew put up a hard fight during the latter part of the game but was unable to get the ball past Goalie Charley McIntyre, whose defensive play at the uprights whencver Bruce threatened stamped him as the outstanding star of the gamc. With five minutes left to play Bruce was given an opportunity to tie the score on a penalty shot, but Joe Harvey kicked wide of the posts.

Clever Passwork

Kitzmiller presented one of the lightest teams in the nistory of the inter-county contests. Coach Baucom's squad averaged 120 pounds. The Garrctt countians were speedy and their play was featured by short snappy passes that seemed to baffle the Bruce players time and again.

Charles McIntyre, goal tender, Captain Joe Strah, Bill Volakis and Charley Mosscr played the leading roles for the winning aggregation. Goalie Johnson and Fullback Hott played hest for the Bruce high school eleven which won the county and State championship last year.

By virtue of the triumph Kitzmiller advanced to the sccond round of the state tournament where it will play the winner of the Brunswick-Hancock game, scheduled early in December.

The linups and summary of the game follows:

Kitzmiller (2)	Pos.	Bruce (1)
McIntyre	Goal	Johnson
J. Porter	LB	Hott
Sharpless	RB	Woy
Vodopivec	LH	Dayton
Fike	RH	Beaver
Strah (C)	CH	Sively
Volakis	OR	DiUbaldo
Craver	IR	Laughlin
Mosscr	CF	G. Harvey
Weicht	IL	G. Reeves
Strachan	OL	J. Harvey

Score by halvcs:

Kitzmiller	0	2—2
Bruce	1	0—1

Field goal scored by Mosscr (Kitzmiller).

Penalty goal scored by J. Harvey (Bruce) 1-2.

Substitute: Kitzmiller—Brown.

Referee—Joe Ervin, Baltimore.

SCHOOL BUILDING REPAIR MAY BE HAD THRU C. W. A.

Federal Funds Available for Work on School Projects

Letters have been mailed to public school teachers of Garrett county inviting applications for projects of repair work to school buildings, which would be done under the Federal Civil Works Administration, according to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent.

The projects may include school building repair jobs such as painting, electrical wiring, roof repairs, repair of school furniture, construction and repair of school playgrounds and the equipment, modernization of sanitary facilities, but only those projects which can bc completed in two or three months will be undertaken.

The projects requested by the principals and trustees of the schools, when approved by the Board of Education and by the county, State and Federal Civil Works Administrations, would be completed with payment in full for all materials, labor and supervision coming from Federal funds and not from any funds in the hands of the county or State school funds, it was pointed out by Mr. Rathbun.

The applications for these projects must be sent to Mr. Rathbun so that they reach him before noon on Thursday, December 7.

September Salary Paid

In the letter to the teachers, the salary checks in payment of the unpaid portion for the last half of September, 1933, were enclosed.

FORTY-FIVE MAJOR BILLS INTRODUCED BY ASSEMBLY

Banking Methods Change Proposed in Four Measures—Others Open —Way For Relief Funds

Major legislation including the administration's recommendations for revision of criminal justice procedure within the state, changes in banking methods, and authorization for the political subdivision of Maryland to participate in federal relief funds poured into the House and Senate Monday as the general assembly reconvened after the week-end recess.

A total of 45 bills—twenty-eight in the House of Delegates and seventeen in the Senate—was introduced before both houses adjourned until noon Tuesday.

Also included in the session's crop of proposals were:

A bill providing a referendum on repeal of the constitutianol prohibition against the issuance of lottery grants by the general assembly.

A bill restricting the expenses of the special session of the general assembly to $25,000.

A proposal authorizing the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Company to become a public corporation without any obligation, "either equitable, legal, moral or otherwise," to the state to meet payments of interest or other costs.

Council Will Meet Soon To Plan For Municipal Building

A meeting for the purpose of deciding on specifications and plans for a municipal building, will be held by the Mayor and Town Council within a few days.

It is thought this building might be erected through the Public Works administration of the Federal government without any local outlay of money at this time. The erection of such a building at this time would furnish labor for a large number of Garrctt county's unemployed.

The plan and approximate cost of any project must be turncd into the government along with the application, and it is for this reason that council expects to meet, so that something definite may be outlined.

EASTERN SHORE PEOPLE ATTACK STATE TROOPERS

More than Thousand in Mob that Tried to Free Prisoners—Tear Gas Is Used

FOUR ARE BEING HELD

A mob of more than a thousand men stormed the state armory at Salisbury yesterday in an unsuccessful effort to free four of the men accused of participating in last month's lynching at Princess Anne.

Beaten back by gas and bayonets the mob disbursed only after the state troopers sent by Governor Albert C. Ritchie to arrest the alleged slayers of George Armwood, a negro, abandoned their headquarters in the armory and returned to Baltimore with their prisoners.

Cries of "lynch Ritchie" and "lynch Lane" could be heard as the crowd hurled stones at the soldiers surrounding the armory. William Preston Lane, Jr., is the state attorney general and it was during his investigation of the lynching of Armwood that the names of nine allcged participants were obtained.

His requests that the state's attorney of Somerset county, John B. Robins, order the nine men arrested were refused by the state's attorney, who contended a grand jury investigation was the proper procedure.

Attack Reporters

Even after the state troopers, under the leadership of Lane and Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, state adjutant general had withdrawn from Salisbury, the mob continued its activitics and for a time beleaguered reporters in the city's principal hotel. A movie

Man's Only Cow Killed By Hunter, Supposedly After Deer

Horace Casteel, of Sang Run, a man of limited means, found his only cow dead in a field near his home on Sunday morning when he went to milk the animal. The cow had been shot during the night or early in the morning in question by some onc using a rifle.

The animal was found beside a salt lick placed in the field evidently for the purpose of attracting dcer to the spot where they would be an easy mark for hunters when the season opens on Friday. The party who did the shooting was perhaps the same person who planted the salt and not to be outdone by other deer hunters he anticipated the date for lawful hunting and killed the cow under the impression that it was a dcer.

No trace has been found of the person guilty of the act. A law prohibits the placing of salt for the purpose of attracting deer to it.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION ISSUED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Asks That We Give Humble Thanks For Blessings Bestowed Upon Us In Past Year

President Roosevelt issued a proclamation naming Thursday, November 30, for the regular observance of Thanksgiving Day. It was written at Warm Springs, Ga., where he won back his own health from an attack of infantile paralysis. He cast aside the usual "whereases," of past proclamations to ask "may we on that day in our churches and in our homes give humble thanks for the blessings bestowed upon us during the past year by Almighty God." His proclamation, handed out says:

"I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do set aside and appoint Thursday, the thirtieth day of November, 1933, to be a day of Thanksgiving for all our people.

"May we on that day in our churches and in our homes give humble thanks for the blessing bestowed upon us during the year past by Almighty God. May we recall the courage of those who settled a wilderness, the vision of those who founded the nation, the steadfastness of those who in every succeeding generation have fought to keep pure the ideal of equality of opportunity and hold clear the goal of mutual help in time of prosperity as in time of adversity.

"May we ask guidance in more surely learning the ancient truth that greed and selfishness and striving for undue riches can never bring lasting happiness or good to the individual or to his neighbors.

"May we be grateful for the passing dark days, for the new spirit of dependence one on another, for the closer unity of all parts of our wide land, for the greater friendship between employers and those who toil; for a clearer knowledge by all nations that we seek no conquests and ask only honorable engagement by all people to respect the lands and rights of their neighbors; for the brighter day to which we can win through by seeking the help of God in a more unselfish striving for the common bettering of mankind.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed."

(Signed) "FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

T. E. BISHOFF SUFFERING FROM SCALDING ACCIDENT

Both Legs Badly Injured In Barrel of Boiling Water

Mr. Thomas E. Bishoff, of Oakland, a member of the Orphans' Court of the county, is suffering considerably at his home here as a result of an accident last Tuesday in which both his legs were scalded to his knees.

Mr. Bishoff was assisting in butchering some hogs at the home of Robert Glass, just west of town. As a method of scalding the animals a barrel had been sunk in the ground, covered with a piece of sheet metal. In hurrying to assist another man engaged in the work, Mr. Bishoff stepped upon the metal sheet and it gave way beneath his weight and as a result he was immersed in the hot water to his knees.

Mr. Bishoff returned to his home shortly after the accident befell him where he has been confined to his bed since that time.

SCHICK TEST COMPLETED IN SCHOOLS OF OAKLAND

Toxoid Will Be Given Next Week to Those Needing it

During the last week the County Health Department has offered the Schick test to all the children in the public schools of Oakland. One hundred ninety-three tests have been completed in the elementary schools, and 265 in the high school. A few tests remain to be read in the high school late this morning. Of those done in the grammar school almost three-fourths of the children showed positive tests, indicating that these children could take the disease if exposed to it. In the high school, there were 99 positive tests and 123 negative tests. The increased proportion of negative tests in the high school shows that the immunization campaign carried on by the doctors and the Civiv club in 1928 combined with many other minor factors producing immunity, has made the children of the high school much safer than the younger ones.

The tests were done by Dr. E. C. Peck, assisted by Mrs. Yolanda Cole, public health nursc, and also by Mrs. Peck and Mrs. Milton Sincell.

Every child whose test was finished was given back his request slip which was marked "Needs Toxoid," or "Immune," and the children were told to take them home to their parents. It is hoped that every child who needs toxoid will be given it at the offices of the local doctors, as the health department has arranged to assist them on certain days next week, so that all children can receive the immunization, even if they cannot afford to pay. The schedule for next week is as follows:

Dr. H. W. McComas' office on Monday morning.

Dr. E. I. Baumgartner's office on Tuesday morning.

Dr. N. I. Broadwater's office on Wednesday morning.

Dr. M. C. Ilinebaugh's office on Thursday morning.

GARRETT COUNTY FARMER WINS SUIT FOR INSURANCE

Is First of Three Cases Removed To Allegany County Court

Deliberating more than an hour, a jury in the Circuit court of Allegany county last evening returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the suit of Reinhold Menke, of Garrett county, against the National Union Fire Insurance Company. The verdict was for the full amount asked approximately, $1,500, plus interest.

Courtney Tasker testified for the defendant company that he assisted the plaintiff in setting fire to the Menke home. Tasker said he and Menke carried dishes, clothing and a radio from the house, prior to the fire, and also took the telephone from the wall. Tasker asserted he remained and watched the house burn to the ground.

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge A. A. Doub, presiding, denied a defense motion for an Instructed verdict, ruling that the case be given to the jury.

Menke's dwelling and farm buildings were destroyed by fire January 2, 1932. Menke on the stand said he was alone downstairs in his homc, his family being away, and was awakened by his dogs and found his roof afire around the chimney. About twenty witnesses were summoned to testify.

This is onc of threc suits against insurance companies to recover on policies for fire damage, removed from Garrett county.

MORE MEN WILL BE GIVEN WORK UNDER CIVIL WORKS

Exact Number Not Known; Rate of Pay Will Be 45 Cents Per Hour for 30-Hour Week

TO START NEW PROJECTS

That a few more men than are now at work on Civil Works projects would be added in Garrett county, and that all men would receive 45 cents per hour for their work, was learned Monday by Miss Ethel Millcr, county executive secretary for the Civil Works Administration, when she met all the executive secretaries of the state and those in direct charge of the work.

Garrett county was allotted 596 men by the Administration last week and it was thought that the wages paid would be 30 cents per hour. The exact number that would be added to the 596 men already at work was not learned, but Miss Miller said it would be "some". New projects which may be started include sewing for the needy; repair and construction of sewerage systems, employing helpers in libraries, etc.

According to the new schedule each man would rcceive $13.50 for his thirty hours of work, this amount to be paid by treasury checks.

The first treasury checks will be given out on Saturday for the C. W. A. jobs, which will be for two days. The work week ends for them on Thursday. Four hundred people are still on direct relief, it was stated.

Beginning next week, butter, cracked wheat and beef will be distributed to the needy of the county, and it was said that workers under the Civil Works Administration would also come in for their share.

REGISTRATION OF COUNTY UNEMPLOYED REACHES 750

County Managers Met in Baltimore Monday for Long Session

Unemployment registration at the office of Milburn W. Mann, manager for the reemployment service, reached 750 this week, it was announced.

Mr. Mann spent Monday in Baltimore at a meeting of county managers of the reemployment service, when he heard Harry Greenstein, State Civil Works Administration, give an address, and Oliver C. Short, head of the reemployment bureau, give out instructions for carrying on the work in the several counties. County reports were also made at this meeting.

The outlook for Garrett county was not considered very favorable in respect to placing the registered men in positions. It was stated the numbers on the relief account were so great that they would have to be taken care of first when it came to giving work under the Civil Works Administration.

Registration will continuc at the Oakland office on Liberty street, Mr. Mann stated.

Suffers Broken Leg Received In Automobile Accident

Miss Edna Lohr sufferd a broken leg, received in an automobile accident last Friday evening, and is now a patient in Memorial Hospital, Cumberland.

Her two traveling companions, Earl Burow, owner and driver of the car, and Sherman Brenneman, received but slight scratches.

Miss Lohr is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall H. Lohr, Keyser's Ridge, the young men accompanying her being residents of the same community. They were traveling east on the National Highway in a new sedan when it left the road at Stone House, three miles east of Grantsville. The car turned over a number of times and is said to be damaged beyond repair. People who investigated the accident state it is a mystery how any of the three escaped with their lives.

Lesson for December 3

PAUL IN EPHESUS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 19:8-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Matthew 5:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Praising God With Our Gifts.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Asia Hears of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Meet Opposition.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Facing Conflict for Christ.

I. Paul Preaching in Ephesus (vv. 8-10).

1. In the Jewish synagogue (v. 8). He was permitted to preach here for three months. His preaching was characterized.

(a) By boldness. He realized that God had sent him and that he was backed by divine authority.

(b) By reasoning. God's message is in accord with the highest reason.

(c) By persuasion. It is not enough to go boldly with a reasonable message, it must be accompanied by persuasion.

(d) By speaking "concerning the kingdom of God." He did not discourse on current events, philosophy, or literature, but upon the message of salvation through Christ.

2. In the school of Tyrannus (vv. 9, 10). The Jews were only hardened by Paul's earnest preaching. Paul separated the disciples from them and resorted to the school of Tyrannus.

II. God Works Miracles Through Paul (vv. 11, 12).

As Christ's messenger he needed credentials. If Paul's ministry was to be successful here, God must, in an extraordinary way, put his seal upon his work. So wonderfully did he manifest his power that even handkerchiefs and aprons which had been in contact with Paul's body healed the sick and cast out evil spirits from those who had been made wretched by them.

III. Paul's Work Imitated (vv. 13-16).

Seeing the marvelous power operating through Paul, certain Jews who went about the country practicing magical arts at the expense of their poor unfortunate fellow countrymen, undertook to use the name of Jesus in their deceptive work. Knowing that the connection with Jesus Christ was but pretense on the part of these Jews, the use of his name by them only enraged the evil spirits who sprang upon and overcame them.

IV. A Glorious Awakening at Ephesus (vv. 17-41).

1. Fear fell on all (v. 17). News of the casting out of these evil spirits created impressions favorable to Christianity.

2. It brought to the front those who professed faith in Christ while not living right lives (v. 18). They believed on Christ but had not broken from their sins.

3. They gave up the practice of black arts (v. 19). This means forms of jugglery by use of charms and magical words. No one can have fellowship with God while practicing these arts. They proved the genuineness of their actions by publicly burning their books.

4. The uproar of the silversmiths at Ephesus (vv. 23-41).

(a) The occasion (vv. 23, 24). This was the power of the gospel in destroying the infamous business of Demetrius and his fellows. They were not particularly interested in the matter from a religious standpoint, but because it was undermining the principal business of the city.

(b) The method (vv. 25-29). Demetrius, whose business was the mainstay of others of a similar nature, called a meeting and stated that much people had been turned from idolatry and that the market for their wares was materially weakened. He appealed to his fellows on the ground:

(1) Of business (v. 27). The world is willing to tolerate any kind of religion so long as it does not interfere with its business or manner of living.

(2) Of religious prejudice (v. 27). He became quite religious when his business was being interfered with.

(c) The issue (vv. 28-41). The speech of Demetrius gained his end. The crowd was enraged and cried in unison, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" (v. 28). This method of proving a point seems quite modern. The mob was quieted by the tact of the town clerk (v. 35).

First, he rebuked them for yelling for two hours to prove a point which everybody admitted (vv. 35, 36). Second, he showed that Paul and his companions were not guilty of any criminal act (vv. 37-39). Third, the people were in danger of being called to account for this riot should it come to the ears of Caesar (vv. 40, 41).

The Way of Life

It is wholly impossible to live according to divine order, and to make a proper application of heavenly principles, as long as the necessary duties which each day brings seem only like a burden grievous to be borne.

Cultivate Quietness

Cultivate the quietness as a means to the abiding in Christ! Expect the ever deepening quietness and calm of heaven in the soul as the fruit of abiding in him!

MT. LAKE PARK

We were favored with a call from an old-time friend of ours last Sunday. He arrived at the height of the storm—snow, rain and freezing temperature. He is a very busy physician in his home town and yet he had taken the time to drive a long distance for the sake of friendship. He boomed a greeting and his cheerful smile and hearty handshake dispelled the gloom of a cheerless day. He simply radiates happiness at all times, no matter what anxiety lies beneath. His motto of life is "take it on the chin, but smile and appreciate what you have."

An attitude such as this will make Thanksgiving Day this year more in keeping with the spirit of the occasion. True it is that the past months have been such as to try men's souls and the future is filled with anxiety. Riches have taken wings, homes disrupted and friends parted. Happiness and contentment have given away to sickness, distress and fear. And yet we who still have our loved ones, our homes and friends are infinitely better off than countless thousands.

Of course, many tables will not contain a Thanksgiving feast such as yesteryear, but a generous government is lavishly pouring out millions of money that no one need go hungry tomorrow. There is certainly a brighter day ahead. If all else fails, nature and nature's God will maintain a proper balance. And while we wait, let us wait in patience and with a smile.

Mrs. George Peddicord and son George, who have been occupying the John A. Clark property for some time past, have closed the house and returned to Fairmont.

Dr. Dorsey C. Peck, a prominent physician of Grafton, W. Va., was a professional caller in the Park on Sunday.

Mr. Harland Biggs and Miss Kathleen Jessee attended the homecoming for graduates at College Park Saturday where they witnessed an interesting football game.

Mayor and Mrs. Utterbeck and son Robert motored to Grafton on Saturady.

Rev. J. E. Johnson, of Oakland, one of the older members of the Odd Fellows Lodge at Loch Lynn, gave an interesting Thanksgiving talk in the I. O. O. F. lodge room on Wednesday evening.

John O. Morgan, army property custodian at the Beltsville C. C. C. camp, is spending a few days here with his family.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the U. B. church, Loch Lynn, Thursday morning, at 10:30.

Mrs. Henry Gibson and daughter Elizabeth are visiting in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sweitzer and granddaughter are spending the week in New York State.

Miss Margaret Rathbun is in Baltimore, the guest of her sister.

A class in gardening and poultry raising will start Friday evening under the direction of Harland Biggs in the Loch Lynn school building.

A class in home economics, under the supervision of Miss Dorothea Welch will be held each Wednesday afternoon in the Ladies' Aid Hall, in Loch Lynn Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Cal Cuppett have moved from their recent residence in Loch Lynn to a farm near Terra Alta. Otis Harris and family are now occupying the Cuppett property.

James C. Frame has returned from a business trip to Baltimore.

IN THE SPIRIT OF THE EARLY AMERICAN

This year, with every citizen vitally conscious of playing his part in the great drama of recovery, with every resource of the nation actively dispelling the gloom of depression, we have more reason to be thankful than at any time during the past several years.

With recovery in view, and a clear road ahead, this Thanksgiving will not be the hollow forced effort at gratitude for doubtful blessings it may have been in years past. It will not be a "Beau Geste" borne bravely on the shoulders of a people famous for undying hope and courageous fortitude. It will be, as it should be, more spontaneous and whole-hearted than any Thanksgiving since the World War.

Just as our forefathers felt called upon to pause in their activities and render thanks, grateful for their survival of that first "gloomy time" and stores supplied by nature for the winter that lay ahead, let us celebrate this Thanksgiving with genuine gratitude, thankful that we too have been active, meeting conditions as they are, and have arrived at a time when the future presents a definitely brighter aspect.

Fruit juices may be canned or bottled when left over, without sugar, and used later as needed by combining with gelatine. Left-over fruit juices may also be used in lemonades, for mincemeat, basting roast or fowl, or to cover baked ham.

Soap: Make a small cheesecloth bag four by six inches. Into it place all pieces of hand soap too small to use and hang bag in bathtub—good for cleaning the tub.

A few cloves added to vegetable soup will give it a delicious flavor.

After boiling salt beef leave two or three carrots in the liquid until cold—the carrots absorb the salt and the liquid can be used for soup.

In boiling corned beef, add a small onion, a pinch of ginger, a few cloves and a bay leaf. This will improve the flavor of the beef.

Saving salt—After freezing ice cream, empty the cracked ice into a sack. When the ice has melted nearly all the salt remains to be used again.

Salt often curdles milk. Hence in preparing gravies, porridge, etc., add salt the last thing.

If soup is too salty, add slices of raw potatoes and boil a few minutes, remove them, and if soup is still too salty, repeat the process. The potatoes can be used later in many ways.

Peas too hard for serving plain may be cooked until tender, pressed thru a sieve and the pulp used for soup.

Save all the liquid from your mustard pickles and add it to salad dressing in place of fresh vinegar and mustard. When making meat sandwiches this liquid may be mixed with the meat.

Save the excess liquor from your pickled peaches; it may be used for mince pies, sauces, etc.

Before heating milk in a saucepan, rinse the pan with water and it will not scorch so easily.

When filling gem pans, leave one of the small sections empty and fill with water—the gems will never scorch.

To brown pies and tarts, use a small pastry brush and brush them with milk before putting them in the oven, and to glaz pies, brush them with the white of an egg if you wish them to be a shiny brown.

When baking large potatoes, cut them in halves—it saves gas and the side cut gets a delicious crust.

PRECAUTIONS URGED FOR THOSE HANDLING RABBITS

Hunters Are Warned To Bring In Only Healthy Looking Ones

When you go gunning for rabbits, be sure you bag only healthy specimens. Avoid the animal that moves slowly—that seems stupid or dazed. That is the kind that is likely to be infected with tularemia.

Use rubber gloves when skinning rabbits or when preparing the meat for the market or the table; then cook thoroughly.

Because of the danger of contracting tularemia—rabbit fever—from infected rabbits, Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health, advises hunters, market men, food handlers and housewives—all who have any occasion to handle wild rabbits or other animals of that class—to take the foregoing precautions.

"Tularemia," he continued, "is the medical name for a fever that has been known to hunters and market people for a long time, but that was not definitely found to be due to handling diseased game until recently. It is an infectious disease to which rabbits and other small animals are susceptible. It is spread from animal to animal through the bite of infected ticks and also through the bite of a certain kind of fly. The disease attacks the liver and other parts of the animal and its presence can be recognized by tiny white, or yellowish spots scattered through the organs.

"The disease is contracted by human beings in handling or skinning infected game; through the bite of infected ticks, or even through crushing infected ticks. The infectious material may be absorbed through a scratch or a mere break in the skin, or in rubbing the face or hands while handling the animals. The disease usually starts with a severe cold and other symptoms that resemble grippe or influenza. In most cases an ulcer develops at the site of the infection. It has also been mistaken for typhoid fever, and it is often characterized by a typhoid-like fever of several weeks' duration. It is accompanied by great prostration and long, slow convalescence.

"The family physician should be sent for at once, for any who develop symptoms that suggest rabbit fever. The doctor's diagnosis may be confirmed by blood tests which the State laboratories will make at the request of the attending physician or the county health officer.

"Rabbit fever was made reportable in Maryland in 1928. Since then 101 cases have been reported: 46 in Baltimore City and 55 in the counties, with 13 deaths—6 in Baltimore City and 7 in the counties.

"Tularemia occurs principally in wild rabbits. It has not been found in domestic rabbits raised in rabbitries. Thorough cooking destroys the germ. Thoroughly cooked rabbit meat is harmless.

In Washington, scientists predict a very cold winter, forecasting a repetition of the extra cold winter of 1910 saying that weather repeats itself every 23 years.

At San Jose, Cal., John M. Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond, confessed kidnapers of Brooke Hart, were taken from the jail and lynched by a mob of 5000 persons. Governor James Rolph, Jr., approved the act of the mob, saying, "If any one is arrested for the good job, I will pardon them all."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The resignation of Prof. O. M. W. Sprague from the Treasury department at Washington recently with the warning issued by him that the nation is in danger of drifting into "unrestrained inflation" and a "complete breakdown of the credit of the government" if the present monetary policy is persisted in, may be taken as an indication that the battle between the inflationists and the anti-inflationists is now on in dead earnest. It may be finished in the coming session of Congress which promises to be one of the most interesting which the country has had in a generation. The resignation of Professor Sprague comes as no surprise, as it had been generally known in Washington for some time that he was out of sympathy with the administration's so-called gold policy. The most significant features of the resignation was that it proves the determination of the anti-inflationists to wage a battle to win public support, and to do it in no uncertain terms.

Professor Sprague is an economist of world wide reputation. He was formerly an adviser to the Bank of England, and resigned that post to come back to America to assist in the formulation of President Roosevelt's financial policy. When he found himself in disagreement with the policy there was nothing left for him to do but to resign. The resignation brings into the limelight the division which, according to rumor, has been present in the Treasury for some time, a division which led some time ago to the resignation of Dean Acheson as Undersecretary of the Treasury, and to place in that position Henry Morganthau, who is virtually Secretary of the Treasury during the enforced absence of Secretary Wooden due to illness.

One of the most surprising parts of Professor Sprague's statement is the one to the effect that since his return from London following the world economic conference there, he has had no opportunity to discuss policies with the President. This is especially surprising in view of the fact that Professor Sprague was supposedly brought into the picture to be one of the advisers of the President. This leads to the belief that perhaps all of the story has not yet "come out." It will be remembered that during the London conference Professor Sprague was one of the American experts who stood staunchly for some sort of international stabilization. The stabilization plan was vetoed by President Roosevelt who did not believe that it was at that time a good thing for American recovery, as the recovery program had been mapped out by the administration. It is barely possible that a rift developed at that time between Professor Sprague and the other advisers of the President with the result that the former was from that time on, more or less out of the picture.

The statement of Professor Sprague to the effect that the country is confronted with uncontrollable inflation and all its evils unless the monetary policy of the administration is changed, sounds the battle cry for the anti-inflationists and we will doubtless hear more from them in the future. Many of the economists supporting the administration plan have come forth with a denial of Professor Sprague's charges, and say that the plan being followed by the President is the only one which can prevent the very uncontrolled inflation which Professor Sprague fears, and they infer that unless the present plan works Congress will force drastic inflation on the country. Just what the outcome of the controversy will be remains for the future to tell.

Mr. Morganthau, in commenting on Professor Sprague's resignation, stated: "I think the sun will rise tomorrow and the birds will sing," thus intimating that the Professor's resignation would not be fatal to the country. It would seem to one on the outside that this is beside the point. What the public wants to be assured is where we are going, and just how much sound logic there is in Professor Sprague's statement. That is what matters. It will be remembered that the sun rose every morning over Berlin and the birds sang in the Black Forest regularly, when Germany was being ruined by a tidal wave of inflation which taught the people of the Reich one thing—that they would go through any other suffering rather than try it again.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1933.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The advisability of bringing natural gas by pipe line to Grafton from Mannington, a distance of thirty miles, was being discussed.

George Mason purchased part of the Colardeau property on Third street and was to erect a grist mill in the spring.

Ira E. Friend was named president of the county commissioners at the organization meeting. Jacob S. Meyers was appointed clerk and W. M. Coddington janitor of the court house.

A dwelling at Lake View, opposite the Park, occupied by Joseph Spiker, was burned to the ground, with a loss of about $800. Mr. Spiker was ill and was carried out, just before the roof caved in.

"The Society of Owls" was organize by ladies of Oakland with Mrs. King DeLawder, president; Mrs. H. J. Mayers, vice-president; Mrs. H. C. Sincell, treasurer; and Miss Jennie Porter, secretary. The object was not divulged, although it was said the members advocated Women's Rights and riddance of men from the country.

With the term of F. A. Thayer as postmaster expiring on January 8, a number had applied for the position including John W. Hart, D. M. Mason, E. I. West, A. J. Harne, and Dr. E. H. Bartlett.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Oscar Ashby, 19, Crellin, had his arm shot off by a charge from his own gun while out hunting. Just two weeks before he had been injured in the mill while at work.

The Oakland basketball team composed of Hart, Mit Sincell, M. Boyle, L. Fraley, and J. Boyle, with N. Fraley, Naylor and Sanner as substitutes, defeated Terra Alta 23 to 19.

The chestnut blight, which had been in Maryland about six years, coming from Pennsylvania, was beginning to be serious. Garrett as yet was little affected.

An explosion of accumulated gas tore up the engine room of the Dixon and Kelso flouring mill, and injured Samuel Aronhalt, Charles Caughey, and Gus Naylor.

Miss Anna Virginia Groshon, of Frederick, bequeathed $3,000 to St. Mark's Lutheran church, Oakland.

Work on the State road at Grantsville, which was almost completed, ended with the unexpected arrival of winter.

Messrs. Dixon and Kelso shipped 1,000 turkeys to Philadelphia, 1,000 pounds of chickens and 1,000 pounds of turkeys to nearby points, one turkey, coming from Frank Ashby, weighing 25 pounds.

Beyond The County

In Chicago, both Earle Wynekoop and his mother, a doctor, have been charged with the murder of the son's wife, whom the doctor claimed she shot after the woman had died from an overdose of chloroform.

In Washington, a protest of the Northwest Motor Company (Ford dealers) has been filed with the government objecting to the rejection of a low bid by it for furnishing motor equipment to be used in civilian conservation camps.

At Annapolis it is announced that the latest distribution by the Agricultural Administration to farmers for their promise to reduce wheat acreage next year, includes about 27,000 farmers in ten states, among whom are 289 in Cecil, totalling $20,000, and 193 in Harford county, Maryland, totalling $7,000.

In Spokane, Washington, a murder trial in progress was adjourned in order that the Court, jury and spectators might attend the annual football game between the university of Washington and Washington college.

At Bronxville, N. Y., as a result of an order by the police to refrain from kissing in the depot because it blocked traffic, that great parlor sport has become quite popular, especially between husbands and wives who have not indulged in the pastime perhaps for many years.

LIQUOR CHARGE BROUGHT AGAINST MAN AND WIFE

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster Herman Accused Parties

Daniel Webster Herman and his wife, of Rosedale, west of Oakland, have been placed under arrest on a liquor charge, with Herman in jail and Mrs. Herman out on bond.

Herman, convicted at the September Term of selling intoxicants, was fined at the time. The charge against him at the present is that of manufacturing liquor, possession and sale of the same. Mrs. Herman is charged with having sold a quart of moonshine to two parties who were accosted by officials as they were leaving the house last Friday, when a warrant was issued for the woman's arrest.

The paper was served by Federal Agents Harvey and Cushwa, who were accompanied to the house by Sheriff Haenftling and Deputy Sheriff Cole.

Gaining access to the house the officers used their eyes and soon found a still, 4 gallons of liquor, 40 gallons of mash and 90 pints of home brew.

In addition to the liquids the officers found and confiscated an account book kept by Herman in which the names of his alleged customers, with the amount of goods purchased at various times and the sum charged for the same is set down in orderly manner. Herman's customers are numerous, according to the record in the possession of the officers and includes a number who are now on the relief rolls of the county—and several who are not.

The book also contains the cost of materials bought for the moonshine plant and the cost of production, thus the record is complete.

Herman expected to be released from jail today by a bondsman but up to this time he is being detained in jail, his bondsman not having made his appearance.

AVILTON

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. W. C. Chaney on Thursday night, November 23, the event marking her fifty-third birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Chaney, Hazel, Lawrence, Connel, Naomi, Paul and Vera Chaney; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sonnenberg, sons William and Walter, of Frostburg; Mrs. Enoch Robeson and sons Harry, Edwin, Owen and Albert, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Broadwater, Mrs. Wilfred Garlitz and daughter Agnes; Donald, Ellis and Margaret Chaney, Everett Layman, Paul Morgan and James Harden, of Frostburg; Lawrence Poleman, Salisbury, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Chancy, Frostburg. Music and games were features of the evening. A buffet luncheon was served. Music was furnished by Robeson Brothers.

The worst storm we have experienced this winter visited this section on Sunday night, which brought with it rain, sleet and snow, accompanied by a gale of wind which approached hurricane proportions.

Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Scrogum and daughters Betty and Ruth Marie spent Sunday at the Enoch Robeson home. Mr. Scrogum preached at the Cherry Grove church Sunday afternoon.

Jesse Merrill and Herman Robeson spent Saturday in Oakland.

Jim Fike, of Uniontown, and George Fike and sister Mildred spent a few hours Sunday with their father, O. S. Fike, who is now at Annapolis.

ATTACK STATE TROOPERS EASTERN SHORE PEOPLE

sound truck was captured and sunk in the Wicomico river.

Troops were mobilized in Baltimore Monday night and were transported under secrecy to Salisbury. Before daybreak they conducted expeditions into Somerset county where the lynching occurred and made the arrests.

However, news of the mobilization leaked out and but four of the nine could be found.

These were brought to Salisbury and placed under special guard in the armory while the troops made additional plans to try to seize the others and prepared to take the prisoners to Princess Anne for a preliminary hearing.

Crowd Frustrates Plan

The latter plans were rudely interrupted about mid-morning when the roads leading from nearby counties on the Eastern Shore, Delaware and Virginia brought vehicle after vehicle loaded with men. They gathered around the armory.

As they gradually pushed to the doorways the officers ordered them to disperse.

"Get back," Reekord called. "We don't want to hurt you."

The crowd continued to come forward and the soldiers responded by cutting loose a barrage of tear gas bombs. It fell back momentarily, but again advanced. This necessitated another barrage and this time the crowd stayed back. The soldiers maintained their vigil with drawn bayonets.

Await Habeas Corpus Hearing

At Annapolis Attorney General William Preston Lane, Jr., last night intimated that he would order the four alleged lynchers arrested in Somerset county by troops, held until habeas corpus proceedings were brought to get them out.

"At a habeas corpus hearing," he said, "you can bring out all the evidence that you can get at a magistrate's hearing—and the thing we wanted all along is to get the evidence before the public.

"What's the use of going back down there when we have the men we beleive to be the ring leaders of the mob?" was Lane's answer when asked if the prisoners would be taken back to Somerset for a hearing before a magistrate. "As for arresting the other two, we could get them as witnesses, if necessary."

Boat in Boathouse at Lake Is Scuttled by Unkonwn Person

A twenty-seven foot motor boat, bought last summer by Raymond Kight of near town, and launched in Deep Creek Lake at the pier owned by Messrs. Ernest and Harvey Gortner, was scuttled and sunk on last Friday night after some unknown person had taken a pick and driven the point through the bottom of the vessel, permitting it to fill with water and sinking several several feet below the surface.

FORTY-FIVE MAJOR BILLS INTRODUCED BY ASSEMBLY

Would Reapportion Tax

Among the administration bills presented in the House hy Delegate James J. Lindsay, Jr., (Dem., Baltimore county) majority floor leader, was a measure reapportioning the state tax, specifying that the 3.4 cents now allocated to general governmental expenses go for debt service. This would make the entire 22-cent rate available for retiring debts.

An enabling act introduced by Delegate Lindsay is designed to allow counties, municipal and public corporations, special taxing districts and political subdivisions of the state, except Baltimore city, to secure the benefits of the national recovery act, and federal funds available under it. Baltimore has its own borrowing powers.

Banking Bills Introduced

Four measures dealing with banks and trust companies were presented in both houses. They would allow banks and trust companies by vote of a majority of their boards of directors to become members of the federal deposit insurance fund or federal reserve system. Provide that in case a new national bank is organized after receivership of a state bank, a member of the fund, the new bank must assume the deposit liabilities of the reorganized institution; allow banks and trust companies to establish and operate branches in state with approval of bank commissioner and continue operation of existing branches, and authorize boards of directors from five to thirty members instead of making the minimum number eleven.

KESSEL HURT; RESCUED, THEN KILLED BY AUTO

Jos. Ray Carrying Him Struck By Autoist During Storin

Harrison Arnold Kessel, Greenland, W. Va., was killed and Joseph Ray, Elk Garden, W. Va., suffered a fractured leg when struck by an automobile on Route 50 near Mount Storm about 6 o'clock Sunday evening.

Ray was traveling in his car with his family and a hitchhiker whose name could not be learned. They noticed the Kessel car over the bank near Stony River bridge. Ray stopped his car and he and the hitchhiker finding Kessel in an unconscious condition picked him up and were carrying him to Ray's car when another car driven by Joe Ridder, of Kitzmiller came along and struck all three men. Kessel was killed and Ray's leg broken. The hitchhiker was not hurt. Ray was taken to Potomac Valley hospital. The body of Kessel was taken to N. L. Roger's undertaking establishment.

It is claimed that snow was blowing on the mountain at the time of the accident and on account of it Ridder did not see the men on the road. A coroner's inquest was held Monday at which Prosecuting Attorney H. G. Mitchell, of Grant county, and Sheriff Duling of the same county, investigated the accident. Ridder was exonerated.

Kessel is survived by his widow and two children, his mother, Mrs. Miranda Kessel, five brothers and four sisters. Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon from his home at Greenland.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

This book, written by St. Luke, is in some sense a sequel to the Gospel by the same author, and is addressed to the same unknown person, Theophilus.

It is the history of the early Christian church from the Ascension of our Lord, Jesus, Christ, to Paul's imprisonment at Rome, as also of the opening of his ministry there Many Bible students see in this book the formal beginning of the dispensation of the Holy Spirit. The departing Christ makes the announcement of a great campaign of world-wide mission thru human agency, under the power of the Spirit: Chapter 1:8: "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

The book may be divided into two parts, the period of home missions, and the period of foreign missions.

The period of home missions began with Jerusalem as a center, according to the command of Jesus Christ, whom Luke identifies with the Holy Ghost in the introductory verses of the Acts. The work was carried on mainly in Palestine among the Jews; the Apostle Peter being the most prominent figure.

Several preparatory events may be noted as necessary antecedents to the vast missionary program announced by the Master, when he bade his disciples "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." These antecendents guaranteed His promise, "Lo, I am with you alway." First, then was the divine commission, Chapter 1:14-40. Then the Ascension, Chapter 1:10-11. Pentecost, or the descent of the Holy Spirit upon the disciples waiting in the upper chamber at Jerusalem, Chapter 2:1-4, and finally, the workers' equipment for their task, Chapter 2:4 and 31.

A volume might be written concerning the ministries of these spirit-filled men, but the merest reference to their mighty works must suffice. There are Peter's two great sermons, one at Pentecost and the other later, resulting in thousands of conversions. Also his address to the Sanhedrin, which must have stirred that body to its depths. Then the story of Stephen's martyrdom of the calling of Philip, the conversion of Paul, the daily accessions to the church, the Christian commune, when all things were had in common and none lacked.

Of course there was a period of persecution, largely directed by Saul of Tarsus, later to become a flaming evangel of the new faith; the broadening of Peter's views as to the plan of salvation, and the exorcise from him of the demon of intolerance by means of the vision of a great sheet let down from heaven, filled with all manner of ceremonially unclean beasts, accompanied by the command to rise, kill and eat, also with the assurance that what God had cleansed should not be called unclean.

The sending forth of Paul and Barnabas as missionaries from the Church at Antioch is perhaps the ephocal event In the history of foreign missions. This first missionary journey blazed the trail for all later enterprises of Christian world evangelism.

Paul made three great missionary journeys. Though the actual territory covered cannot he compared with the journeyings made by Livingston, Carey and Thoburn, yet from the standpoint of perils and dangers encountered, no later journeys can approach Paul's. This evangelist preached much at Jerusalem and Ceasarea, going at last to Rome, where his matchless career ended with martyrdom.

The Book of Acts has all the charm of romance while it presents in concise form the clearest historical statement of its times and the best biographical sketches of those makers of history in the Apostolic Church.

Girls vs. Boys in the Public Schools

DR. WEGLEIN EXPLAINS WHY THE FEMININE AVERAGE IS HIGHER

KATHERINE SCARBOROUGH

Any little girl, thanks to the pioneering of Miss Frances Perkins and Ruth Bryan Owen, now may look forward to the possibility of being a member of the Cabinet or an Ambassadress to foreign lands when she grows us, but, according to the laws of life and averages, there is less chance that she will turn out to be a genius than will the freckled boy next door who doesn't get nearly as good marks in school.

This is due to a number of things, all of which have been scientifically studied and charted and which show, beyond a doubt, that while, taking it by and large, girls are better students than boys, their sex always tends to keep to the middle of the road and to succeed up to a certain point, while it is the male who still soars to the heights of achievement in the world or plumbs the depths. Statistics show that there are more geniuses among men than among women and, by that same token, more idiots.

And yet, according to Dr. David E. Weglein, Superintendent of Education in the public schools of Baltimore and who, in his time, has taught both boys and girls, there is practically no difference in the native ability of the two sexes. Boys have just as much capacity for assimilating knowledge as girls have. Girls have just as much power to reason correctly as the so-called stronger sex.

Boys can learn to square the hypotenuse and fathom the mysteries of pi—and so can their sisters. They can be taught the location of ancient trade routes in the Orient and to discuss intelligently the causes of the Gallic wars—and girls are equally capable in this respect. They can master the principles of Archimedes' Law and read "Henry Esmond" with understanding—and again the girls can keep pace. There is, in fact, no subject in the school curriculum in which one sex cannot make just as good a showing as the other, but when the exams are over and the reports come in it is the boys who have to do most of the explaining.

In literature girls get much better marks than the boys do. In mathematics and in science, subjects in which boys naturally might be supposed to leave the girls far behind, the girls still are in the lead. In history, a subject which might well appeal to both, the averages are closer, but the girls can point with pride to the fact that here, too, they actually have the better of the boys. The only courses in which they do not excel are, in short, those in which no girls are enrolled.

This condition holds true, Dr. Weglein said, among all sorts and conditions of public school students, from those in the kindergarten age to those in the last year of their high school course. Dr. Weglein has on file in his office carefully tabulated statistics which reveal the situation as it exists in every school in the city. And every school principal, incidentally, has been furnished with a copy of these statistics and thus put in possession of a royal prod with which to urge young masculine dawdlers who are under his (or her) jurisdiction to more and greater efforts, for the time is not yet come when the youthful male enjoys being beaten by a girl, new freedom or no new freedom.

"The apparent superiority of girls over boys in school," says Dr. Weglein, "is, however, only apparent. Boys could receive just as good marks as the girls do if they wanted to, but the trouble is they don't care as much about good marks as the girls do.

"In any consideration of the reasons girls make better grades in their studies than boys, three things must be taken into account. The first is native ability. In this respect tests, scientifically made, have proved that one is the equal of the other under the law of averages. The second factor is the environment to which they are subjected. Here is where the great divergence between the lives of boys and the lives of girls enters into the case.

"In spite of the fact that girls now are given much greater freedom than formerly was the case, boys still live in a larger world than girls do. From the time they are small children they are kept much less closely under the parental eye than are girls. They come into contact with more classes of society and are confronted with a greater variety of interests than girls. Their attention is given to things entirely outside their school life.

"Girls now participate in athletics, play on hockey and basket-ball teams, swim, play tennis and golf, it is true, but these activities absorb the attention of a relatively small proportion of all the girls who go to school. When they are in class comparatively only a few of them are waiting for the moment when the final bell rings and they are free to go out and engage in one of these sports. Most boys, on the other hand, are interested in games. They are a great deal more concerned about baseball or football or hockey or lacrosse than they are about studying their lessons. And most of those who aren't thinking about forward passes and home runs are planning to meet a crony or two and work on a radio set, or tinker with a family car or to hang around on street corners until it is time to go home to dinner.

"During the afternoons most boys don't want to stay in the house. On the other hand, a great many girls do. The feminine horizon has widened a great deal, it is true, but there is still a strong tie between girls and home life. After school has been dismissed many girls go either directly to their own homes or to the homes of some of their friends and study their lessons together. The concentration, the community interest, mutual helpfulness and the give-and-take of information which result go a long way toward enabling the girls to know most of the answers at examination time.

"To sit down quietly and study is irksome to the average boy. He wants to be moving about, exercising his muscles, active in some way. Some boys who really might prefer to sit down and study after school are deterred from doing so by the publicly expressed opinions of their classmates. They don't want to be called grinds and they do want to be doing what the other boys do. Many a boy who has a splendid mind and could stand well in his studies if he wanted to and would apply himself, gets poor marks simply because he will not work.

"In the classroom boys are much more restless than girls. Their infractions of discipline are more active. They throw things and tussle with each other. The misbehavior of girls is more subtle. One sex is no harder to manage than the other, but they must be managed differently. In the old days teachers whose pupils were boys received higher salaries than those whose pupils were girls on the theory that boys were harder to control. Today this is no longer true and the same teachers instruct both boys and girls.

"The third factor which enters into the education of children is formal training. This, today, is virtually the same for both sexes. We have learned by scientific investigation that the capacities of both are the same, so we give both exactly the same instruction. The only exceptions are courses in domestic science, which are open only to girls, and in industrial arts, which are open solely for boys.

"For some reason, it may be the survival of age-old instincts, girls conform more readily to school life than boys. They have an inborn desire to appear well in the eyes of the teacher and, therefore, they do what the teacher tells them to do."

The whole aim of school life now, according to Dr. Weglein, is to reflect as nearly as possible conditions in the world outside the school walls and to prepare students to meet the conditions of adult life without the shock of transition which formerly accompanied the step from school to a social or business career. As rapidly as possible movable furniture is being installed so that teacher and students may form a group which can sit face to face and discuss history or geography or other topics as a group of adults might do in a living room or club. This device, says Dr. Weglein, is showing marked results in the interest students manifest in their lessons and is much more natural than the old-fashioned method of seating students one behind another so that each saw only the back of the one in front of him.

Discussions, or socialized recitations, to use the technical name for them, are supplanting the question and answer method of former years and students who, for temperamental or other reasons, never did satisfactory work under the old system are forming ideas and acquiring a grasp on subjects which would have left them cold under a routine of questions and answers. Girls and boys alike make rapid progress in socialized lessons.

The same informality prevails in the method of changing classes which obtains in the schools where the higher grades are taught, and which also is a barometer of the changing standards of student behavior. Less than a generation ago students were required to march in line, two by two, with as little noise as possible, from one room to another. Talking in the corridors was not permitted, except in whispers during this ceremony.

"This was a wholly unnatural way to act," said Dr. Weglein in commenting upon the new deal in education. "I recall an incident that happened when I was a schoolboy which shows the differences not only between the methods of behavior then and now, but also in the concept of what constitutes misconduct. My class had agreed that, upon a certain day, each boy when going from a particular lesson to the next one would walk on tiptoe instead of proceeding as usual. Everyone kept the bargain. No one got out of line and no one spoke. In fact, there was a more complete decorum in that corridor than there had been for a long time at that hour, but the teacher in charge declared we were all out of order and sent us to the principal on the charge of misconduct.

"That couldn't happen now. We expect children to cooperate with the teachers and to promote the spirit of real education; to make good conduct an active and constructive thing rather than merely to observe prohibitions. If they do that, it doesn't make any difference whether or not they walk on tiptoe or talk a little too loud once in a while. Teachers now are encouraged to develop a sense of humor. They laugh with the children when something is funny and many an incident which, a generation ago, would have created a tense situation now passes off and is forgotten, leaving both teachers and pupils free to continue the real business of the schools, which is education."

This matter of creating in the schools a reflection of life as it proceeds beyond the school walls has been carefully worked out and is being scientifically applied. Freedom of movement and the relaxation of rules increase with the age of students. Those in the lowest classes, who spend the entire school day in the same room, are subjected to a greater amount of discipline than those in the intermediate grades on the theory that their judgment and habits must be trained to establish correct contacts with others.

The biological changes which take place in the human body at the age of adolescence, and their emotional consequences are taken into consideration in the supervision of the behavior of children of this group, and those who are in high school are permitted a maximum of freedom consistent with their development along both mental and physical lines. In this way, says Dr. Weglein, a child makes an ordered and natural progress in his behavior as a member of society at large from the time he enters school until he is graduated.

Ford V-8 Truck Breaks Transcontinental Speed Record

A stock model Ford V-8 1 1-2 ton truck broke all existing records for speed across the continent upon its arrival in Los Angeles from Atlantic City Wednesday at 8:13 p. m., making the run in 71 hours and 12 1-2 minutes. The truck carrying a certified load of over two tons left Atlantic City at 12:01 a. m., Monday and traveled the southern route for a total of 2945 miles, encountering rain, fog, snow and deep sand enroute. The machine passed through Grantsville at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning, November 20.

A remarkable record for economy in addition to speed was set with the use of only 322 gallons of gasoline and five quarts of oil for the entire 2945 miles. It maintained an average speed of 41.3 miles per hour and stopped only to re-fuel. Only one pint of water was added during the entire distance and no mechanical trouble was experienced.

In addition to the drivers the truck was accompanied by an official of the Keystone Automobile Club who certified as to the gas and oil used as well as to the fact that the truck was a stock model throughout. The official time was clocked by the Western Union.

Upon its return it will stop enroute at various Ford dealerships to afford public inspection.

The Flowers Count!

We have often received compliments on the care we give to the floral offerings at funerals. While this detail is sometimes neglected as unimportant, we feel that it is a duty we owe not only to the dead but to the surviving friends who have made sacrifices to provide this beautiful tribute of affection. For this reason we have purchased special equipment for arranging the flowers in the most attractive manner possible, and give the matter the most careful attention.

JAMES DODGE DASHED TO HIS DEATH IN AIR CRASH

Was Flying To His Home Near Town With Companion When Plane Wing Breaks While Over Cumberland

BODIES BADLY MANGLED

A plan to fly to Oakland to eat the Thanksgiving dinner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Dodge, and remain here a few days for the purpose of hunting deer, was never realized when James Harley Dodge, the son, and a companion, Preston Lee Miller, were instantly killed when their plane lost a wing and fell to the earth near Mexico Farms airport at Cumberland on Thursday afternoon. Their bodies were crushed and battered beyond recognition.

Dodge, a staff sergeant at Bolling Field, and Miller, aviation mechanic, of Martinsburg, West Va., had obtained leave and were traveling in their private plane, a low wing monoplane. They had stopped for dinner at Miller's home in Martinsburg, W. Va., and resumed their flight expecting to land at Weber's in time to get to the Dodge home, five miles north of Oakland, for the evening meal.

The flying conditions were considered so dangerous on Thanksgiving Day that no plane had taken off from the Cumberland hangar. The two men were flying about 500 feet above the Cumberland airport when a wing of their ship collapsed and was carried away, the wind at that moment being both strong and extremely gusty.

Eyewitnesses of the tragedy say that when the ship attempted to descend a wing broke away and the plane from a height of at least 500 feet dropped down on the West Virginia side of the river, while the wing fell on the Maryland side of the Potomac. Striking the earth with tremendous force the motor was buried in the ground and the body of the plane reduced to broken hits of wreckage. Miller was thrown out of the cockpit, while Dodge was crushed and his hody held beneath the dismantled motor. The men wore heavy flying suits and were otherwise protected from the cold.

Immediately following the crash, Cumberland police were notified and the city's rescue truck went to the scene where the bodies of the fivers were placed in blankets and taken to the Stein funeral home.

Dodge was identified by an Oakland High school ring which he wore.

The local young man is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Dodge and by two brothers and three sisters: Earl D. Dodge, of Westernport; Charles Dodge, a mechanic at Bolling field; Mrs. Elmer Hostetler, Johnstown, Pa.; Miss Dorothy Dodge, of Cumberland, and Miss Virginia Dodge, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

ROAD APPROPRIATION FOR THIS COUNTY OVERDRAWN

Account for Garrett Is $49,038.-66 Over Amount Allotted

Fifteen of the State's twenty-three counties have overdrawn the highway appropriations due them under the State maintenance and construction act of the last Legislature which took away from the local Boards of County Commissioners the right to build and maintain roads and placed this work under the direction of the State Roads Commission, according to the financial report of the commission, made public late during the past week.

According to the report, Garrett county's overdraft is $49,038.66. The City of Baltimore and eight counties have unexpended balances, the city having $68,130.21 to its credit. Baltimore, Caroline, Carroll, Charles, Somerset, Queen Anne's, Washington and Worcester counties show balances from $8,650.68 for Queen Anne's to $156,464.98 for Baltimore county. Overdrafts run as high as $172,441.97, in Harford county. Anne Arundel has the smallest sum in the overdraft, it being $5,670.05.

County Systems

The figures given above do not include the money to be spent on the State-wide system, but only on the county systems now under State maintenance.

Since last March, when the commission begun taking over the county systems, the employes of the commission have increased in number from about 2,300, with a monthly payroll of about $206,000, to about 5,900, with a payroll of about $343,600.

The next pay will be for the full week, and 766 men will be on the roll, it was stated. The approximate sum will reach above $10,000.

"Since people have found that they might be given a 30-hour-a-week job, many more have applied at this office," Miss Miller said. "Forty-four applied Monday and 38 on Tuesday. There are still 370 on direct relief."

PROHIBITION AT AN END; PASS STATE LIQUOR BILL

Garrett County Is Only Dry Area In Maryland—Utah Is Last State To Ratify

19 STATES ARE NOW OPEN

Utah, late Tuesday, wrote an end to National prohibition in a decree that opened the doors of liquor shops in nineteen states. Almost half a dozen other states are completing plans for legalizing the sale under their own laws. The remaindr of the nation stays dry, for the present at least.

There was little ceremony at the signing of the presidential proclamation which officially declared prohibition at an end. Thirty-three states, beginning with Michigan, had ratified the twenty-first amendment to the Constitution previous to Tuesday. Pennsylvania and Ohio ratified the amendment early Tuesday and Utah was the 36th state, signing at about 7:30 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Maryland Measures

In Maryland the State-wide liquor control bill became a law at 8:28 on Tuesday night. Garrett county is the only dry area in the State.

The regulations for the sale of beer, wines and whiskey in the 23 counties vary greatly. They range from provisions in St. Mary's county, where licenses for the general on and off sale of whiskey and fortified wines, with taverns permitted, may be obtained for $100, with a $25 charge for an on and off-sale beer license, to dry Garrett county where the sale of alcoholic beverages is prohibited.

Reemployment Manager Urges All Unemployed To Register

The local National Reemployment Office wishes to announce that everyone who is unemployed in Garrett county should register at once in order to secure positions as they are available. Those on the relief list who are not registered at this office must do so under the Civil Works Administration plan, it was stated.

An urgent appeal is made to those who have secured employment thru any othere source to report the fact at the reemployment office immediately so that their applications may be filed accordingly.

There are about 1000 registered at the local office, according to Milburn Mann, manager.

DEER HUNTERS OUT IN FULL FORCE TO TRY THEIR SKILL; THIRTY-THREF REPORT HAVING BEEN SUCCESSFUL

Official Results of 4-Day Chase Have Not Yet Been Tabulated; Strange Tales Related

NO ACCIDENTS REPORTED

Deer hunters were out in full force bright and early each morning of the open season for hunting the swift foot denizens of the forest.

The net results of the chase have not been tabulated, but it is practically certain that no more deer were killed this season than last, in spite of an extra day for hunting made possible by an act of the legislature by an act passed a year ago, and in spite of the fact that deer are reported to have increased greatly in numbers during the past twelve months.

The open season in Garrett county extended from December 1 to December 5, inclusive, which really meant a four-day season because of Sunday on which day hunting is prohibited.

There were no hunting accidents reported, although the woods were full of hunters during the entire open season. When one hunter who had spent all of the four days without success was asked how many went in one party, he replied, "We started out usually with three or four, and when we got out in the woods we usually met up with fifty or sixty more."

Some strange tales are reported. While many of the veteran hunters returned empty-handed and disgusted with the world, saying this was no weather for deer hunting, those less experienced but no less able shots, remained out as long as possible and in many cases were successful in bringing down a buck.

Roy Chisholm, well known to the more elderly people of the county as a noble hunter many years ago and a crack shot with the rifle, celebrated his seventieth birthday on Monday by shouldering his rifle, going into the woods and after a brief absence from his home returned with a fine animal which he shot on Mill Run, near Selbysport.

Another resident, not hunting or probably not thinking of a hunt, killed the largest deer reported, it being a 14-point buck which courted death by hobbling into the door yard of a farm house near Hutton when it was shot by the owner, Victor Kelly, when he was told of the animal's presence by Mrs. Kelly. The quarry had been wounded by a hunter and in trying to escape wandered into the Kelly yard.

But the majority of those engaged in the chase scoured the forests for their deer or waited patiently at the well-known deer crossings.

While the number of successful hunters does not loom so large, the number to enjoy eating the venison reaches quite a large figure, as those who brought down a prize seemed to deligt in passing out choice morsels to their friends so that as many as possible might share in their good fortune.

The total list thus far reaches 33, although only eighteen of these have been given The Republican as official by Game Warden Richard S. Browning. The names of the remaining fifteen have been learned from various sources, as follows:

B. W. Harvey, Mt. Lake Park; Bruce Lohr, Deer Park; Patrick Durst, Oscar Wilt, Jennings; Roy Bittinger, Ross Rexrode, Swanton; W. A. House, Accident; M. R. Porter, Frostburg; James Wilburn, Ollie DeWitt, Hoyes; Christian P. Coulter, Victor Kelly and John O'Hara, Hutton; Karl Kahl, William Coddington, Frank Schell, William H. Johnson, Oakland; J. J. Jackson. These are all official.

Others who succeeded in killing their quarry were Scott Shreve, Elmer Kitzmiller Charles Fulk, Stuart F. Hamill, Frank Browning, Oakland; Roy Chlsholm, Selbysport; John McBee, Westernport; Henry Patton, Hobart Speicher, Lee Beachy, A. R. Wright, Grantsville; D. C. Ridings, Steyer; Cass Welch, John O'Haver, Crellin; Martin L. Groves, Swanton.

EXPECT TO END SESSION OF LEGISLATURE FRIDAY

Only One Point of Governor's Emergency Program Enacted

With liquor control legislation put out of the way, it was expected that the Senate and the House would terminate the extra-ordinary session of the legislature by Friday.

No part of Governor Albert Ritchie's six-point emergency program has as yet been enacted save the liquor control law, and there was a concerted drive to weed out unneeded legislation and give the right-of-way to the vital proposals.

ELECT GLADSTONE MORRIS HEAD OF PYTHIAN ORDER

Semi-Annual Election of Officers Chosen Friday Evening

Gladstone Morris was chosen chancellor commander of the Knights of Pythias lodge at the semi-annual election of officers of that organization last Friday evening. Others elected include the following:

Charles F. White, vice-chancellor; Scott W. Shreve, prelate; J. J. Ashby, Jr., master at arms; Lee R. Mason, master of work; Walter Hardesty, keeper of records and seal; Milburn W. Mann, master of finance; A. G. Gortner, master of exchequer; Arthur Lawton, trustee; William McRobie, inner guard; Clayton Winters, outer guard.

Stanley Stahl and Lee Mason were named representatives to the grand lodge, with George Fulk and Harry Stemple as alternates.

Installation of the newly elected officers will occur the first meeting night in January. The rank of esquire will be conferred upon the remaining nine candidates at the regular meeting this Friday evening. Two classes of ten each were given the rank at previous meetings. The twenty-nine new members are a special class, having been given their first rank at Cumberland about three weeks ago.

"SUNBONNET GIRL" TO BE PRESENTED FRIDAY NIGHT

Large Cast in Operetta to be Given by O. H. S. Glee Club

The "Sunbonnet Girl", a comic operetta in two acts will be presented in the high school auditorium by the O. H. S. Glee Club on Friday, December 8, under the direction of Miss Ruth Conley.

The cast includes Ethelrae Welling, Margaret Stanton, Dora Spoerlein, Mary Helbig, Robert Altstetter, Sally Jones, Irving Broadwater, Ruth Hamill, Catherine Moon, Richard Gonder, Lillian Miller, John McIntire, John Michael, John Treacy, and Lena Lambert. Besides the cast there are approximately fifty other members making up the chorus. A large crowd is expected to attend. Tickets are on sale.

Synopsis

The scene takes place in a small country town. Susan Clifton, the Sunbonnet Girl, is the orphaned child of musical parents. She has been left in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Scroggs, a skinflint couple who have starved and stinted her.

As the scene opens the president of the State Federation of Music Clubs arrives in the village with her daughter Barbara, her son Bob, and his chum Jerry, to conduct a contest for certain scholarships in music. Sue asks to be allowed to take part but Mrs. Scroggs, encouraged by her daughter Evaline, harshly refuses to allow it. Barbara, Bob, and Jerry tell Sue they will try and help her. Sue tells them that she believes her parents left her some property but that the Scroggs refuse to divulge the nature of it. They promise to help her by telling the village constable.

The opening of the second act discloses all the young people of the village gathered for the music contest. Various members of the group take part, but when the name of Susan Clifton is announced much surprise is shown. She sings her solo and is awarded the prize.

Plenty of humor is afforded by various comic types including Mr. Scroggs, the henpecked husband; Jerry, the Breeay colloge youth; Evaline, the Shrewish vixen; and Reuben McSpavin, the simple son of constable McSpavin.

Clear and cool weather generally for the early part of December has given winter a set back in Garrett County, for a few days at least. The temperature at night has gone below freezing.

SEVENTEEN NEW HIGHWAY PROJECTS ARE APPROVED

Four Already Under Way With Eight More To Start Friday; to Continue Four Months

INCLUDES STATE ROADS

Seventeen new road projects that are designed to require the expenditure of $30,000 per month for four months within Garrett county, have been approved by the State Roads Commission and the Civil Works Administration, according to A. H. Wilson, county road engineer for the State Roads Commission.

Four of these projects are already under way with eight more starting on Friday. The new projects will employ 800 men who were formerly employed on the twenty-eight R. F. C. jobs throughout the county.

The work will include improving county roads to secondary highways and the widening of State highways.

County road projects include the Blooming Rose road, 4.39 miles; the Bloomington mountain road, 2.5 miles; Hoyes Run road, Sines to Sang Run, 3 miles; Grantsville to Bittinger road, 1.5 miles; Oakland-Underwood road, 1 mile of new road and 2 miles of revamped road; North Glade road, ½ mile; Table Rock-Kempton road, ½ mile; Lonaconing-Merrill road, ½ mile.

All roads will have a stone base, choked with stone dust and will be known as water-bound macadam.

The widening of roads will be confined to State highways. There are two projects on Route 37, 8 miles, two feet on each side; one on Route 50, and one on the Kitzmiller-Sand Flat road. Two other projects, one on the Kitzmiller road and one on the Loch Lynn-Gorman road, are merely clean-up jobs —eliminating embankments to make for clearer vision around curves.

Mr. Wilson will be in charge of the county projects, while Harold Rook will have charge of the State highway work.

COUNCIL WILL CONSTRUCT NEW SEWER LINE AT ONCE

Erection of Additional Reservoir Also Discussed at Meeting

Work will begin immediately on the construction of a sewer line from Third street to the Frank Browning property, at the north-east edge of town, it was announced after the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council, on Monday evening, The sewer will be approximately 1,000 feet in length. Labor will be furnished by the Civil Works administration, with the town council furnishing the material.

The probable erection of a second reservoir for the town was discussed by members of the council. At a meeting last Wednesday night the committee also discussed this project and a report of the specifications and costs of erection are to be reported by December 11. The work would be done under the Civil Works administration.

A second reservoir for Oakland would serve several purposes, according to council members. It could be used in case of repair work on the other one, without endangering the fire control supply, and could also be used to store water for the town's use, in case of a severe drought such as was experienced here several years ago.

There was also some talk of the swimming pool at the Wednesday night meeting, but nothing further was done in regard to the proposed municipal building. A site for the swimming pool suggested yesterday was a place along Wilson Creek, near the north edge of town, providing other arrangements could be made of sewage disposal, now emptying in the creek.

The council meeting on Monday night was the first in years, it was said, that no person appeared before the body to want something done or ask permission for a building permit, or a similar request. Monthly bills amounting to approximately $800, were ordered pald.

Lesson for December 10

PAUL IN CESAREA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 24:10-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men. Acts 24:16.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Returned Missionary.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Prisoner Before a King.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Have a Good Conscience.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Way of Life.

I. Paul Tarrying in Philip's House (Acts 21:8-14). He was bound for Jerusalem. On his journey thither he took up his abode with Philip who had so successfully wrought as an evangelist in the early days of the church. While entertained in this home, Agabus, by symbolic act using Paul's girdle, portrayed the binding of Paul at Jerusalem. The meaning of the words of the disciples at Tyre is to be understood in the light of the Spirit's revelation through Agabus. To the Tyrian disciples the Spirit made known the fact that suffering awaited Paul. To Agabus the Spirit made known what kind of suffering. The same Spirit made known to Paul what awaited him at Jerusalem and sent him forward into it.

II. Paul before Felix (Acts 24:1-27).

1. Paul arrested in Jerusalem (Acts 21:18-40). Paul, at the advice of the elders of the church of Jerusalem, took a Jewish vow in order to conciliate the Jews. Even if it did conciliate the Jewish brethren, it greatly enraged the unbelieving Jews, inciting them to mob Paul. On the basis of supposition these maddened Jews dragged him from the temple and beat him unmercifully, intending to put him to death.

2. Paul accused (Acts 24:1-9). Paul is now in the hands of Felix who determined to hear his case after his accusers had come from Jerusalem. The case against him was formally presented by Tertullus, a Roman lawyer. The charge contained four counts:

(a) A pestilent fellow (v. 5). This would indicate a fellow utterly base and corrupt—a plague.

(b) An inciter of rebellion (v. 5). This they hoped would bring him into conflict with the Roman power.

(c) The ringleader of a sect (5). The aim in this charge was to throw contempt and suspicion upon the Christians, thereby bringing Paul into deeper trouble.

(d) Profanity of the temple (v. 6). In this charge they wilfully suppressed facts.

3. Paul defends himself (vv. 10-21). This defense is a superb example of the strength and dignity of a man whose life is actuated by a noble purpose. Observe:

(a) Paul's frankness and courtesy (v. 10). He freely recognized the fact that Felix had been ruler long enough to be able to form a just judgment, and assumed that Felix would render a decision on the basis of facts.

(b) Charge of sedition denied (vv. 11, 12). He showed the utter falsity of the charge on the ground of the shortness of time, and also on the ground of his conduct while in the temple, even challenging proof of their accusation.

(c) Charge of heresy (vv. 14-16). This he met by a concession and a denial. He admitted that he was of this "way" which they called heresy, but denied that Christians were heretics. He showed that his actions were in keeping with the Hebrew religion, worshiping the same God, believing in the same Scriptures and had the same hope of a coming resurrection of the dead.

4. Felix trembles before Paul (vv. 22-27). Wicked as was Felix, Paul's manner won his favor though it did not secure the apostle's release.

III. Paul before Agrippa (Acts 25:26).

The occasion of his appearing before Agrippa was the visit of Agrippa and Bernice to Festus. More than two years had elapsed since the trial before Felix. During this time the Jewish hatred for him had not abated. Upon the arrival of these guests they expressed a desire to hear Paul. Before these distinguished personages Paul boldly witnessed. The gospel should be preached to all, regardless of wealth or station in life. As a result of Paul's defense Agrippa was almost persuaded.

Ideals

As we advance into life, out of larger experience of the world and of ourselves, are unfolded the ideals of what will be possible to us if we make the best use of the world and of ourselves taken as we are.

Greatest of Mistakes

The greatest mistake which Christians have ever made is in thinking that charity is the beginning and the middle and the end of all religion. It is the end, as peace is the end of war. It is not the beginning.

More Necessary

When we want to make anything a success in worldly affairs we put our whole heart into it. And is this not much more necessary in the service of an holy God? Is he not worthy?

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Well, here it is Thursday, and I've still got TURKEY.

I never thought I was buying a whole week's supply of meat but even if I had thought, we would still have had turkey.

First there was the roast turkey on Thanksgiving. That was delicious for several reasons. It was well done, juicy, and I hadn't eaten turkey since the boss editor's supply had run out.

The next day we had cold turkey. The next day was warmed over turkey. The next day for lunch, we had turkey soup, made from the bones. Here at last, I thought, we were coming to the end of things. But I was fooled. The balance of the meat had been cut off and saved for another day, so the next day we had ice-box turkey.

For supper that evening we had waffles and creamed turkey. And now warmed over creamed turkey for the next day was surely the last. But this morning I glanced in the ice box, and do you have any idea what I saw there? The gizzard, liver, neck, heart, and all the other giblets, if there are any, waiting to be made up into more turkey. The neck, if you want to know, had to be cut off in order to get the bird in our roaster. And even then it wouldn't be persuaded to fit the roaster until we also cut off the bird's oil can in that always prominent section of his carcass, the eastern or western section, depending, of course, upon which direction his head points.

And only 18 more days until Christmas. Christmas is also a Turkey day. I am strictly in favor of calling it a Turkey week, especially when there are only two or three in a family who can work out old Tom. But do you think we'll get another one for the coming holiday? Do you think we'll struggle along for a week trying to get rid of it? Do you think we'll get as big a one as we had before? I'll say we will!

Isn't It Disgusting

Either somebody was running his washing machine Sunday night or some other somebody was having a lovely time with an electric motor. Anyway, just when it came time to listen to Jack Benny over the radio all I could hear was some machine gun bullets hitting a tin pan. And if you think I liked that, just ask me.

An editor is supposed to do many things, but it remained for a brother editor in Virginia to tell this story of an editor sending out advice on how to rid a man's hen house of lice and telling another what to do with his twin sons who were at the teething age and who had lost their mother.

Everything would have been all right, the editor states, if he hadn't got the letters mixed.

The anxious father received the following advice: "Cover them over carefully with straw, pour kerosene on this and set fire to the mess. The little pests after jumping about this for awhile will soon give up the ghost and you will be well rid of them. Be careful, of course, not to set the house on fire."

The other man got a letter that simply said: "Give them castor oil and rub their gums with a bone."

Now that prohibition has been repealed, on what are the people going to blame crime. Ten to one that before long, they will blame crime on the lack of prohibition.

DIFFERENCE IN A LOT OF FOOD AND THE RIGHT KIND

Dr. J. H. M. Knox Discusses the Kinds of Foods that are Needed

"There's a great difference between an abundance of food and the right sort of food," Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said recently in discussing the kinds of food that are needed by growing children.

"Up to about twenty-five years ago, people used to think of food," he continued, "largely in terms of quantity. But as a result of the work that has been done in the laboratories, a great deal has been found out about the needs of the human body, the way the human machine works, and the way the food we eat meets those needs.

"Now, instead of talking about heaping platefuls of food, we hear more about 'balanced' meals. By 'balanced' meals, we mean combinations of foods which answer all the necessary requirements for growth and good health. We also hear a great deal about 'vitamins.' These are certain substances contained in foods that are needed to promote growth and to keep the body in a healthy condition. They are found especially in milk, cream, butter, eggs, whole grain cereals, green vegetables and fresh fruits.

"Foods can roughly be divided into three groups—protective; body building and regulating; heat and energy-giving.

"The protective foods are those that are required for growth and to prevent certain diseases. Milk, green vegetables, fruit and eggs belong to this class.

"Body building and regulating foods are those that build up the framework and structure of the body, and that keep it in good condition. Lean meat, liver, kidneys, milk, cereals made of whole grains, fruit and green vegetables belong in this class.

"The heat and energy-giving foods include milk, butter, cream, bread, bacon, hominy, molasses, syrups, and sweet desserts.

"You will notice that milk, butter, whole grain cereals, green vegetables and fruits have, what may be called the place of honor in all of these groups. That is, they contain the essential parts of the diet of all growing children.

"Growing children need very little meat. However, every child should have at least a pint of milk a day, either to drink or in his food. Warm milk is more easily digested than cold milk.

"Growing children need a certain amount of fat—especially in the form of butter, or cream. Avoid giving children fried foods.

"Children need only a small amount of sugar in addition to that found in milk. The best way to supply the additional sugar needed is as a sweetening of cooked fruits, or in simple puddings, or custards. Don't let them get into the habit of eating candy or other sweets between meals."

WE HAVE BEEN CRITICISED
And Many Times Advised: "Defend Yourselves"—Here's Our Answer

This company along with most public utilities has been and is under unfair criticism and unjust attack from certain sources, chiefly political.

Hitherto it has been our belief that the friendly attitude of our customers and those with whom we have done business for many years was the best answer we could make to these criticisms. And that because of the knowledge which our customers and business associates had of us, it was not only unnecessary but inadvisable for us to undertake to make any answer to these critics or make any defense of our position.

Many of our friends and customers have hitherto advised this attitude, but the increasing activity of these critics seems to have brought about a change, and our friends are now as insistently recommending that we answer these attacks as they formerly urged us to pay no attention to them. Recently a very heartening and encouraging letter was received from a prominent and active business man, wholly unconnected with the utility business or with this company, urging us to come out vigorously and protect ourselves. In this letter he said:

"I feel that the time has come . . . . when the 'Public Utilities' ought to come right out in the open and make a clear cut effort to protect themselves, and that, in the same manner as those who are against them are using."

Accepting this advice as well as similar and very numerous suggestions, it has been decided to give our customers and the public the facts regarding this company, its management and policies and to meet as fully and fairly as our ability permits untrue and unjust criticisms upon this company.

To this end we propose, in a series of advertisements which will appear from time to time, to answer these statements and to explain to the public our position and policies and pertinent facts relating to our business.

To the best of our ability and with complete integrity the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company has been operated in the interest of the people of this community, because in the final analysis their interests are ours. What helps the community, helps us. We have sought to furnish an adequate and efficient service at reasonable cost as our best contribution to the people's welfare.

As these statements and this information are presented from time to time through advertisements and otherwise, we want you to read and consider them.

We will no longer remain silent in the face of continued efforts to damage our good name and destroy our business.

M

F. M. Alexander
President.

III.—"Thou shalt not seek excessive profits from thy neighbors.

IV.—"Thou shalt speak the truth always, even tho it may hurt thyself.

V.—"Thou shalt be guided by true quality, instead of false reflection.

VI.—"Thou shalt not try to pick out faults of thy neighbor when thine own are so evident.

.THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1933..

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The boiler of a saw mill owned by D. W. Bussard, Bethlehem Settlement, in Garrett county, exploded, wrecking a portion of the mill. No one was injured.

The Society of Owls had issued invitations for a "tacky party" at the Glades Hotel. The invitations requested the guests to attend in costume and to "come early and stay late."

The Glade Valley letter stated that the laws about swearing or fighting on school premises was very strict, the offenders being dealt with to the full extent of the law, but, the letter continued, "it seems that some of our Democrats from Oakland can curse, fight and get real drunk without even so much as notice being taken of it."

Thomas Darnell, charged with the shooting of Frank McFadden, at Gorman, and George Marvill, charged with assault with intent to kill George Marley, at Deer Park, escaped from the local jail. At the time it was inferred that the son of a former United States Senator from West Virginia had passed saws into the jail with which the two men severed the bars and made their escape.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Oscar Ashby died as a result of his injuries received in a gunning accident while hunting.

O. H. S. students making not less than 80 per cent in subjects and 95 per cent in conduct included Carrie Mann, Felix Robinson, freshmen; Louise Harned, sophomore; Dottie Doman, Lulu Friend, Delbert Davis, Harold Dawson, Robert Garrett, Playford Naylor, juniors; Edward Chance, Bernard Faherty, Percy Thayer, Robert White, Hellice Rathbun, seniors.

A glancing load of shot fired at a running rabbit while Harper Bartlett, Dr. B. F. Selby, Dr. E. G. Selby and Bowie Johnson were hunting near Sand Flat, entered the back, neck and side of Dr. B. F. Selby and the back of Dr. E. G. Selby. The wounds were not of a serious nature.

One hundred twenty witnesses were summoned to appear before the grand jury.

DIED.

Joseph Lynn Friend was born October 9, 1859, and died November 21, 1933, aged 74 years, one month and 12 days. His home was in the Swallow Falls section of the county. He was a member of the Methodist church, having joined when a young man. He is survived by one sister, Miss Annie Friend, and a half-sister, Mrs. Mary Lewis. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. T. C. Skipper on November 23 with interment in the Bray cemetery.

A number of children survive.

CLYDE BERNARD

Clyde Bernard, 38, of near Altamont, died suddenly Sunday morning at his home. He had been a sufferer from heart disease for a number of years.

Surviving are his wife and three children: William, Flora and Mabel; two sisters, Mrs. Ed. Ahern, Cumberland, and Mrs. Daniel O'Brien, Swanton, and one brother, Hurley Bernard, of Cumberland.

C. M. SINCELL IS NAMED SANITATION SUPERVISOR

Work Will Be In Cooperation With The Health Department

Dr. E. C. Peck, the county health officer, was called to Baltimore for a special conference of the deputy State health officers at the State department office last Saturday. This conference was called in order to place before the people of the State the unusual opportunity for making sanitary improvements which is offered by the Civil Works Administration program.

The objective of the government is to put as many people to work as possible, very promptly, and projects are favored which can be finished in a short time. In the case of projects of a public nature, not only labor, but also materials will be paid for by the government in many cases. In the case of projects carried out on private property materials must be paid for by the owner of the property in almost all cases, Dr. Peck stated.

As a result of this conference, Mr. C. Milton Sincell has been appointed as county supervisor of community sanitation projects in Garrett county. He will work in cooperation with the health department to promote any improvements in sanitation which can be made during the next three months.

A county-wide improvement in sanitation of the rural schools is expected, in addition to work done on public projects. There is a special group of seventeen men available for sanitary projects on private property in Garrett county. It is proposed to begin at once to improve the condition of the sanitary outbuildings in all the homes near Oakland where sewerage connection is not available and the present facilities are not of the best modern type.

A detailed list of the materials necessary for building an outbuilding of the type approved by the United States Public Health Service has been prepared and furnished to the dealers in building material in this vicinity. In many cases second-hand material can he used so as to effect a saving.

Any person who will provide the necessary material for the construction of a modern privy on his property should notify Mr. Sincell or the health department at once. Labor and supervision for completing the work will be furnished without cost to the property owner, thus saving him about $20 and providing work for 4 men for over a day. It is strongly urged that all property owners take advantage of this opportunity to cooperate with the President's program and so improve their own property and the general sanitary condition of the community.

MT. LAKE PARK

Burglars Persistent

Those birds who twice in as many weeks burglarized Braethorn certainly evidenced their utter disregard for publicity and contempt for constituted authority. The second entry into Mrs. Campbell's hotel occurred on Sunday night, approximately two weeks after the first, when they stole a quantity of silverware, as we are advised. It is the opinion of the authoritics that two separate gangs engineered the two burglaries, as the modes of entry were different.

But absentee owners may rest assured that the Mayor and Council are alive to tthe situation and are conducting investigations which ought to produce favorable results. A definite clue has been uncovered, which is being followed with all diligence, and it is believed that the guilty parties will soon be apprehended.

As we have stated several times, the situation surrounding the Park offers untold opportunities for depredations of this kind, but the commission of felonies of this character is not confined to any community. In a nearby town twenty-five burglaries were committed in an eight-months period, and it was only within the past two weeks that the guilty parties were apprehended, and they are now in jail, headed for a long stretch in limbo.

We are advised that two attempts were made to enter the recently-vacated Conner property within the past week, but on both occasions the would-be thieves were frightened away.

Last winter, or even the winter before, there might have been some slight excuse for those who stole to provide food for their families. But this winter there is positively no excuse. Through the Welfare Boards of the several counties and States provision has been made so that no one need go hungry. A man's calling or profession is no bar, if in need. The family of a preacher, the doctor, the lawyer, the laborer and the bootlegger are under no necessity to lack for subsistence. The Welfare Board of this county is composed of men of the very highest type. The executive secretary is a woman of understanding and ability; the office force is energetic and trustworthy, and the field workers are honestly endeavoring to eliminate actual suffering and want. If worthy, all anyone needs is to apply and they will be taken care of.

County Agent's Column

J. H. CARTER
Resident County Agent.
Office: Court House, Oakland, Md.

In answer to a number of questions farmers have been asking at the office of the county agent, in regard to the tax on pork and how they may benefit, similar to the wheat growers under the reduction agreement, Mr. Carter submits the following:

"Only two exemptions or refunds from the pork tax are specifically provided by the Agricultural Adjustment Act. No tax shall be required to be paid on the processing of live hogs by or for the producer thereof for consumption by his own family, employes or household. This means that a farmer may butcher or have butchered for him, hogs of his own raising for consumption in his own home, without having to pay a tax. If he butchers and otherwise processes hogs for sale, however, he is required to pay the processing tax. Butchers in small towns, and other commercial hog-slaughtering concerns, are required to pay the tax, regardless of where and in what manner they obtain their hogs from producers. Also any person delivering any hog product to any organization exclusively for charitable distribution or use shall be entitled to a refund of the amount of the tax paid."

"Any farmer who sells pork on the streets or otherwise will be required to write to the Collector of Internal Revenue in Baltimore for a permit to sell these products."

"A processing tax totaling 2 cents a pound will be levied on live hogs when the full tax goes into effect. On November 5 the tax levied was one-half a cent. This will be increased to 1 cent on December 1; to 1½ cents on January 1; and to 2 cents on February 1. The funds secured will be used to pay farmers who reduce their number of hogs 25 percent. The farmer does not pay this tax. It is paid by the processors of live hogs, such as packers. Farmers pay no tax on their hogs killed for home use or for use of their employees."

"The initial tax is 50 cents per hundred weight on live hogs"

EXACT FIGURES OBTAINED ON SWIMMING POOL COSTS

Large One at Piedmont Cost $7,088.55, Excluding R. F. C. Labor

With different opinions on the cost of a municipal swimming pool for Oakland, the estimated cost ranging from $5,000 to $25,000, it was deemed expedient to get exact figures from Piedmont, W. Va., where a pool was erected by the municipality last year.

These costs were obtained through John Rose, editor of the Piedmont Herald, who secured them from the records of the town and therefore may be taken as official. It will be noted the pool is 120 feet square.

The costs are as follows:

Stone	$899.20
Sand	510.90
Cement	1,811.30
Steel	300.00
Supplies for shovel and concrete mixer	152.20
Lumber for forms	385.75
Steel wire fence	709.00
Other costs	483.68
Total	$5,252.03
Special skilled labor paid by the city	1,756.52
Total cost	$7,008.55

These figures do not include the money paid for R. F. C. labor.

Complete engineering service was donated as was also the use of a caterpiller shovel for approximately thirty days.

The purchase of an electric pump and a chlorinator at approximately $1,500 has not yet been made. The city council plans to build a bath house next spring. The pool is 120 feet square, slopes toward the center from all four sides, depth of water from 2½ feet to 8½ feet.

The figures given above include the cost of fountain and wading pool bordering on the main pool.

The pool at Piedmont, of course, is an outside pool.

THIRTY-SEVEN MARRIAGES PERFORMED DURING WEEK

Number for 7-Day Period Takes Big Jump; 3 "Don't Publish"

The number of marriage licenses issued in any one week here took a big jump over the seven-day period ending Monday at noon when thirty-seven couples secured the necessary papers permitting the marriage ceremony to be lawfully performed. The number thus issued is above the average for this season of the year. The week-end contributed largely to this increase, as fourteen licenses were issued on Saturday and eleven on Friday.

During the three days of the present month of December when this record was taken, the number of licenses issued totaled 29. Last year's total for December was only 106, but the December record was made in 1930, when 131 couples were married. During November, 1933, 98 licenses were issued, which was below the number for the same month in 1932.

How Much Is In A Can?

A 6-ounce can of evaporated milk, bought for 4 cents, costs about 2 cents more per pound than a 14½-ounce can at 8 cents.

Some foods are advertised "4 cans for 25 cents;" or "3 medium cans for 20 cents;" or "Special, 6 cans for 23 cents" and so on. Perhaps they are good buys. But you cannot tell until you know how much is in each can. Cans are of many shapes and sizes—at least 27 different sizes.

Common sizes of cans for family use are No. 2 for vegetables and No. 2½ for fruits. No. 2 holds about 20 ounces, which makes 4 or 5 servings. No. 2½ holds 28 ounces or over, which makes 5 or 7 servings.

Smaller sizes are the buffet, or 8-ounce can, holding two small servings; the No. 1, or picnic size, holding about 10 ounces, or 2 average servings; the No. 1 tall can, holding 16 ounces, or 3 or 4 servings. Notices the difference between No. 1 and No. 1 tall.

If you buy vegetbales in No. 2 cans you probably pay two to four cents less per pound than if you bought the same food in No. 1, or picnic cans. If you buy fruits in No. 2 ½ cans you probably pay 3 or 4 cents less per pound than if these same fruits were in No. 1 cans.

Tomato juice comes in a dozen or more different sizes, with contents from 7 ounces up to 6 pounds 6 ounces. A 12½-ounce can at 10 cents costs 4.8 cents more per pound than a 50-ounce can at 25 cents.

Always read the label on canned or packed goods and watch the price.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, DECEMBER 14, 1933. NUMBER 44.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ENDS SESSION EARLY TUESDAY

Many Measures Are Disposed of —Ten Days Taken Up With Liquor Legislation

OTHER MEASURES LISTED

The first major extraordinary session of the Maryland General Assembly since the war-time meeting of 1918, closed at 2:25 a. m., Tuesday. The session lasted for 19 days.

Foremost among the problems and a question on which the assembly devoted the major part of the first ten days of its session, was the liquor control legislation. The state-wide control bill, with some exceptions allowable for purely local measures, went through both houses without difficulty after nearly 300 technical amendments were added. Garrett county reniains dry.

Other measures passed included:

Legislation permitting counties and the city of Baltimore to participate in federal emergency loans and public works projects.

Adoption of non-controversial proposals which let state institutions—banks and otherwise—come under the provisions of the federal home owners loan and deposit insurance acts.

Approval of measures to speed up criminal justice.

Indorsement in routine fashion of legislation required to give to counties and cities alike the necessary authority to make and receive loans for relief purposes.

The defeat of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge bill was accomplished quickly. The beauty parlor act, a repeal of the "Jim Crow" laws, a mortgage moratorium bill and several more came to natural ends without undue discussion.

The lottery bill looking toward the eventual legalization of state-controlled lotteries, died on the House floor.

Historical Calendar To Raise Funds For Crippled Children

An historical calendar, marking the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Maryland, is being issued by the Children's hospital school of Baltimore, in order to raise funds to help maintain the school.

The calendars are being sold for $1.00 each and the Maryland League for Crippled Children is assisting in their sale. Mrs. C. Milton Sincell is is charge for this county and the executive secretary of the Maryland League has sent her 50 to dispose of in Garrett county.

The sale of this calendar is necessary because the state and city have not made any increased appropriations to the hospital and many ealls are being received for hospitalization of patients. The hospital has been called a repair shop for the mending of broken children and many Garrett county children have been patients there.

The calendar is said to be beautifully illustrated, emphasizing the principal events in the early history of the state, and its correctness is assured by the fact that Matthew Page Andrews is associated in its production. Those desiring such calendars for themselves or as gifts are urged to see Mrs. Sincell.

Sleet Makes Traveling Dangerous; Tuesday Was Coldest Day of Present Winter

Pedestrians and motorists alike virtually skidded over pavements and streets of the entire county last night and today, as a sleet storm struck here. Auto windshields became encrusted with ice, making driving more hazardous.

State highways were cindered on the curves to prevent undue skidding.

Coldest for This Winter

The coldest day of the winter was experienced on Tuesday when the thermometer registered 1 below at Weber's, in the early morning hours.

Temperature generally throughout town was 6 above. There was about four inches of snowfall Sunday and Monday.

Blizzards, floods and zero weather in other parts of the country however, left a trail of death and destruction. six persons were dead, one person missing, hundreds were homeless in the Pacific Northwest. Two were dead from cold in Philadelphia, one in Delaware, and another in Baltimore. In the Allegheny mountains near Johnstown, two transcontinental and western mail planes crashed to earth, their wings burdened with ice. The pilots bailed out to safety.

BRUNSWICK BOOTERS WIN OVER KITZMILLER SCHOOL

Garrett Countians Pass Out of State Soccer Tourney, 3-2.

Kitzmiller High school, which provided a big surprise several weeks ago when it eliminated Bruee High school, defending state champions, from the P. A. L. soccer tourney, fell before the booting aggregation of Brunswick High school last Thursday at Westernport, 3 to 2.

Frederick county's standard bearer scored all of its points in the first 25 minutes of play while Kitzmiller registered its lone goal early in the second half, when Lincoln Strachan took a pass from Woodrow Craver and booted the ball under the cross bar.

The game brought together the heaviest and lightest teams of the tournament. Capt. Joe Strah was the spark plug of the Garrett eleven, while Goalie Charlie McIntyre made several nice stops of shots that were labeled field goals.

TWO SENTENCED TO JAIL FOR AUTOMOBILE THEFT

Clarence Paugh and George Harvey, Shallmar Youths, Given 90 and 60 Days, Respectively

MOTHER CAUSED ARREST

In swearing out a warrant for the arrest of Clarence Paugh, 18, of Shallmar, on a charge of unauthorized use of an automobile, Mrs. Jesse Prando unknowingly was responsible for getting her son, George Harvey, 20, arrested on the same charge.

At a hearing before Justice George G. Poole, at Kitzmiller, on Monday, both Paugh and Harvey were sentenced to 90 and 60 days, respectively, in the Garrett County Jail. A charge of larceny was not pressed against the youths, but both were convicted under the charge of unauthorized use of an automobile.

The Nash automobile of Jesse Prando, Harvey's step-father, was stolen last Wednesday and during the trial it was testified before the court that Paugh and Harvey went to the garage and foreed the lock with a poker. They drove the car to Shenandoah Junction, Va., and thence to Petersburg, W. Va.

The warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Paugh, and Roy Sowers, constable at Kitzmiller, located the machine at Petersburg, with Paugh in it asleep. A few minutes later Harvey appeared, having gone to a farmhouse for some gasoline.

Paugh pleaded guilty to his part in the matter but also stated that Harvey was with him all the time. Harvey admitted he was under the influence of liquor and he testified that he had found two pints of liquor beneath a pile of leaves near a tree. He said they were walking along when he noticed the leaves stacked up and kicking into the pile they discovered the liquor.

Paugh just recently returned from a C. C. C. camp in Virginia.

Santson C. Green Charged With Operating a 100-Gallon Still

The first arrest on the first day after prohibition had been outlawed and the legal manufacture and sale of liquor permitted, in any other county of Maryland except Garrett, was made Wednesday on Dry Fork Run, this county, when Federal Agent W. R. Harvey, of the Department of Justice Alcohol Beverage Unit, with officers, arrested Santson C. Green, charged with operating a one hundred gallon still on Meadow Mountain. A quantity of mash was also seized.

Green was given a hearing before Magistrate J. B. Emory at Bittinger and held under $500 bond for action of the Garrett county court.

The raiding officers found the still and mash and followed the drag tracks where the mash had been transported from the house where Green lived, to the still.

Town Applies for Erection of a Large Reservoir

Specifications calling for the erection of a large reservoir for the town of Oakland have been completed and application for the building of it has been presented to the Civil Works Administration for consideration, it was announced.

The reservoir would have a capacity of one and one-half million gallons, and when once full would have enough water to keep a swimming pool fresh all summer and supply all water needs that the town might have. It would be constructed near the present reservoir and be connected therewith by pipes of sufficient capacity.

Plans for a municipal building are also being drawn by architects and when completed will be presented to the Public Works Administration for consideration.

Reemployment Office Emphasizes Importance of Registering

The National Reemployment office, located on Liberty street, is emphasizing the importance of registering all the unemployed in Garrett county. It is also necessary for those now working under the Civil Works Administration thirty-hour plan to register at the National Reemployment office, according to Millburn Mann, manager, as future assignments will be made through that agency.

It is desired to make the registration 100 per cent in order that placements may be made accordingly. The office is open daily.

NEVER AGAIN

"How the well-dressed man bakes a cake," or how to surprise your wife, could be the title of this drama, but it isn't. I'll call it just a mess of ingredients .

As a rule a wife's birthday comes just once a year. It [illegible] in my case—or [illegible] they want as a present [illegible] wife [illegible]

As a rule, they will [illegible] ght in something unexpected, and the most trivial unexpectedness will give them the biggest thrill. My wife was no exception.

And did I give her a thrill? I'll say. I baked a cake.

Never having done such a thing before, I had to dress up for the occasion. Attired in pajamas, robe, bedroom slippers and a pink smock for an apron, I tackled the cake recipes, called "cake secrets. Secrets is entirely right. They don't mean to give a thing away, and [illegible] a mystery to me.

There was pineapple feather cake, but that was discarded as I had no feathers. Marble cake was passed over for the same reason. I had no marbles. Upside down cake was also out, as it said to serve it upside down and I already had a headache.

There was gold cake, but if Roosevelt knew I was hoarding gold I knew he might confiscate it. Only sponge cake was left, so I studied the kinds. Economy sponge was seleeted so that it wouldn't ruin too much.

In the midst of my flour sifting I had callers, and was my face red? [illegible] been given to Frank the dog.

The only trouble is that I didn't see the hints on how to mix a sponge cake until after it was in the oven, as if that mattered anyway. It all goes into the same pan, and ingredients are ingredients, no matter what the size of the egg yolks. Scz this yokel.

Did somebody mention the word heavy? A sponger is one who hangs heavily upon one, and it's supposed to be heavy.

Did somebody mention texture? Didn't you ever see a sponge? So coarse and grainy. Just like my cake.

Did someone mention taste? Now that's where I did shine. It had taste. What it tasted like, I haven't yet figured out. That's another "cake secret."

But just the same I managed to eat a couple of pieces. And it may improve with age. It's had since last Friday to get better. And for [illegible]t matter so may I improve with a[illegible]

So why don't you come up som[illegible]e for a cake dinner? You brin[illegible]e cakes.

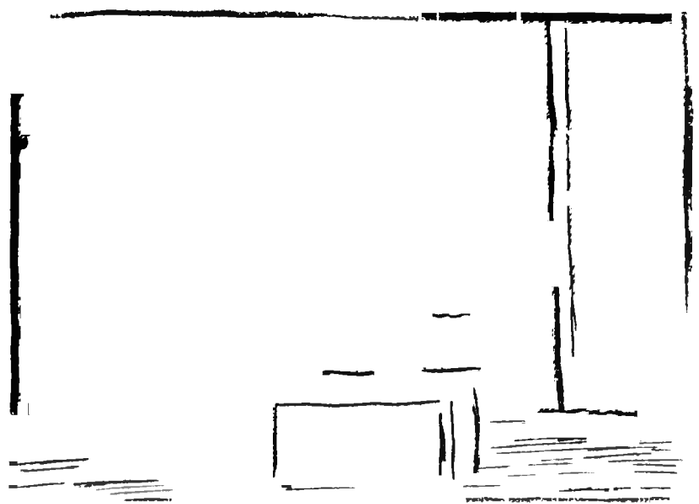
You Can Fool Some People Some of the Time . . . .



Much is said about the political power plant that gives such low rates and, at the same time, earns enough to make the town taxless. Political magic.

Investigations have shown that in most cases the rates under political operation are higher than in neighboring utility territory: that there are taxes—and generally higher taxes; and that the plant does not put aside sufficient funds for renewal or retirement purposes. Our critics seem to believe that a municipal plant will never wear out. More magic.

Some machinery salesmen, eager to install their equipment, and then leave town forever, and political agitators cheerfully spending other people's money, a delightful pastime, instigate municipal power plants, but eventually the customers must pay. Many so-called "Taxless Towns" have found to their sorrow, and too late, that "some of the people can be fooled some of the time."

Which Bird For Christmas?

Turkeys at 30 cents per pound, roasting chickens 25 cents or thereabouts. Ducks and geese 25 cents. Which is the best buy for your Christmas dinner?

The economics of turkey buying for the family hinge, of course, on the size of the cash outlay. You may be able to huy a 4-pound roasting chicken at 25 cents a pound or thereabouts, when the cash outlay for 8 or 10 pounds of turkey at 30 cents a pound would be too much. But the turkey will go more than twice as far and cost no more in the end. In fact the big turkey, for a large family, is cheaper in the long run than a small or medium-sized turkey, or than chicken, duck or goose. One experienced housekeeper is buying a 14-pound turkey for her family of 10, and says she will have the makings of turkey hash for another good meal, and soup for still another. Specialists have figured out the quantity of meat on a 15-pound turkey, and they say it makes about 20 generous home servings. You may prefer chicken, however, and a good, fat hen, pot-roasted, makes a good Christmas dinner. Cooking slowly, in a covered roaster, makes the older bird tender, and a 5-pound hen will serve a family of five or 6 with left-overs for chicken-noodles next day. As for duck, a six-pound one would serve a family of five and make soup for next day, at least. Because of the gamey flavor, you may prefer duck to chicken, though the chicken would provide more meat. Roast goose would be tempting, too, but geese are so much bigger than chicken or ducks, and have so much less meat than turkeys of the same size, that they are more of a luxury.

Another suggestion—about cranberries. Try cranberry relish instead of the jelly or cooked whole berries. A pound of raw cranberries and an orange, rind and all (except seeds) are put through a food chopper, using the fine knife. Add a cup of sugar and ¼ teasponful of salt. There you have cranberry relish, and it is good.

THE CODE OF 1633

The Boston Transcript has discovered by delving into New England history, that codes and regulations of prices and conditions of labor are not new in that section of America at least. The Transcript has found that back in 1633 the price of turkey in Boston had been fixed by law, and the General Court had ordered that "no person should sell to any of the inhabitants any provision, clothing, tools or other commodities above the rate of four pence in the shilling more than the same cost." At the same time the editor adds, the Boston innkeeper in the autumn of 1633 was "forbidden by law to ask more than six pence for a meal or more than a penny for a quart of brown, October ale, drunk out at mealtime."

Here is "code" regulation with a vengeance, and one can only speculate on whether anything was done to regulate tipping. Perhaps those thrifty colonists had not yet arrived at the stage where they could afford to parade their affluence, by leaving a quarter under the plate. Limiting the retail price of brown, October ale at a penny a quart will strike the modern American as decidedly modest, but it will be remembered that internal revenue taxes in those times were not quite as prolific as they are today.

But the Transcript editorial continues:

"Nor was this all. Though nobody in Puritan Boston in his wildest dreams envisioned the NRA of 1933, the General Court of Governor Winthrop's time had already set metes and bounds to the pay of tradesmen. Carpenters, joiners, bricklayers and men in other crafts were all required to subscribe to a certain schedule of wages. Long hours of labor were prescribed and the government of the colony solicitously directed the employment of leisure: No person, householder or other, might spend his time idly or unprofitably under pain of such punishment as the court might see fit to inflict.

"In consequence of these regulations prices rose faster than wages and the Bostonian of 1633 ate his turkey with feelings divided between thanksgiving that he was not as other men were and resentment at the meddlesomeness of the government in his business affairs and recreations."

The statement to the effect that under these regulations prices rose faster than wages, has a distinctly modern flavor. We have noted the same result in 1933. Evidently it is a little difficult to change the direction in which economic laws operate. It is reassuring to know, however, that Boston survived these regulations of 1633 and is still a fairly impressive community. Surely with the additional aid of a modern Brain Trust, up-to-date Boston and these United States ought to be able to do the same.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

A special train of the B. and O. made the run from Baltimore to Philadelphia, 92 miles, in 98 minutes.

At the Owl's Club "Tacky Party" the evening program was opened with a comb concert, and was followed by games called "stage coach", "ring", "steal partners," "black man" and "leap frog", the latter one of course not being participated in by the ladies. E. I. West, S. T. Jones and F. A. Thayer adjudged Mrs. King DeLawder and William Malette as the prize winners.

The Preston Lumber company at Crellin was shut down on December 23 until February on account of the depression in the lumber trade. News, money and hay were scarce at Crellin.

It was reported that Theodore Beckman, Swanton, had discovered the big vein of coal on his farm on Backbone mountain.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

James O. Hinebaugh was engaged in erecting a livery stable on Liberty street.

Sheriff-elect B. C. Scott qualified and appointed George DeWitt as his deputy.

There were butchered near Markleysburg five hogs that weighed when dressed 570 pounds, 525 pounds, 504 pounds and 463 pounds, respectively, or a total of over a ton and a quarter. In the Oakland market the five hogs would have brought the grower $285 cash.

The second touch of winter arrived, bringing with it eight inches of snow with the thermometer standing ten degrees above zero.

Born, to Lieut. and Mrs. West, a son; to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hinebaugh a son, to Mr. and Mrs. William Sollars, a daughter.

The Oakland Collegians defeated the Kingwood basketeers at Kingwood 26 to 18.

DIED.

EPHRAIM W. KELSO

Ephraim Walter Kelso, aged 86 years, 7 months and 14 days, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Landon, Mountain Lake Park, last Thursday afternoon from infirmaties of advanced years. Mr. Kelso had been ill for about six weeks, during which time he was confined to his bed.

Mr. Kelso was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kelso, of Fayette county, Pa., and was born in the Cove, this county, April 23, 1847. He moved to the Ryan's Glade community when he was approximately 21 years of age and was a farmer practically all his life with the exception of the last few years of retirement during which time he made his home with his granddaughter, Mrs. Landon.

Surviving are one son, Arthur I. Kelso, of Las Cruces, New Mexico; two daughters, Mrs. A. R. Hendrickson, of Toledo, Ohio, and Mrs. D. M. Dixon, of Oakland; eight grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren.

Mr. Kelso served as a member of the Board of County Commissioners of this county, having been elected some thirty years ago on the Republican ticket, it being the only public office he held or aspired to. For many years he was the senior member of the mercantile firm of Dixon and Kelso, of Oakland.

Within the period of twenty-five years preceding his death Mr. Kelso became a great traveler, covering the greater part of the United States—one year in the south, another year in the southwest and another year in the extreme west, rotating his travels to these points as he chose. Interesting letters from his pen were printed in The Republican giving a description of the places he visited.

Funeral services were conducted on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock at the White Church, east of Loch Lynn, Rev. I. S. Middaugh, of the Mountain Lake Park M. E. church, officiating, assisted by Dr. A. Moore. Interment was in the White Church cemetery by the side of his wife, whose death occurred a numbr of years ago. Mr. Kelso was a member of the M. E. church from young manhood to the day of his demise.

MRS. EMILY T. HINEBAUGH

Mrs. Emily T. Hinebaugh, aged 87 years, 9 months and 1 day, died at her home near Deer Park on December 2, 1933. She had been ill two weeks of influenza and complications.

Mrs. Hinebaugh was born near Fellowsville, W. Va., coming to Maryland with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harvey as a child. She had resided in and near Garrett county ever since.

She was joined in wedlock to Sebastian Hinebaugh in 1866, and to this union were born eleven children, nine of whom survive: three daughters, Mrs. Blanche DeBerry, Corinth, W. Va.; Mrs. Ida Durham, Morgantown, W. Va., and Mrs. Ella Moon, Deer Park; six sons: Robert W., James A., Earl J., of Deer Park; Brunner, of Storm, W. Va.; Ray, of Cassville, W. Va., and William, of Crellin. Thirty-two grandchildren and forty-one great-grandchildren also survive.

Mr. Hinebaugh preceded her death four years ago.

Funeral services were conducted at the home by the Rev. G. S. Hanleiter with interment in the Deer Park cemetery. The pallbearers were her grandsons, John, Elmer, Wilmer and Charles Hinebaugh, Meredith DeBerry and Andrew Hale. The flowerbearers were granddaughters and great-granddaughters, Leahfay Hinebaugh, Genevieve Hinebaugh, Naomi Welch and Irene Madigan.

STEPHEN S. WILSON

Stephen S. Wilson, aged 74 years, 11 months and 6 days, died Wednesday, December 8, at his home at the Weber farm. Funeral services were held on Friday by William Weber, of near town, with interment in the Turner cemetery, near Barnum, W. Va. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Anna Steiding Wilson, four sons, three daughters and 33 grandchildren.

The deceased had been in the employ of the H. Weber & Sons Company for forty years and was a member of the I. B. S.

IMPROVEMENT OF MOUTH HEALTH IS AIM OF STATE

Examinations Being Made of Children in Elementary Schools

With the idea of finding out what is most needed in the way of dental care for children throughout the country, dental examinations are being made of children in the elementary schools all over the United States. The survey is being carried on under the auspices of the American Dental Association, with the approval of the U. S. Public Health service, of State and City Departments of Health and of Education, and of State and local dental organizations.

The work is being done in each State under the directions of State or local branches of the American Dental Association. To a large extent the examinations are being made by dentists engaged in private practice. In some instances the work is being done by the school dentists.

Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygiene of the State Department of Health, who is in charge of the dental survey in the elementary schools in the counties of Maryland, said:

"The study that is being made of dental conditions—that is, of mouth health—of the children throughout the country, is similar to studies that have been made of other phases of child health. The purpose is to find out all that can be learned about conditions as they actually are, and to use this information as the basis of the dental work carried on in the schools and elsewhere.

"Carefnl records are being kept in each State, and through the exchange of this information it is hoped that a great deal can be done that will have a direct bearing upon the health of the children.

"A report of the results of the examination will be sent to the parents."

MT. LAKE PARK

Mr. Lipscomb took us for a little ride, when we inquired of him Tuesday morning if it was cold up on the hill. He replied that although his thermometer registered one below zero, the flowers were still blooming. We didn't get it until he later told us they were Mrs. Lipscomb's flowers and were in the house. He has spells like that occasionally.

With Christmas but a few days off, we have heard no report on the community tree. We understand many of the children are expecting it this year and it will be too bad if they are disappointed. Last year's tree was a huge success and brought cheer and happiness to many. Brightness and cheer are just as necessary, perhaps more so, this year, and we know of nothing that brings more happiness to the children than a Christmas tree.

Perhaps the Mayor and Council have one in mind, but we were asked to mention the subject, and it gives us pleasure to do so and we know it affords the editor equally great pleasure to print this reference to a matter so near the childrens' hearts.

Last Christmas season the Park, in many places, looked like fairyland with the outdoors decorated and illuminated. The Christmas spirit publicly expressed helps us forget our troubles. So pack your troubles in your old kit bag and—let's go.

Forrest Welling has done what a great many boys of his age have tried to do time without number, but few have accomplished it. He killed a running rabbit with a rock and it was in the pot in time for dinner that same evening. Believe it or not.

The death of Mr. Kelso has removed another of the old landmarks of the Park and another link has been severed. His familiar figure day after day on the boardwalk to the post office and his cheery "good morning" will be missed.

At the last regular meeting of Oak Lodge, No. 8, L O. O. F., Loch Lynn Heights, the following officers were elected: N. G., J. E. Callis; V. G., J. W. Ream; F. Secretary, R. E. Bittinger; R. Secretary, J. E. Kesner; Treasurer, C. P. Martin; Trustees, C. P. Martin, M. E. Lee, J. E. Callis; representative to the Grand Lodge, Jos. Turney; Deg. Master, A. T. White.

When people leave the Park for a short visit and consequently close their homes during their absence, we are frequently asked not to mention the fact in this column. The reason is that the burglaries of the past have made them fearful.

We are inclined to believe that there will be fewer depredations of this kind in the future. The town and county authorities got on the job and we think developments warrant the above belief.

Rev. S. A. Jessee is in Terra Alta assisting in a series of meetings being conducted in that town.

Mrs. Frank Morgan has returned from a brief visit with friends in the east.

Breeding of Dairy Animals Discussed at Meetings

J. A. Conover, dairy specialist of the University of Maryland, and John H. Carter, county agent, met with agricultural classes of high schools, night schools and groups of farmers thruout the county last week.

The importance of selecting the best type of animals was emphasized in the talks by the use of the heredascope, an apparatus which shows results of breeding over a period of years.

The speakers attended meetings as follows: Night school at Mountain Lake Park under Harland Biggs, Monday; Tuesday, Sunnyside night class; Wednesday, agriculture classes of Oakland and Accident, and the Selbysport Boosters club; Thursday, the Grantsville agriculture class; Friday, Friendsville, Grantsville and Accident classes.

Mr. Carter announced that he would meet a group of farmers to suit their convenience to discuss any topic pertaining to the breeding of animals or plants, and would procure the necessary specialists to properly handle the subjects.

Announcing

NEW FORD V-8 for 1934

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The New Ford V-8 for 1934 is now on display at the showrooms of Ford dealers. Surpassing even the great Ford of 1933 in economy, beauty and comfort, it is truly the car of this modern age—the culmination of thirty years Ford progress. It combines the proved performance of the V-8 cylinder engine with two important new features—Dual Carburetion and perfected Clear-vision Ventilation. See this car today and drive it at the first opportunity.

OUTSTANDING IMPROVEMENTS IN THE NEW FORD V-8

BETTER PERFORMANCE. Greater power, new speed, quicker acceleration, smoother performance, more miles per gallon especially at higher speeds, and quicker starting in cold weather—all these result from the new dual carburetor and dual intake manifold. New water-line thermostats enable the engine to warm up more quickly and to maintain an efficient operating temperature. Added engine refinements reduce oil consumption, further improve operating economy and reduce maintenance costs.

NEW VENTILATION SYSTEM permits clear vision, prevents drafts and provides desired amount of fresh air in any weather. Individual control for front and rear side windows. When ventilation is desired the window glass is raised to the top. Then the handle is given an additional half-turn. This slides the glass back horizontally to form a narrow slot. Through this slot air is drawn out by the forward motion of the car. This simple ventilation system maintains draft-free circulation, insures passenger comfort, prevents fogging windshield in cold or stormy weather. Both windshield and cowl ventilator can be opened to supply additional air needed for comfortable warm-weather driving.

DISTINCTIVE NEW APPEARANCE enhanced by the newly designed chromium-plated radiator shell and grille, new hood louvres, new hub caps. Interiors are attractive, with new tufted upholstery, new mouldings, new cove-type headlining, new instrument panel, new arm rests, new hardware. Swivel-type sun visors in De Luxe bodies prevent glare from front or side.

FENDERS IN COLOR. On De Luxe cars fenders are in color to harmonize with body colors—wheel colors optional. New enamel finish on all bodies and fenders has greater wearing quality and more enduring luster.

GREATER RIDING COMFORT results from increased spring flexibility. The spring leaves are newly designed for quieter and easier action. Shock absorbers are improved. Seat cushions are deeper, with new, softer springs. New type, individual bucket seats provide increased comfort for front-seat passengers in the Tudor Sedan. Adding to comfort is the new driving ease of the 15-to-1 steering gear ratio.

PRICES REMAIN LOW—Tudor Sedan, $535. Coupe, $515. Fordor Sedan, $585. De Luxe Tudor, $575. De Luxe Fordor, $625. De Luxe Coupe (5 windows), $555. De Luxe Coupe (3 windows), $555. De Luxe Roadster, $550. De Luxe Phaeton, $550. Cabriolet, $610. (All prices f. o. b. Detroit.)

GIRL'S SKULL FRACTURED IN COASTING ACCIDENT

Operation Is Performed, Winning Battle Against Death

Little Mary Compton, 11, of Mt. Lake Park, who suffered a fracture of the skull while sled riding there last Thursday afternoon and who fought a hard fight until an operation could be performed on her at Memorial hospital, Cumberland, on Friday, has apparently won.

The girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Compton, was kept conscious during Thursday night by nurses and physicians until her strength returned and Dr. W. A. Gracie was able to operate.

She was injured when some boys shoved a sled in front of the sled on which she and Mary Hipsley were coasting, near the schoolhouse at the Park. The sharp end of one of the runners pierced her skull, and the Hipsley child had two teeth knocked out.

TOWN GAILY DECORATED FOR CHRISTMAS SEASON

Individuals and Organizations Responsible for Appearance

While the weather has been warm for this time of year and has added nothing in the way of ideal weather to the Christmas season, yet Oakland has been decorated as never before through individual and organization effort.

The Oakland Rotary Club is responsible for a Merry Christmas illuminated cut out streamer erected over Second street and at intervals there are strings of colored lights. The Rotary club and members of the fire department were responsible for the erection of the community Christmas tree on the lawn of the Presbyterian church, while the lights are being furnished by the West Penn Company.

Merchants have also contributed very largely by erecting, decorating and maintaining the curb Christmas trees, as has been the custom here for several years. Oakland store windows have been unusually attractive this year, giving the business section of Oakland at night a Christmassy atmosphere.

Home decorations are also beginning to appear, spurred on perhaps by the home lighting contest which is being sponsored by the local Rotary club in cooperation with the West Maryland Power Company and the Oakland Civic Club. The power company is offering a cash prize of $10.

Lighted wreaths, candles and other Christmas decorations are appearing in home windows, while several are again taking advantage of outside evergreen trees for their decorations with strings of colored lights, stars and other ornaments.

RAIDS AND SEIZURES ARE MADE BY FEDERAL AGENTS

Army Blankets Being Traded For Liquor Near Bond Camp

Federal Agents of the Department of Justice held search and seizure operations in Garrett county last Thursday.

In a desolate section beyond Deer Park, in the mountains, they confronted Branson D. Brady, operating a small still in a hillside dugout. Six barrels of "ripe" mash and 50 gallons of new distillate were destroyed by the agents. Brady was well smoked from his fire, having poor ventilation and drafts, the agents said.

A mile further in the mountain they picked up Coy W. Ervin on his farm, with two toy stills of 12- and 17-gallons capacity each. Ervin had three barrels of mash ready and eight gallons of new liquor, the officers said.

Both Brady and Ervin were brought to Oakland where Brady was held under $500 bond and Ervin under a bond of $700 for the Garrett county grand jury under its county anti-liquor law.

At Bond, above Bloomington, Claude T. Winters, Swanton, was taken into custody for operating a 50-gallon still in the woods. Three barrels of mash were destroyed.

Blankets for "Fixed Bayonets"

There is a Civilian Conservation Corps camp in the vicinity of Bond, and the officers complained that forest workers were indulging in an ancient Army custom—trading U. S. blankets for "fixed bayonets," as illicit grog is known among service men.

Winters was committed to the Oakland Jail to await the action of the grand jury.

Following the disposition of the three alleged offenders, the Federal agents divided their forces and went across country to Backbone Mountain, where several unlicensed Bloomington distilleries have a "traveling can." The still is alleged to be transported in a truck from place to place where mash barrels are kept. The officers destroyed eight barrels of good mash.

Tracks in the snow showed that the still operators had been summoned elsewhere and left the mash as the sacrificial goat.

To Register Unemployed in Vicinity of Crellin

A representative of the National Reemployment office in Oakland will visit Crellin Friday, December 22, to register all unemployed in the vicinity of Crellin, Milburn Mann, manager, announced.

Registrations will be made in the Town Hall from 1 to 4 p. m., it was stated.

42 SCOUTS RE-REGISTERED FOR 1934 IN LOCAL TROOP

Many Achievements Recorded During Year; Organization Begins Tenth Consecutive Year

30 ADVANCE IN SCOUTING

Forty-two scouts of Oakland Troop No. 1, were re-registered for the year 1934 at National Scout headquarters, according to George Hanst, scoutmaster, who has just forwarded the list along with the annual report of the troop's activities. The year 1934 marks the beginning of the tenth consecutive year for the troop.

Twenty-eight first and second class scouts passed 247 merit badges before the court of honor, 30 members of the troop advanced at least one rank, one achieved the rank of Eagle scout, and other achievements have been recorded during 1933.

Each year a re-registration is necessary, so that only active scouts may be kept on the list, and for 1934 there were six associate scouts, twenty-four first class scouts, eight second class scouts and four tenderfoot scouts listed as remaining active in the troop.

Fourteen scouts were dropped on account of inactivity and lack of interest, and one was given a transfer to a Baltimore troop.

Kenneth Lawton achieved the rank of Eagle scout during 1933, while others lacked only the requirement of service or of building a fire without matches to reach their goal.

Robert Broadwater passed the highest number of merit badges with 19, while those receiving more than 10 were Robert Browning, 13; Hopwood Wooddell, 12; Wilbur Altstetter, 15; Charles Mason, 16; Junior Dixon, 11; Irving Broadwater, 10; Irvin Feld, 12; Howard Smouse, 15; Bill Glotfelty, 11; Bob Lawton, 13; Eugene Nordeck, 12.

Those who have re-registered for 1934 are:

Associate Scouts—Carroll Casteel, Lewis Jones, Walter Dawson, Kenneth Lawton, Joseph Sollars, James Treacy.

First Class—Robert Altstetter, Wilbur Altstetter, John Edward Baird, Irving Broadwater, Robert Broadwater, Robert Browning, Darwin DeWitt, Lawrence Dixon, Jr., Irvin Feld, William Glotfelty, Guy Hinebaugh, Schell Hoye, Robert Lawton, Jack Lawton, Charles Mason, John McIntire, Howard Naylor, Eugene Nordeck, Horace O'Donnell, Howard Smouse, George Stuck, John Treacy, Maurice Treacy, Hopwood Wooddell.

Second Class—John Darby, William Grant, Jack Hinebaugh, Joseph Johnson, Ralph Kahl, Ralph Lewis, Walter Stevens, Laurel Whipkey.

Tenderfoot—Donald Helbig, John Sharps, Ervin Smith, Wellington Smouse.

Bernard I. Gonder, Jr., was again listed as assistant scoutmaster and those sponsoring the troop include Walter W. Dawson, Harland L. Jones, Franklin E. Rathbun, and Donald R. Sincell.

Rotary Club To Give Treat to Children On Saturday

Headed by Santa Claus, who has come here at the request of the Oakland Rotary Club, the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band will march to the community tree, on the Presbyterian church lawn on Saturday afternoon where they will play a short concert prior to the distribution of candy and oranges to children under 12 years of age.

The Christmas treat is being given out under the auspices of the Oakland Rotary Club, as has been the custom for the past several years. The time for the distribution is set for two o'clock.

Girl Scouts To Have Christmas Program and Investiture

The Girl Scouts of Oakland will present a Christmas program at their regular meeting tonight and five girls who have passed their Tenderfoot requirements will be formally invested with their new rank. The troop committee will be guests and mothers of those to be invested are invited to attend. Rita Lawton, Mildred Lambert, Nancy Bolden, Jeanette Hoban and Margaret Williams are the five to pass their requirements.

Each patrol of the troop is preparing a Christmas box to give to a needy family of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. James Willison spent last Saturday in Frostburg and Cumberland.

SANTSON GREEN IS SORE; SAYS ARTICLE IS UNTRUE

Wants People To Know His Still Was 50 Gallons—Not 100

Grossly misrepresented in The Republican last week in a news story depicting his arrest one day last week by Federal Agent William R. Harvey, who charged him with operating a one hundred gallon still on Meadow Mountain, but at the same time in a royal good humor, Santson C. Green strode into The Republican office Monday afternoon and stated that the write-up was at variance with the facts—that the still was of "50-gallons capacity and not a hundred gallons, and I want that corrected." All right, Friend Green, she's corrected—it was only 50 gallons.

Supposed to have told Agent Harvey that he had borrowed the still from a resident of Cresaptown, Mr. Green said, "that, also is not the case, and where I got the still Harvey will have to find out," he said in answer to the question, "From whom did you get the still?" propounded by the editor.

Now since the still was not obtained from a friend in Cresaptown and the amende honorable is made, perhaps friend Green's patron saint brought it to him as a Christmas present, as he said he did not buy it.

So friend Green admits having the still; admits that Harvey said it was a fifty gallon container and not a 100-gallon can; says that he didn't get it from Cresaptown, but he's sure it was there and that Harvey saw it; placed him under arrest and he is on bond to meet the court at its next session in Oakland.

Now that the still is destroyed, what difference does it make?

The Republican regrets that it made such blunder in asserting a man had a 100-gallon still when in reality it was only half that capacity.

But such errors will occur, even in a newspaper office.

Friend Green went out smiling, promising to call again when in town.

Cherubim Choir To Make First Public Appearance

The Cherubim Choir will present a musical program at the Oakland High school auditorium tomorrow evening, December 22, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. This choir is under the direcaion of Mrs. Ivalee Newell Hobden and is sponsored by the Protestant churches of the town. It is the first public appearance of the organization.

Some Christmas carols and familiar Christmas hymns will be presented and a group of Mrs. Hobden's violin and piano pupils will appear on the program.

Mrs. F. D. Bittle and Mrs. S. Townshend Naylor are assisting Mrs. Hobden and Mrs. A. H. Wilson will be the choir accompanist.

Coal Tipple at McCullough Mine, Friendsville, Destroyed by Fire

The tipple at the mine of the McCullough Coal Company, Friendsville, was entirely destroyed by fire of incendiary origin last Wednesday evening. The mine has not been working for several months, it having been closed early in the summer when the slump in coal prices reached a level when it was unprofitable to operate.

The loss to the coal company is estimated at from $8,000 to $10,000, with a small amount of insurance.

W. W. Dawson, State's Attorney, and other county officers, have been investigating the matter.

AVIATION EXPERTS STUDY SITES FOR LANDING FIELDS

Will Recommend Construction of Airport Here in Near Future As An Aid To Safety

HAS A TWO-FOLD PURPOSE

Four possible sites for a municipal airport here were studied Tuesday by two National Guard aviation officers, who have been appointed aeronautical advisors for the Civil Works Administration, in connection with the government's plan to establish a nation-wide system of modern fields.

The purpose of the national improvement program is two-fold:

1. The work of building new airports and improving present fields will provide employment for thousands of men.

2. A large number of modern airports will reduce plane mishaps and make flying safer. Pilots will be able to land at a field in case of emergency and will not be forced to descend on dangerous terrrain.

The sites under consideration here were inspected Tuesday by Lieut. Col. W. D. Tipton, manager of the Curtis-Wright in Baltimore, and Major C. A. Masson. They were accompanied to Oakland by Capt J. Philip Roman, and William Johnson, pilots, of Cumberland, and a ground survey was made of four possible sites, the Weber flying field, Gortner's, Orendorf's, and the one at Red House. Officials indicated that Weber's field would be recommended and a tentative plan was drawn up, showing an L-shaped field, with two runways of 300 feet each on each arm of the L, each arm of the L to be from 2,500 to 3,000 feet long. Grover C. Stemple, mayor, accompanied them on their inspection trip. He had been notified of their coming and already had the possible sites selected for their consideration.

This entire space would be graded and given a rock bottom, which would furnish employment for a number of men.

After the airport site is selected definitely and arrangements made for the lease of the property, a government engineer will be sent here to survey the tract and prepare plans before work is started on the project. The tract must be leased by the city of Oakland for five years, for a nominal rental, with option to buy. The government will deal only with municipalities, and not with private individuals, it was stated. All material possible will be obtained locally, and 80 percent of the total expense must be paid in wages to laborers. The only local expense is the rental of the field.

Lieut. Col. Tipton and Major Masson flew to Cumberland on Tuesday and planned to fly to Oakland but were unable to do so on account of the weather conditions. They will return here later by plane for an aerial inspection of the surrounding terrain.

Officials stated that this section is rather dangerous flying country and that an airport was much needed here for safety.

Twenty ports in Maryland and Delaware are already underway and it is the hope of the Bureau of Aeronautics to place at least one airport in each county seat. In areas where the terrain is particularly rugged, more than one will be established in each county.

The fields, besides taking care of all local needs, will ultimately be a part of the Federal Airways system.

Injured When Thrown Against Roof of Automobile

J. Philip Roman, Cumberland attorney, was injured Tuesday night in an automobile mishap which occurred near Grantsville, as he was returning to Cumberland from Oakland.

Mr. Roman suffered a sprained back and will be incapacitated for several days. Roman's car was passing over the railroad crossing near the Casselman River bridge when Mr. Roman, who was leaning forward in the rear seat, was hurled upward and against the ear roof by the sudden lurch of the machine as it hit the crossing.

Lieut.-Col. W. D. Tipton was also thrown from the seat and became nauseated when his stomach struck the back of the front seat. Major C. A. Masson, another member of the party, escaped injury.

The two officers and Mr. Roman had been in Oakland inspecting sites for an airport earlier in the afternoon.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for December 24

A VISION OF WORLD PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 11:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. Isaiah 11:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peace on Earth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Prince of Peace.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Does Christmas Mean.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Christian Christmas.

Isaiah does not set forth merely an ideal for a world at strife. The fact is revealed that Jesus Christ shall come back to the earth and establish a kingdom, and remove from men's hearts the cause of strife. Instead of a vision of "World Peace" a better statement of the subject would be "The Universal Reign of Jesus Christ."

I. Who Is This King? (v. 1).

1. He Is the Son of Man. "A child is born" (Isa. 9:6). The one who shall reign over all the world as king is a real human being. The eternal Son of God, incorporated with the human race in order to be its Saviour and Lord, shall come of David's line.

2. He Is the Son of God. "A son is given" (Isa. 9:6). As the eternal Son of God he was not "born" but "given." This son "given" is the "Mighty God," the "Everlasting Father." Being such he will take the "government upon his shoulders," that is, he will assume all authority. He is "Wonderful." The world will marvel at him. He is the all-wise "Counsellor." Therefore there will be no mistake made in his conduct of the affairs of the kingdom. He is the "Prince of Peace."

II. The King's Qualification (v. 2).

The king which the world needs and for which it longs must have superhuman wisdom and power. There shall rest upon him:

1. "The spirit of the Lord."

2. "The spirit of wisdom," giving insight into all things, human and divine.

3. "The spirit of understanding," giving him the ability to use that which is highest and best.

4. "The spirit of counsel," enabling him intelligently to plan and administer the affairs of the kingdom.

5. "The spirit of might"—ability to execute his plans.

6. "The spirit of knowledge," enabling him to perceive the will of God in all things.

7. "The fear of the Lord," causing him to be reverential and obedient.

III. The Character of the King's Reign (vv. 3-5).

1. "He shall not judge at the sight of his eyes." His knowledge is perfect. None can deceive him.

2. "Not reprove after the hearing of the ear." The word "reproof" means decide. His decisions, therefore will be on the basis of fact, not of heresay.

3. "With righteousness shall he judge the poor." When Christ reigns as king the poor shall get justice.

4. "Shall smite the earth with the rod of his might." By the "earth" is meant the wicked inhabitants.

5. "He shall be girded with righteousness and faithfulness." He is absolutely righteous and will faithfully carry out all his words.

IV. The Issue of the King's Reign (vv. 6-10).

Here is a picture of the glorious golden age of which poets have sung and for which the great and wise men of all the ages have longed and looked. There will then be peace both between men and animals.

1. "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb" (v. 6). The word "dwell" suggests intimacy as if the lamb should receive the wolf into its home.

2. "The leopard shall lie down with the kid" (v. 6).

3. "The calf and the young lion and the fatling together" (v. 6). They are so gentle and kind that a little child shall lead them.

4. "The cow and the bear shall feed" (v. 7).

5. "The lion shall eat straw" (v. 7). The lion shall no longer prey upon other animals for food.

6. "The suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp" (v. 8).

7. "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord" (v. 9). The issue of this glorious reign shall be the attraction of the Gentile nations (vv. 10-12). This is the real purpose of the coming kingdom.

Piety Comes First

No student can afford to say, as some unfortunately do, "I will secure my education first and my religion afterward." Religion is a value so important that it cannot safely be postponed or side-tracked in favor of any lesser concern.

How Sweet Is Rest!

Rest! How sweet the sound! It is melody to my ears! It lies as a reviving cordial at my heart, and from thence sends forth lively spirits which beat through all the pulses of my soul! —Baxter.

"As a Man Thinketh"

Out of the heart proceedeth every evil. The mind is the mill by which the grist of the soul is ground. Love thinketh no evil; righteousness does not meditate upon iniquity.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Subscribers have been pretty regular lately in coming in to pay up back subscriptions. Most of them bring in their money saying that they hope the boss editor might now be able to get that pair of pants mentioned in this column a few weeks ago.

Well, keep on coming. We might be able to get the whole suit before long. If there is a national recovery on around these parts, we would like to be partly re-covered ourselves.

This might get Ben Shaffer into a little hot water, but he left a tale with us and didn't say not to use his name, so don't blame me, boys; blame him.

Anyway, he said: "The three Backbone Mountain Ridge runners will agree with the minority in that times are getting no better fast. They are continually having to take their three innocent girl friends to a dance and are not able themselves to go in to dance but they can see the brighter side of life. They can slide the girls past the ticket taker while they themselves stand on the outside and watch some other fellows swing their partners."

Maybe that's just the Christmas spirit of giving to someone else: "Give me liberty AND give me love," must be their motto.

The more I see of Christmas cards, the more I wonder why all these very beautiful cards would have to be spoiled by the sweet thoughts they add in the form of a poem. They never fit half of the people you know, anyway.

Why can't the manufacturers put on them "A Merry Christmas" and let it go at that?

And if anyone is so poetically inclined as to add: "May sweet content with you abide, you shriveled, toughened old alligator hide," that's all right, too.

But as for me, I'm wishing you all
A Merry Christmas and
A Happy New Year

DIET IS SUGGESTED FOR UNDERWEIGHT CHILDREN

Food Combinations and General Health Rules Will Help

Because many children in different parts of the country have been found to be underweight or to show other signs of being poorly nourished, suggestions for diets, food combinations and general health rules, that will help to correct this tendency, and to improve child health, have been outlined by the U. C. Children's Bureau. The part of the program that deals with suggested food combinations is given below. The attention of mothers who are concerned about the health of their children is directed to it by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health.

Diet.

The diet must include the following protective foods:

MILK—One quart of whole milk daily—either fresh or prepared by diluting evaporated or dried milk. To this may be added other milk products, such as dried skim milk, cream or cheese.

Milk is indispensable in the child's diet.

BUTTER—On bread or other foods.

EGG—One daily.

VEGETABLES—At least one serving daily of a green leafy vegetable and one serving of some other colored vegetable. Spinach, turnip tops, beet tops, cabbage, kale, chard; carrots, green beans, peas, beets, tomatoes (fresh or canned), squash. Many vegetables may be used raw—such as cabbage, carrots (grated), lettuce, celery, watercress, tomatoes. Other vegetables, such as turnips, onions, parsnips, cauliflower, may be used, but not to the exclusion of green leafy or other colored vegetables.

FRUIT—At least one serving daily of a fresh fruit. Oranges, bananas, apples or other fresh fruits in season. Cooked dried fruits, such as raisins, prunes, apricots and peaches are valuable foods and should be used frequently in addition to fresh fruits. Other cooked fruits may be given.

COD-LIVER OIL—Two to four teaspoonsful daily, especially in the North Temperate Zone. In addition—Other energy and body-building foods:

BREAD—Two or three times a day; whole-grain bread at least once a day.

CEREALS—Hot cooked cereal once or twice a day, served with milk or cream.

STARCHY VEGETABLES—Potatoes, sweetpotatoes, rice, barley, macaroni or hominy once a day.

MEAT OR FISH—Fresh lean meat or fish once a day if possible.

The foods recommended for undernourished children are the same for any age group, but the older child, especially the child in his teens, needs larger quantities of each food than does the younger child. Undernourished children of all ages should have a quart of milk daily; children in their teens may drink more.

Habits of Eating

Malnutrition is sometimes due solely to poor eating habits. If your child is a finicky eater and refuses foods that he needs, especially milk and vegetables, consult your physician as to how you may help overcome the habit.

Roast Turkey With Savory Stuffing

Selecting The Turkey

Select a plump, well-fattened turkey, and find out whether it is a young or an old bird because this makes a difference in the way you cook it.

Stuffing And Trussing

When you are ready to cook the turkey, rub the inside with salt, and fill the body cavity and the loose skin at the base of the neck with a hot, savory stuffing. Slip the crusty end slice of a loaf of bread into the opening near the tail to hold in the stuffing, tuck the legs under the band of skin, and sew up the slit with soft, white twine. Fold the neck skin toward the back and fasten down with a skewer or stitches. Fold the wing tips under the back, and tie them down if necessary, but be careful not to run string across the breast for it will leave marks on the brown surface.

Then rub the stuffed, trussed turkey all over with salt and butter, and pat it with flour. Lay a piece of the turkey fat over the breast. Place on a rack in an open roasting pan. Do not put any water into the pan. Water in a roasting pan makes steam, and steam around a roasting turkey or any tender meat draws out the juices.

Roasting

Have the oven hot (about 450 degrees F.) when you put the turkey in. Brown it lightly for half an hour in this hot oven and after the first 15 minutes turn the bird with the breast down so it will brown all over. Then reduce the oven heat to very moderate (about 325 degrees F.) To cool the oven quickly leave the door open as you are turning the bird and basting it with turkey fat and butter. If the turkey is young, continue the roasting at this moderate temperature with no lid on the pan until the bird is done. Baste it about every half hour with the pan drippings, and in turning it be careful not to break the skin. A young 10 to 12 pound turkey will need about 3 hours in the oven. That is, 15 minutes to the pound market weight, picked but not drawn. For a turkey a year or more old, after browning in the hot oven, put the cover on the roaster, and continue the cooking in the moderate oven (about 325 degrees F.) You will probably need to allow 4½ hours for a 15-pound bird a year or more old. Do not put water into the covered roaster either, or it will act like a steam jacket and pot-roast rather than really roast the bird.

To test for "doneness" run a steel skewer or a cooking fork into the thigh next to the breast. If the juice does not show a red tinge, the turkey is done. Serve the turkey on a large, hot platter, garnish with parsley or celery tops, and make gravy with the giblets and drippings.

Savory Stuffing

Two quarts dry bread crumbs, ¾ cup fat, butter and turkey fat, 1 small onion, chopped, ½ cup chopped parsley, pepper to taste, 1 pint chopped celery, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 to 2 teaspoons savory seasoning.

In the melted fat cook the onion, parsley, and celery, for a few minutes. Add the bread crumbs and seasonings and stir all together until the mixture is thoroughly heated. Pile the hot stuffing lightly into the turkey, but do not pack.

WHO PAYS THE PORK PROCESSING TAX?

The processing tax on pork, which is to repay the government for its bounties to farmers who cut down on their hog production, it now partially in effect, although the amount of the tax is to be raised until it amounts to two cents a pound on live hogs by February 1. Some students of livestock affairs are pointing out the fact that since the tax first went into effect the price of hogs in the Chicago market has gone down just about the amount of the tax. This is leading to the question—who pays the processing tax?

It was believed, and intended, by those who favored the processing tax plan of "helping the farmer" that the tax would be paid by the consumers of pork products, and it was estimated that when the full tax came into effect the price of choice bits of pork would be raised in price all the way from twenty to forty percent. But the fact that the price of live hogs has declined in about the amount of the processing tax leads some exponents of the live stock industry to believe that perhaps, after all, the processing tax may be paid by the farmer himself. If this proves to be true it will only mean that the government is putting money in the right hand pants pocket and that it is being gently removed from the left hand pants pocket by somebody else. Only time can tell whether or not this suspicion is founden on fact. By the time February 1, 1934, rolls around and the full tax is in effect we will probably know. Either hogs will be selling at a much lower price on the live stock markets of the country or the consumer will be paying a much higher price for his pork. It is even barely possible that both horns of the dilemma will develop. For if the consumer angered by a sudden increase, goes on a strike against pork, then the price of live hogs is apt to go down whether the processing tax is indirectly levied on the farmer or not.

The Chicago Tribune recently quoted the opinions of several live stock men to the effect that the man who sells live hogs is being made to pay the cost of the processors' tax, and eiting the development of hog prices as a proof. One Illinois farmer is quoted as saying:

"By taxing the hogs $2 per cwt. after February 1 the government is taking away from the farmer through the hog market a sum equal to what he intends to pay him for signing a contract to reduce his crop. We know that the consumers are supposed to be paying this tax, but they are not doing so, and the actions of the hog market since the tax was announced prove who is really paying it. The farmer is, and will keep on doing so. When the tax is up to $2 the packers will buy live hogs that much less from the farmer."

An Iowa farmer is quoted as believing that the hog market is not able to stand the processing tax imposed by the government, and he adds "Unless the processing tax is taken off or at least held down to fifty cents a hundred weight, we will see lower prices for hogs before long."

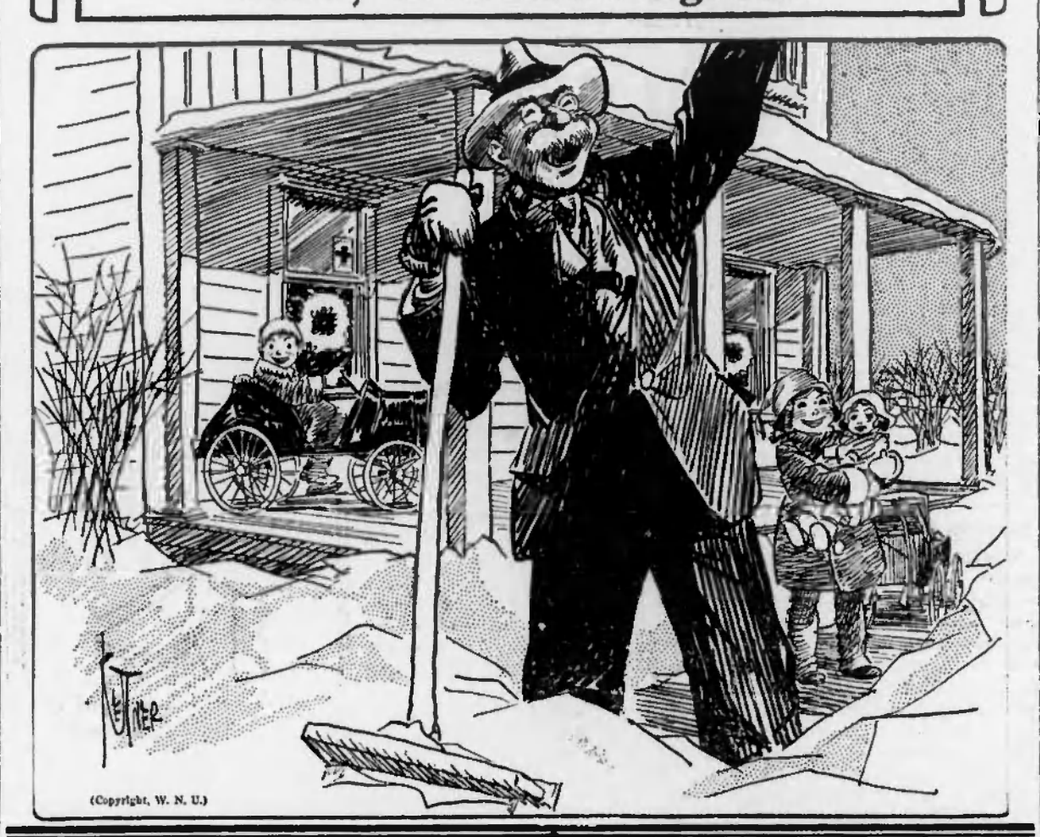
Of course if the processing tax is taken off, somebody will have to reimburse the government for the money paid to the farmers for reducing their production of hogs, and that somebody will be the illustrious forgotten man "Mr. Taxpayer."

Another Illinois hog raiser is quoted as saying:

"Whoever thinks the hog raiser is not paying the tax on hogs through a lower price is fooling himself. I sold my prime 273 pound butcher hogs from pure bred stock at $4 last week, the top of the market on the day they were marketed. Those hogs would have brought $5 just prior to the announcement of the tax on hogs and pork. As for signing the contracts to reduce our corn and hog production, we would be fools if we refused. It is the only way we have of getting back some of our tax money that the packers are taking out of the hog market to pay over to the government. No matter whether we sign we stand the expense of it through our market for hogs."

It was admitted by the A. A. A, that the tax processing plan for raising the income of the farmer was merely an experiment. Maybe the farmer will wake up some morning to learn that the experiment, as usual, was conducted at his expense.

Merry Christmas Neighbor!



Beyond The County

In Grafton, West Va., union barber shops have announced that on presentation of tickets from the Salvation Army, free hair cuts will be given

In Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., a 90-year-old lumberman, having kept in his possession for a number of years a $5.00 gold piece, presented it to his bank and the cashier finding it dated 1861, gave in exchange for it $340.

At Rich Hill, Mo., mummy bridge has been started, the player being fined if he or she speaks, pointing to the heart for that bid, the diamond (if any) on the finger, a shoveling motion for the spade bid and a hit on the head of your opponent for a club bid.

At Berlin, in Maryland, a 17-year-old school boy, confessing to smashing typewriters, breaking open a telephone coin box, burning papers and damaging doors in a new school building, was banished from the State of Maryland by the Court hearing the ease.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Oakland Cornet Band was out on Christmas morning and rendered excellent music. Prof. Smith was the instructor.

A pigeon shooting match at Washington Spring grove was won by Jas. Painter, Dick Browning, E. H. Bartlett, Jr., and W. A. Daily.

On Wednesday, December 27, Rev. J. H. Enlow performed the wedding ceremony for Edwin E. Friend and Miss Carrie L. Pope, at the bride's home near Avilton. Mr. Friend was teaching the Avilton school at the time.

People of Oakland enjoyed a warm Christmas. The mercury in the morning stood at 45 and it went up during the day. The absence of firecrackers and tin horn nuisances was noted.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

In attempting to furnish Baltimore City with a community Christmas tree a tree was selected by Dr. H. W. McComas growing on the land of Nimrod Glotfelty near McHenry, but in lowering it by block and tackle, the mooring gave way and the tree crashed to the ground, breaking all of the lower limbs and robbing it of its natural beauty and symmetry.

The necessary papers were obtained for the organization of a National Guard company here.

Baltimore and Ohio receipts fell off at least $1,000,000 during November and the company was furloughing thousands of its employes to reduce expenses.

The Civic Club was preparing to bring Christmas cheer to the homes of the deserving poor by sending out boxes of presents.

It was estimated that there would be an increase of 5,000 automobile licenses in Maryland for the ensuing year.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM STILL IS PUZZLING TO THE ASTRONOMERS

It's almost two thousand years since the three wise men of biblical legend followed the star to Bethlehem to the Christ-child, but astronomers still can't say whether that heavenly guide was a comet or constellation, new star or myth.

Hundreds of Philadelphians who trooped to the Franklin Institute's new plantetarium—one of two operating in this country—saw the stars and planets Sunday as they looked to the shepherds on the hills of Palestine that first Christmas eve in the year 6 B. C., accepted by many scientists as the correct year of Christ's birth, but they didn't see the Star of Bethlehem.

"What the actual star was that was seen by the magi is hard to determine." said James B. Stokeley, assistant director of the institute. "At that time a comet of great proportions might have flashed through the skies, or a dark star might suddenly have blinked into brightness. These things, if they happened, would have left no record and so cannot be checked.

It is known, another lecturer said, that a strange "conjunction" of the planets, Saturn Jupiter and Mars occurred in the spring of the year 6 B. C., and the unusual brilliance of their light might have been taken for that of a new star. If the magi saw this, it might easily have taken them from spring until Christmas eve to travel from their homes to the Holy manger, it was explained.

"The best explanation of the Star of Bethlehem is that it was a miracle," said one of the scientists, "and we have no right to try to explain miracles."

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

ROMANS

This letter was written by the Apostle Paul at Corinth and sent by Phebe, servant of the Church at Cenchrea to the Christians at Rome. In the seventh verse of Chapter 1, we find the address: "To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints: Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ." Its purpose is to set forth the plan of salvation, emphasizing the great doctrines of justification by faith, and sanctification through the Holy Spirit. There are two grand divisions of this epistle, the first included in Chapters 1-11, which are doctrinal; the second, Chapters 12-16, and demonstrates his victory over self, a victory so complete that he, once the most intolerant of men, had learned even to tolerate intolerance.

In the doctrinal part of his letter, Paul deals with such themes as the certainty of divine judgment; universality of guilt; blessings of justification; Christ's sacrificial love; the reign and death of sin; a comparison of the old life and the new. "What fruit have ye," he exclaims, "in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. But now being made free from sin and become servants of God, ye have your fruit unto holiness and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life thru Jesus Christ our Lord."

This epistle presents a masterly argument in which the apostle proceeds to prove that the entire human race is surrounded by three insurmountable walls: 1. The wall of universal guilt; 2, The wall of sinful tendencies; 3, The wall of the supposed sovereign election of God of a certain portion of the race to salvation and the divine reprobation of others. He points out the doors of divine mercy provided for in the plan of salvation, by which all men may escape the impending judgment of God, if they will. They are, (1) Justification by faith, chapter 5:1; (2) Regeneration, chapter 8:1-4; and (3) Universal opportunity, chapter 10:13; "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

The culmination of the divine plan of salvation is pictured in Chapter 8. The Christian life is here portrayed as a new spiritual life of liberty and righteousness, through faith in Christ. The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. Paul is not attempting to put the Christian above the demands and exactions of the moral law, but rather infers that because of the new life begotten within him the things of the lower nature no longer dominate his thinking and have lost their power to command his obedience "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God," says Paul, "they are the sons of God."

In these days when human hearts are like wax and all material foundations are shaken, it is sublime to hear the voice of this grand old warrior of the cross calling to us adown the centuries: "We are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth why does he yet hope for? But if we hope for what we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril or sword? For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor prineipalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor length, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

FIRST CORINTHIANS

The First Epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi and was sent to Corinth by the hand of Stephanas, a charitable brother addicted to the ministry of the saints, also Fortunatus and Achaicus, and last but not least the beloved Timothy. What a thrilling volume could be written upon the lives of the unobtrusive but ever faithful laborers, who, unknown now, were vital factors in Paul's great missionary plan. Like the coral insects far beneath the surface of the sea building the foundation of fruitful isles, themselves never apparent, so these unknown workers for the Kingdom of God built foundations broad and deep for the superstructure that later generations were to erect.

Paul had founded the Church at Corinth on his second missionary journey. This city was so beautiful that it was called the eye of Greece. Learning and philosophy thrived here. Plata, Socrates and Aristotle had their followers, as well as the other philosophers; yet, as always, philosophy had little power to change life apart from the idea of personal responsibility to God, which is the fundamental of religion. Thus it happened that the infant Church, surrounded by the evils of a licentious city, became infected by them, for the Greeks while proud of their intellectual achievements were at the same time addicted to gross immorality.

The Greeks were especially fond of oratory, and this fondness was the occasion of a division in the Church at Corinth. A certain silver-tongued orator, Dr. Apollos, had captured the imagination of the Christians at Corinth by his eloquence, which led to the drawing of comparisons between him and other religious leaders. It may be that Paul, whose bodily presence seems not to have been impressive, suffered much by this comparison.

Paul hated divisions, and straightway sought to end this controversy about leadership. "Is Christ divided?" he asked. "Was Paul crucified for you? or were we baptized in the name of Paul? For while one saith, I am of Paul; another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal? Who then is Paul and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man? I have planted; Apollos watered, but God gave the increase."

It was the desire of Paul to cure schisms in the Church, and to stamp out partyisms and forms of gross immorality, which were the primary causes for the writing of the epistle. Man worship and glorying in worldly wisdom are the fundamental causes of most of the divisions within the Church.

Paul's own ministry was exemplary. He sought to declare the wisdom of God as a message revealed to him by the Holy Spirit. With such a program strife over leaders could not be tolerated. Paul shows that ministers should be regarded as dispensers of truth; as gardeners, sowing precious seed; as co-laborers with God; as character builders; as stewards; that they must be sufferers for Christ's sake, and examples to the Church, as well as administrators of discipline.

He also shows that Christian Ideals demand the sacrifice of certain privileges and rights for the sake of the ignorant and weak.

Using Israel's infidelity as an example he warns the Church in Chapter 10, and in the same Chapter reminds us of the sacred nature of personal influence as it determines the life and conduct of others.

Paul rises to heights sublime in the 13th chapter of this epistle, which is considered by many to be the greatest passage of all the epistles, wherein the pre-eminence of love is declared.

The 15th Chapter is given to a discussion of the resurrection. Millions of sad hearts have been comforted by Paul's shout of triumph over the last enemy: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

The epistle draws to its close with sundry admonitions and salutations, but among them there is none more appropriate to our times than Chapter 16:13: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

MT. LAKE PARK

Dolbow Community Tree

For thirty-nine years Rev. A. J. ("Andy") Dolbow has been a fixture at Mountain Lake Park during the annual sessions of the Interdenominational Campmeeting. In fact, Rev. Dolbow is so much of an institution as the meetings themselves.

Every evening, at twilight, during the meetings, hundreds gathered in a circle with "Andy" in the center, to sing the good old gospel songs and worship with him in his "ring meetings." On the evenings when his "experience" was given in his inimitable and interesting style, enthusiasm and religious fervor reached their height. During all these years, literally thousands have been spiritually uplifted and had their faith "in unseen things above" strengthened in these unique meetings under the leadership of Rev. Dolbow. He has brought cheer and hope and happiness to many.

What then more fitting than that the Community Christmas tree, symbol of cheer and hope, should be planted on the exact spot where his famous "ring meetings" were held and that is to be dedicated to this man of God?

It was, indeed, an inspiring thought of Mrs. Winchell that the tree this year be so dedicated—a living tree as a testimonial of the love and esteem in which this virile preacher is held by his legion of friends.

The dedication will take place Saturday evening in the old auditorium grounds at 6:30 o'clock. Rev. Middaugh, pastor of the M. E. church at the Park, will have charge of the ceremonies and the choir of that church will render Christmas carols. The Oakland band will be asked to participate.

It is anticipated that the Mayor and Council will provide a treat for the children. Everyone is invited, especially the friends and acquaintances of Rev. Dolbow.

The tree will be decorated and lighted by the Monongahela West Penn Power Company which so generously donated its services last year.

Other Christmas Celebrations

A Christmas pageant, entitled "Star Gleams," will be presented at the Baptist church, Saturday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend this service.

FROM A DEAD MAN'S CHEST

By E. C. F.

Do you like the bizarre?

Do you like your tales of the spine-tingling, flesh-creeping, morbid variety, so that in the flickering, candle-light, the shadow of a moth on the wall appears as a sinister figure from the Rue Morgue?

Well, here is a fact story, worthy the pen of a Poe or a Dumas:

Sitting in the den of an old friend of ours the other evening at Mountain Lake Park, talking of this, that and the other, thing, our conversation for some reason turned to the subject of art.

Perhaps what started us on that subject was an unfinished oil painting hanging on the wall of the den.

My host invited me across the hall to view some scenes done in oil by his late wife. As we started to leave the room, my attention was arrested by a small painting, as I thought, hanging on the wall in a corner, depicting Christ on the Cross.

The figure was represented on a dead, saffron-colored background. There was something odd in the way the outlines of the figure of Christ stood out—something arresting. It was hung in a place where the sunlight, interrupted by the swaying branches of the trees in the yard, came and went—the ever-changing lights and shadows giving an eerie effect of movement.

We knew, of course, that it was these changing shadows cast by the setting sun filtering through the tree branches or the fluttering of a window curtain—or was it?—that caused us to imagine we could see the rippling movement of muscles straining to release the hands from the nails that fastened Him to the cross, or the slow rhythmic rise and fall of the chest in labored breathing. And even now, with the clock striking the hour of midnight, as we record these impressions, I cast a sidelong glance to a dark corner of my room, half expecting to see the picture hanging there.

It is no wonder my reactions were vivid, for the picture of the last sufferings of the Christ has a peculiar and somewhat gruesome history.

It had been tattooed on the brawny chest of a man who had died nearly a century ago, his body finding its way to the dissecting room of an eastern medical college.

The father of my friend and host (who by the way is more than 75 years of age) was a student in that college, and in his work of dissecting, noticing the artistry of the work in deep blue and scarlet, he skillfully lifted the skin of the chest of the cadaver so as to preserve the picture.

This is the picture that compelled our attention that evening, so wonderfully fixed by the needle of the artist more than a century ago. Even now, after so long a time, the pigment coloring is preserved, and the pores of the skin and the short, stubby hairs that once covered the chest of the unknown and friendless man, although almost worn away by frequent cleaning and dusting, can be clearly seen and felt as one lightly touches the surface.

Gruesome! Bizarre! Well, for us, we will leave the night light burning in the hall tonight!

Feed The Birds

An appeal to the general public is made at this time to establish feeding stations for the benefit of our feathered and furred friends. The establishment of feeding stations during the winters of the past few years has produced wonderful results. A great many sections have paid especial attention to this program and have greatly benefited thereby. There should be a special effort made to establish your winter feeding program at once and continue as late as April 1st to 15th following. Every person, not only the agriculturists, orchardists and woodland ownrs, hut residents of the towns and cities of our State, should co-operate by furnishing dinner tables for the song and insectivorous birds which visit their home. Thousands of pieces of brood stock can be saved by supplying grain at a winter feeding station, thereby assuring the birds or animals sustenance at the time of the year when natural feed is scarcest, and with very little expense or trouble.

The welfare of crops and the economic success of the farm, orchards and forests are closely related to the number and kinds of birds present, the vast majority of which are very beneficial and merit your protection. It is impossible to ascertain the value in dollars and cents that birds save the public thru the destruction of injurious insects and obnoxious weed seeds.

Feeding Stations

Feeding stations are inexpensive. One of the best methods is to use the ordinary field corn, stalks cut at the ground, from which the fodder has not been stripped, set in the form of an Indian teepee, leaving the bottom open at all times so that birds or animals may escape vermin, if attacked. Scatter grain inside, the trail leading outward. This method is bound to attract within a short period the birds of the neighborhood which will soon learn to avail themselves of the dinner table. Another method is to cut a long pole, nail to post or from tree to tree or place each end in a forked stick and pile brush or corn fodder at the north side, covered with straw, if possible, always leaving open to the south.

For the song and insectivorous birds which are so beneficial to our agriculturists throughout the entire year, a little shelf should be placed on the window sill or erected in a tree or on a fence post, on which suet or grain can be placed daily and serve as a dinner table for these very beneficial species. Suet and meats can also be tied with a string to the limbs of trees or to poles and the birds will pick it as they need it. English sparrows are very troublesome. The aforementioned foods may be suspended at the end of two feet of cord, tied to the end of a limb in such a manner as it will swing freely in the wind. Only birds accustomed to feeding in the swaying limbs of trees can successfully take food so placed. Mixed grain, such as scratch feed, screenings, sweepings from barn floors and granaries, bread crumbs, table scrapings and similar foods are very useful at feeding stations and furnish excellent food for birds.

C. VANDERBILT SEES HIS FRIEND KILLED BY AUTO

John W. Brodix Struck by Hit-and-Run Driver Near Gormania Last Saturday Evening

TWO ARRESTS ARE MADE

Struck by a speeding automobile which failed to stop, John W. Brodix, 51, of Mt. Holly, N. J., was killed about one-half mile east of Gormania, on route 50, Saturday night returning from California with his close friend, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., the publisher. The aceident occurred just across the West Virginia border.

Was Talking To Vanderbilt

The speeding car struck Brodix as he stopped his own automobile and walked toward Vanderbilt's car which had halted on the mountainside to wait for Brodix. Brodix's body was dragged more than 300 feet, his clothing was torn away, and his body mangled. The driver fled.

Vanderbilt then drove to Oakland to notify friends by telephone and he returned to the scene of the accident with Sheriff Walter H. Haenftling and Deputy Clarence Spear, who assisted in the search for the hit-and-run driver.

Brodix was a brother-in-law of Louis Merryman, the national milk administrator. He and Vanderbilt left California about December 17, to drive to their homes to spend Christmas. They traveled in separate cars. Brodix was enroute to Sparks, Md., to spend the holidays with his brother-in-law and sister, and Vanderbilt planned to spend Sunday in Washington, going to New York for Christmas.

Thomas Brodix, a brotner, and Mr. Merryman arrived in Oakland after midnight and had the body brought to the Bolden funeral parlor where it was prepared for burial and shipped to Mt. Holly, where services were held.

Mr. Merryman stated that the hit-and-run driver rounded a curve at a high rate of speed and was on the wrong side of the road when he struck his brother-in-law. The car then struck Brodix's automobile but continued westward, apparently little damaged.

Two Are Held by Authorities

In less than twenty-four hours after the accident Fritz Anthony, Jr., of Bayard, W. Va., was taken into custody and lodged in the Grant county jail.

Before Magistrate J. L. Boor Tuesday Anthony waived a hearing and was held without bond for the April grand jury. Anthony made no statement and no evidence was given in his case.

Merlin Evans, also of Bayard, who testified before Boor he believed it was Anthony's car that struck Brodix, was held in $5,000 bond and remended to jail in default.

Evans testified before Boor that Anthony, returning from Cumberland Saturday stopped in Keyser and picked up Mr. and Mrs. Evans and their small child. Somewhere near the Maryland-West Virginia line. Evans testified, Anthony's car struck something. Evans said he did not know much about it for he was lighting a cigaret. The child was hurt and a few hundred feet down the road Anthony stopped the car, walked back some distance and then returned, Evans said.

He testified Anthony then drove away. Officers said bloodstains were found on the Anthony car. The door was dented and a window broken.

Before continuing to Washington on Monday, Vanderbilt had told the coroner's jury the incidents leading up to the tragedy. Vanderbilt's testimony was supported by former Sheriff J. A. Kimmell, of Bayard. Both men testified Brodix's body was hit so hard that one of the dead man's shoes was knocked 75 feet from the body. M. Aronhalt, Jr., Gormania, acted as coroner.

Senator M. M. Neely, of Fairmont, W. Va., received a call from the White House Saturday night right after the accident, requesting him to get in communication with Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., to learn the details of the accident.

Brodix was married but was not living with his wife. He is survived by two brothers and one sister. Bernard I. Gonder, Western Union, said his office was swamped Sunday with telegrams from all sections of the United States, extending sympathy to Mr. Vanderbilt.

DIPHTHERIA IS FATAL TO DEER PARK CHILD MONDAY

New Cases Reported—Health Officer Continues Treatments.

One death from diphtheria and two more new cases were reported this week by Dr. E. C. Peck, health officer. The fatal case was that of Levi Glotfelty, Jr., of Deer Park, who developed a rapidly progressing case and died Christmas morning.

One of his sisters who was tested in the High school and found to be susceptible to diphtheria but who did not go for the toxoid treatment recommended, is also ill of the disease. The child was taken ill Saturday night and was first seen by a physician on Sunday night. An adult case was reported from Accident.

Violates Quarantine

Mrs. J. W. Howdershelt, Shallmar, was arraigned before Gorge J. Poole, Kitzmiller, justice of the peace, on Thursday afternoon, December 21, and found guilty of violating a diphtheria quarantine about November 1. She was fined $2 and costs.

To Give Treatments

Dr. Peck will visit the Swanton school on Wednesday morning, January 3, at 11 o'clock and the Deer Park school on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock to give diphtheria immunizations.

Pre-school children will be given immunization treatments at the Accident school next Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Schick tests will be given in the Grantsville school also on Thursday, January 4. Parents are urged to bring in the pre-school children for immunization at this time.

COUNTY GEODETIC SURVEY IS AUTHORIZED BY C. W. A.

Survey Will Tie in With Those Made by U. S. Department

A geodetic survey of Garrett and Allegany counties has been authorized in connection with the Civil Works Administration for employment of idle civil engineers in Maryland.

The project is in charge of Ralph L. Rizer, former city engineer of Cumberland, and he is given authority to organize five engineering groups each to be made up of the following personnel: Chief of party, two instrument men, transit and level; two recorders, two chairmen, two rodmen, and 1 axeman. The latter will be an unskilled laborer. This will employ 50 men.

The survey and engineering date will co-ordinate and tie in with the limited surveys made by the U. S. Goedetic department engineers, in former years.

Mr. Rizer plans to organize one group in Oakland, for Garrett county, one with headquarters in Lonaconing, Frostburg or Westernport; two with headquarters in Cumberland and the fifth with headquarters in Hancock.

Prof. S. S. Stineburg, dean of the school of engineering of the University of Maryland, has been appointed State supervisor for Maryland.

The planned survey will utilize all available State engineering instruments, and appeals are being made to corporations, firms, and individuals for loans of unused instruments.

The project will help the employment of graduate engineers and men with engineering experience.

HEAVY SNOWSTORM GRIPS ALL OF EASTERN STATES

Ten Inches of Snowfall and 4 Below Zero Recorded in County

Snow, heavy and driven by a slashing northeast wind, descended over almost all of the eastern half of the nation, leaving ten inches in Garrett county.

The storm started in the early hours Tuesday morning and by daylight four inches had fallen. This was increased during the day and on Tuesday evening five more inches, according to the government station at Weber's.

The lowest temperature of the year was reached Wednesday morning when 4 degrees below zero was recorded. Up to this time it had reached 1 below.

Although there was no undue suffering in this section, the wave of bitter cold accompanied by raging winds brought deaths on the Great Lakes and at various places in the Eastern section of the United States. The majority of deaths were from automobile accidents.

Temperatures plunged far below zero in the midwest, and in several sections the worst of the weather is yet to come. At Eveleth, Minnesota, it was 38 below.

Scientifically, winter began on December 21, but spring-like weather had prevailed on that date and until after Christmas. A "White Christmas" was missed in the county by several hours.

State road workers reported all roads open to traffic, although they had been badly drifted in spots.

Masonic Lodge Officers Are Elected

At a regular communication of Oakland Lodge, No. 192, A., F. and A. M., held Tuesday night George H. Hanst was elected Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. Others elected were Scott W. Shirer, senior warden; Milburn W. Mann, junior warden; Harland L. Jones, secretary, and Cecil Smith, treasurer.

Installation will be held on Tuesday, January 9, according to Walter W. Dawson, deputy inspector. Other officers of the lodge will be appointed at that time.

RECOMMEND SAVAGE RIVER ASSITE FOR RESERVOIR DAM

Engineers In Report Suggest That Dam 155 Feet High Be Erected at Cost of $1,260,000

In its report filed last Thursday with the Upper Potomac River Board, Gannett, Scelye & Fleming, consulting engineers of Harrisburg, Pa., recommends the construction of an impounding dam on the Savage River, just below Crabtree creek as the better development for the conservation of water to improve the Potomac dry weather flow. They recommend that a dam 155 feet high, storing 6,500,000,000 gallons be constructed at a cost of $1,262,000.

The report is accompanied by data tables, blueprints and maps. It is signed by Farley Gannett of the engineering firm and will be immediately presented to the Board of the Maryland division of the National Recovery Act for its approval and transmission to Federal officers at Washington, D. C.

The firm was retained nearly a year ago by the Upper Potomac Water Board, composed of West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co., Celanese Corporation of America, Kelly Springfield Tire Company, the Potomac Edison Company and the Mayor and Council of Cumberland. All but the city of Cumberland are users of Potomac River water for industrial purposes.

The Savage River is wholly within the borders of Garrett county, having its rise at a point on Savage Mountain near where the National Highway crossing the river in the valley separating the Little Savage and the Great

Loses 1200 Gallons of Gasoline When Someone Opens Valve

William R. Browning, gasoline dealer, Oakland, lost approximately 1,200 gallons of gasoline Saturday night when an unknown party, supposedly after some fuel for his car, opened the drain valve of one of the large distributing tanks at the west edge of town.

Russell Leighton enroute to his home Saturday evening, heard the gasoline escaping and investigated. He then notified Mr. Browning and the valve was closed. Gas fumes were so strong in that vicinity that it was decidedly unpleasant for Liberty street residents, and in order to decrease the danger of somebody lighting a match nearby, a guard was placed there for a few hours.

There is no clue as to the identity of the party who opened the valve.

C. W. A. APPROVES REPAIR WORK ON PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Work on Projects Totalling $14,500 Will Begin Immediately Over Entire County System

MR. LORADITCH IN CHARGE

Projects for school buildings, totalling about $14,500, have been approved by the county and state Civil Works Administrations, and work will begin immediately, it has been announced. About $10,000 of this money will be expended for labor, both skilled and unskilled, and about $4,500 will go for materials.

A number of outbuildings will be constructed which are to be under the direct supervision of C. Milton Sincell, local engineer for the department of health, the outbuildings to be constructed principally at rural schools.

Other projects in connection with the public school buildings are painting, inside and outside, repairing roofs, windows, flues, repairing and constructing porches, vestibules, and floors; new and repaired inside toilets, walls and ceilings, repairing furniture, repairing and constructing suitable coal houses, digging wells, repairing and constructing springs for water supply, repairing and constructing foundation walls, improvement of playgrounds and all other types of similar facilities for public school buildings.

This work has been placed in charge of H. A. Loraditch, member of the school board who is being directly employed by the Civil Works Administration. Work will begin immediately, Mr. Loraditch stated, and none of the work will be done by contract.

The men for this work will be secured from those now employed, totalizing about 720, practically all of whom at present are engaged upon road projects. Those desiring to be transferred from road projects who have special training or experience for the school projects, are asked to see either Mr. Sincell or Mr. Loraditch.

Large Number of Applications

There are over 200 applications for C. W. A. projects, according to the committee. The application for the town reservoir is expected to be approved soon by the State administration.

Approximately 3,800 sanitary outhouses are to be constructed throughout the county in connection with the health program.

In St. Mark's Lutheran church on Sunday the usual Sunday school session at 9:30 with divine worship at 10:45 at which time officers of the Brotherhood, members of the Council and officers of the Sunday school will be installed and a new year's sermon by the pastor will be delivered.

Scouts Elect Officers For Ensuing Year

Officers in the Oakland Boy Scout troop were elected and appointed at last week's meeting.

Robert Altstetter was appointed as junior assistant scoutmaster with Howard Smouse, assistant scribe. Bernard Gonder, Jr., the assistant scoutmaster, is acting as scribe so that he may obtain the merit badge in business.

At the individual patrol election, Irving Broadwater was elected patrol leader of the Eagles with Robert Browning assistant; Horace O'Donnell was elected patrol leader of the Crows with Maurice Treaey assistant; William Glotfelty was named patrol leader of the Rattlesnakes with Irvin Feld assistant. No election was held in the Beaver patrol, and the Fox patrol desired to work as a unit, with no patrol leader or assistant.

Officers will be installed early in January. This week the officers of the troop have charge of the program.

Lesson for December 31

THE LIFE OF PAUL

LESSON TEXT—Philippians 3:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. II Timothy 4:7.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories of Paul.
JUNIOR TOPIC—In Sight of the Goal.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Aiming High.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Debt to Paul.

In order to grasp the meaning of this lesson it is necessary to understand the entire letter to the Philippians. The occasion for writing to the Philippians was the receipt of a much needed contribution from the hand of Epaphroditus for Paul's support while in prison (Phil. 4:10-18). The church was perhaps small and certainly poor (II Cor. 8:1-3), yet it repeatedly sent gifts to him (II Cor. 11:8, 9). It is therefore a letter of a grateful missionary to the church which sent means for his support.

I. The True Israelite. (vv. 1-3).

Certain Judaistic teachers had persistently dogged the steps of Paul. Against such he issues the warning, "Beware of dogs"; "beware of evil workers"; "beware of the concision." The true Israelite is the one who worships God in the spirit, rejoicing in Christ Jesus, having no confidence in the flesh.

II. Paul's Ground of Confidence. (vv. 4-6).

Paul had everything in which a true Jew might glory.

1. "Circumcised the eighth day" (v. 5). This was the literal requirement of the law for those born under the Abrahamic covenant. His being circumcised showed his true upbringing.

2. "Of the stock of Israel" (v. 5). He was of the chosen nation by blood and birth.

3. "Of the tribe of Benjamin" (v. 5). The first king of Israel, whose name he bore, was a Benjaminite. The tribe of Benjamin, though small, had remained loyal to national customs.

4. "A Hebrew of the Hebrews" (v. 5). This showed he was of Hebrew parentage and not a proselyte.

5. "Touching the law, a Pharisee" (v. 5). The Pharisees were of the sect most zealous for the rites and ceremonies of Judaism.

6. "Concerning zeal, persecuting the church" (v. 6). He proved his zeal by his positive effort to stamp out that which was threatening Judaism.

7. "Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless" (v. 6). So exactly had he conformed to this requirement of the law that he was consciously blameless.

III. Paul's Estimate of Himself (vv. 7-9).

If any man had a right to confidence on the ground of inheritance and accomplishment, Paul had. The vision of Christ and his merits gave him the true perspective of values. In this light he saw the utter worthlessness of the things he prized most. He counted all things but loss for Christ, even regarding them as refuse in comparison with what he had gained.

IV. Paul's Transcendent Aim (vv. 10, 11).

1. "That I may know him" (v. 10). Personal acquaintance with the Lord Jesus Christ was his supreme desire.

2. "The power of his resurrection" (v. 10). This is an advance over personal acquaintance with the Lord. It is the expression of the life of Christ through the apostle.

3. "The fellowship of his sufferings" (v. 10). It is suffering for righteousness' sake, the common experience of all who will follow the Lord.

4. "Attain unto the resurrection of the dead" (v. 11). It is not only to be resurrected but to have part in the first resurrection, that is, the resurrection from among the dead, when the Lord Jesus Christ comes back to the earth (I Thess. 4:16, 17).

V. Paul Presses Toward the Goal (vv. 12-14).

Paul clearly grasped the meaning of his perfection in Christ, yet he was keenly conscious of his personal limitation. Herein is expressed the true law of progress in the spiritual life.

1. Conscious limitations (v. 12). "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect."

2. Conscious of a transcendent goal (v. 13). The Christian life is an upward calling. One must know of heights before he will make any effort to attain unto them.

3. A resolute determination to reach the goal (v. 14). He declares "This one thing I do." The primary concern of life is not the stage of progress made, but the effort to attain thereto.

Planning the Future

We are always wanting to be doing, to be giving, to be planning for the future, to be mapping out all our life; instead of resting and receiving day by day, leaving the morrow to our God, and rejoicing in Jesus Christ amidst all our falls and failures.

The Live Reality

The profoundest fact of human life is that, for everyone, the real, the only true life is lived in the realm of the spirit.

THE SANDS OF TIME

New Year's Slippers

By Alice B. Palmer

THE doorbell rang at the bachelor apartment of the sedate John Ellers, just as he had settled down for a quiet evening with his "little blue books" on philosophy.

What did John care about New Year's wild parties, conventionalities and the like?

Now it did look like he was destined to forego the pleasure, and exchange Plato and Socrates for an evening of worthless nonsense.

He sauntered to the door with a scowl of disapproval. There stood a delivery boy who hurriedly thrust a parcel into the hands of the much surprised Mr. Bachelor, and was gone before he could utter a word. The stores on New Year's Eve were too busy to waste any time in delivery, as the young people were anxious to be finished and at home dressing for the greatest celebration of all the year.

What on earth? thought John; probably a practical joke by some of his friends, for when he opened the parcel out fell a pair of golden slippers—perfect Number 4. Kicking them out of his way, he returned to his study entirely forgetting the incident.

Meanwhile there was great commotion in the apartment above. Lucia Bell, the pretty radio entertainer, was waiting impatiently for the delivery of her dancing slippers. She was to be at the Stadio ball at nine o'clock and it was almost that now.

Out of breath, she rushed to the suite below and again John Ellers heard his doorbell ring.

What now? thought John, in disgust as he overturned the whole volume of little blue books, lost one of his slippers and spilled cigar ashes over the rug.

He swung the door open with a jerk, prepared to give the intruder a piece of his mind!

There stood Lucia Bell, demure and lovely in her excitement.

Just as she was about to speak she spied her golden slippers. With a look of surprise she said sweetly, "May I have my slippers?"

John forgot all about "little blue books," bachelorhood, conventionalities, doorbells on New Year's Eve—everything! And then he helped "Cinderella" into her slippers. He was simply John Ellers, serving the beautiful Lucia Bell, and all because of a pair of slippers that had gone astray.

As Time Moves On

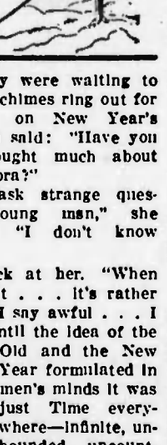
By Martha Banning Thomas

WHILE they were waiting to hear the chimes ring out for midnight on New Year's Eve, Dan said: "Have you ever thought much about Time, Dora?"

"You ask strange questions, young man," she laughed, "I don't know what you mean."

Dan grinned back at her. "When you get going on it . . . it's rather awful. And when I say awful . . . I mean just that. Until the idea of the Old and the New Year formulated in men's minds it was just Time everywhere—infinite, unbounded, uncounted, going on and on. Then I suppose somebody noticed, in certain parts of the world, that birds came back in one season, and went back another. That now it was cold for a while, and now it was hot. That the tides came and went with regularity . . . and so, they sort of scratched their heads and said, 'Look here . . . there are four seasons, spring, summer, autumn, winter. And there are suns and moons to measure them by, day and night.' I don't think Time itself really cares whether it is divided into twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, and twelve months a year or not; just a convenience for human beings. The animals don't care; the birds know when to leave and when to return without any calendars whatever . . . funny, isn't it? You get lost in the idea; not technically, but just brooding over it. What has happened in men's minds divides Time for us. Time itself is unchanged . . . it's awful, isn't it? Scares one a little."

The clock began booming off twelve strokes. "Midnight . . . and Happy New Year!" smiled Dora. "You're probably right, but I'm glad somebody thought it up—the beginning of a New year, and all the fun of it. If it were all just Time . . . where would the parties be?"



"Goose," he laughed, "Come on, let's go and crash one this minute!"

Calendar of Grapes

Spain has an old custom, observed on New Year's Eve, wherever merry-makers are gathered, of eating little bunches of exactly twelve grapes, one for each month of the year.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Well, here it is after Christmas and I don't have a dollar. But I had one more Christmas, and that's something, even if the budget doesn't balance. And one more turkey, believe it or not.

Since there is nothing particularly funny this week there is space for some valuable information. Maybe you knew it before, but the chances are you didn't. The title is "Why Vehicles Pass on the Right."

The Conestoga wagon, the freight-hauling vehicle of the early days, is responsible for the present custom of vehicles passing on the right in the United States, says the bureau of public roads. Before the extensive use of the Conestoga wagon, it was the custom to pass vehicles to the left, following the earlier English rule.

In England in the days when men traveled armed on horseback, it was the custom to pass to the left so that the sword or pistol arm would be on the side of the man passed. Later, in travel by coach or wagon, the driver sat on the right side to give his right arm free play in wielding the whip, and passing to the left he was better able to avoid entanglements with the wheels of passing vehicles. Traffic passes to the left to this day in England.

On the Continent—in France, Germany, and Italy—the postillion system of driving, by which the driver sat on the left wheel horse, existed in the early days for both coaches and wagons. To a man riding the left wheel horse passing to the right gives a better view of the passing vehicle. In these countries, passing to the right has always been the custom.

In Italy until the time of Mussolini vehicles in the cities, where postillions were customary, passed to the right; in the country, where box wagons were much used, vehicles passed to the left. Mussolini made passing custom uniform by decreeing that all should pass to the right.

The drivers of the Conestoga wagons rode the left wheel horse. Passing on the right was more convenient in spite of the fact that it was the custom to pass to the left, as in England. Drivers riding the "lazy board" of the Conestoga wagon—a board between the two left-side wheels that pulled out and could be ridden when driving from the side of the wagon—preferred passing traffic to the right, and the traffic was passed on that side.

The deep wagon ruts in the single-track roads made by the Conestoga wagon drivers were followed by other traffic. This explains why vehicles pass to the right in the United States.

And there's something you didn't know before.

The only chance an anonymous communication has of getting in The Republican is in this column, and there was one this week about a big rabbit hunt near Blooming Rose on Christmas Day.

We hunted for the name of the writer on the letter, and since it wasn't there the paper was gently deposited in the waste basket, where all such letters go.

A sensation back in the old days was a runaway horse. It still would be.

There have been quite a few at this office who have requested that this column print the names of the Oakland citizens who were on that account book of an alleged bootlegger, which was confiscated here several weeks ago along with a still and some mash.

If it wasn't for the buyer, there wouldn't be any bootleggers I guess, so who is to blame?

The list would make a swell column for a week, and I'd feel sure that it would be read by every person in the county. Popularity for a time.

When the time arrives when everybody is on the government payroll, and it doesn't seem as if that time is so far distant, who is going to do the work?

Says me, as if I had ever done enough to make it hurt.

But you don't know what an effort it has been this week, to come back after a two-day holiday, with the temperature at the zero mark, and your mind at sub-zero. It's a care-free fecling but it doesn't get you anywhere.

For instance, how far along are you, now that you have actually read all this stuff? You might just as well stick your head back under the covers and wait until next week. It might be warmer.

HUNDREDS of thousands of people now own and drive Ford V-8 cars. Some neighbor or friend of yours has one. If we told you what we think of the car, you might say we are prejudiced, so we let the car and its owner tell you.

Economy of operation is one of the first points they will emphasize—the owner will boast of it and the car will prove it.

The 1934 car is even better than the 1933—and that was our best car up to its time. The new car is more beautiful—faster—more powerful—gives more miles to the gallon—better oil economy—is easier riding—cheaper to own and operate than any car we ever built.

You owe it to yourself and your pocketbook to ask our Ford Dealer to let you see this car, and let you drive it for yourself. At the wheel of the car you will be sure to reach a right decision. The Ford V-8 will tell you its own story.

A Million Dollar Farm For Farmers

By STIRLING GRAHAM
In the Baltimore Sunday Sun

Ever since President Roosevelt's inauguration last March, there has issued from Washington a rapid succession of acts affecting banks, business, industry and the farm. Now science has been given a helping hand by the New Deal—$1,303,000 having been appropriated from the Federal allotment of the Public Works fund for enlarging and improving the United States Department of Agriculture's experiment station at Beltsville, Maryland, some twenty miles from the steps of the nation's Capitol.

In 1910 the Department of Agriculture purchased a 500-acre tract at Beltsville, dividing it into two experimental farms, one for the dairy division, the other for the division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. Barns and laboratories were erected. Land was fenced in as pasture on which cattle could rove at will. There were gently rolling lawns for sheep to graze on and pens and sheds for goats and swine. From time to time new buildings were erected and additional land added until the Beltsville farm covered close to 3,000 acres.

But the laboratories, in which scientists studied the effects of nutrition and breeding on guinea pigs and rabbits, before applying their discoveries to the heavier and more valuable live stock outside, were considered too small and inadequately equipped for studying problems that not only were of decided importance to the farmer but concerned the dealer and consumer as well. Moreover, the farm was divided by an extensive tract of privately owned land.

With the recent allotment from the Public Works fund, this privately owned land has now been leased, bringing the farm's total area up to about 4,000 acres. Moreover, besides the new barns, pens, small laboratory and other buildings that will be possible with the sum obtained, an animal husbandry laboratory costing $425,000 will be constructed, sufficiently commodious to house under one roof the various activities on nutrition, genetics, histology, physiology, bacteriology, meats and wool that now occupy separate quarters on the farm, Moreover, other research bureaus of the Department of Agriculture that are now located in Washington and nearby areas will bring together many of their projects like the reunited forces of a scattered army and, established in new quarters on the farm, make the Beltsville station the largest one of its kind in the world. Many phases of work of the Bureau of Entomology will be established there, as will also the Bureau of Plant Industry, and the studies of animal diseases and parasites that for many years has been located at Bethesda, a suburb of Washington, which, because of its real estate development, no longer desires such a farm.

Indeed, the fact that the Beltsville station has always been operated in cooperation with similar stations, such as Maryland's Agricultural farm at College Park, and other experimental farms throughout the country, has emphasized its importance, thus aiding its continued development. Moreaver, the Government's interest has increased since the recent establishment at Beltsville of the radio experiment station of the Bureau of Standards and the airplane landing field of the Department of Commerce.

This winter the Civilian Conservation Corps camp forces that were encamped near Mountain Lake Park last summer will also make a portion of the farm their home for six months, utilizing as a barracks a vacated building which was once a reformatory school for girls.

The first units to arrive are already engaged in clearing and improving thickly wooded areas of the farm. Their brown uniforms give a military air to their activities, and the Forestry Department's trucks that rumble continuously into the farm with road-building material, add to the illusion of military activity.

Even the men at the head of the Beltsville project, who are kept busy these days commuting between their offices in Washington and the farm, have about them that feverish wartime attitude that has become a characteristic of many a Government official since the New Deal got under way.

Indeed, it is no easy matter to pin them down for an hour's questioning, but Dr. E. W. Sheets, chief of the animal husbandry division, was finally cornered. Since an early hour he had been going over the plans for a new cattle barn, conferring with the farm's superintendent and studying possible improvemenas for the newly acquired land. At the moment the plans for the new nutrition laboratory were in his hand. "Getting a million-dollar project under way," he said, "is no easy undertaking. At an ahnormal time like this every minute is precious. Two hundred men are now at work preparing the ground for new buildings, and I want to put 200 more to work as soon as possible."

Putting men to work, however, is the emergency phase of the undertaking. For the scientists of the Department of Agriculture, the improvements made possible by the recent appropriation will be the realization of dreams that have cherished since the first plot of ground was purchased in 1910. And though new research problems will be tackled, of course, the studies that have occupied the farm's research workers for many years will benefit not a little from the improved equipment and increased acreage.

For with the present ground and equipment much has been accomplished. By means of an up-to-date slaughtering house and laboratory the carcasses and hides of cattle, sheep and swine that have been bred and raised under varying conditions are tested and compared. The data thus compiled has a wide significance, since this study has been given not only to the animals raised on the Beltsville farm, but also to the meat and hides of live stock that have been shipped to Beltsville for slaughter from the Department's other experimental stations, including those in the sheep and cattle areas of the Far West.

By a series of such tests, conducted over a number of years, knowledge has been obtained that will react to the advantage of the farmer's purse. It has been found that lambs raised on good pasture land yield a meat as palatable as that of lambs fed on more expensive grain feeds. Moreover, contrary to the opinion that the most economical way to fatten hogs to a market stage is to feed them all they can eat, it now is discovered that pigs fed limited rations are better able to utilize their food, requiring much less feed per one hundred pounds gained. Obviously this offers an economical way to reduce production costs when the market demands a predominance of leaner cuts. It has been found, too, that ewes flushed on extra good pasture produce more lambs than those flushed on grain; that nutrition has more effect on wool growth than temperature, rainfall, or other climatic factors, while of interest to the dealer is the proven fact that tenderness of legs of lamb is increased by aging in cold storage at a temperature of 36 to 40 degrees from seven to ten days after slaughter.

Furthermore, the discovery that meats of animals of different breeds do not show nearly the marked differences in structure and palatability as do individual animals of the same breed (vigor and general physical development affecting the quality of meat rather than difference in type) has convinced agriculturists that development of superior families within a breed is an important step.

There is wide knowledge, of course, of the fact that quantity of production, besides being influenced by proper feeding, is strongly influenced by heredity, a discovery the possibilities of which are being carefully explored by the dalry and dual-purpose cattle breeding projects. Bulls that have daughters that produce large quantities of milk are classed as proved hulls and are kept apart especially for breeding purposes. In this way cows capable of yielding an astonishing amount of milk have been developed. Thus, by the use of proved bulls, it is pointed out, farmers can reduce their herds and at the same time produce the same amount of milk.

The same rules apply to poultry. For instance, it has been definitely proved that birds that mature most quickly can be depended upon to lay the greatest number of eggs. And since the tendency to mature early is known to be inherited, the poultry man can regulate his egg yield by judicious selection and breeding without the expense of adding additional stock.

As Dr. Sheets points out, the objective of the experiment station and farms is not to increase production but to decrease its cost, at the same time raising the quality of products produced to as high a standard as possible, achievements not so well understood by a few who hold the view that research is partly responsible for the depression by increasing the farmer's efficiency to a point where he was producing more than could be consumed.

When it was considered, says Dr. Sheets, that sixty to sixty-five percent of a farmer's income is derived from his live stock, and that the live stock industry as a whole entails a $6,000,000,000 annual turnover, the funds expended on an experiment farm for studying problems that the farmer could not possibly hope to solve alone are insignificant.

As an example of money saved the country, agricultural scientists point to the eradication of Texas cattle fever that in the late nineties was prevalent on practically every cattle ranch as far north as the Mason-Dixon line, costing the country $70,000,000 annually in ruined beef. In 1892 Dr. Cooper Curtice proved the cattle tick spends its entire adult existence on a steer and drops to the ground only when ready to lay its eggs. Almost at the same time, Dr. Theobald Smith discovered that Texas fever was caused by a protozoa in the blood; that it was extracted by the blood-sucking tick and transferred in turn to the tick's eggs, the newly hatched brood infecting other steers on which they later made their home.

Exterminating the ticks was thus obviously the way to check the fever. M. S. Mayo, of Cuba, laid the foundation for a method by his discovery that an arsenic solution would kill the ticks; unluckily, it also killed the cattle at the same time. But Dr. Robert Chapin then completed the study by perfecting the solution for use in great vats in which the steers could be dipped without injury.

With the attainment of effective weapons, the Department of Agriculture was ready by 1906 to do battle against the ticks. As a matter of fact this campaign against vast parasitical forces not infrequently became something resembling warfare when farmers, misunderstanding the objective of the department's inspectors and veterinarians, used fists and guns to drive them away. An imaginary line was drawn across the country dividing infected territory from areas free of the ticks, and a law was passed forbidding the driving of cattle north or south over this line. In spite of men killed, lack of funds and lack of cooperation, especially in the more southern states, the department had, by 1932, twenty-six years after the commencement of the drive, stamped out Texas fever from every state south of the Mason-Dixon line except portions of Texas, Louisiana, and Florida. This was achieved at a total cost of $41,670.79—not as much as Texas fever cost the country in one year.

Other achievements, less dramatic in their accomplishment, but just as important to the farmer, have been worked out by the department's scientists and then applied to a practical end. Dr. Maurice C. Hall, chief of the geological division of the department, discovered a cure for hookworm, and Dr. Marion Dorset is responsible for the preventive serum of hog cholera.

Interesting experiments are now under way at Beltsville with boiled mixed milk of Saanen and Toggenburg goats. Fed to 208 rats and 18 young goats on the farm, and also to 10 infants, fed under the direction of specialists at the Johns Hopkins University, the milk proved highly nourishing.

But aside from the scientific importance of the farm, it is not unpleasing to the eye, especially at the present time, when autumn reds and golds are fast erasing the summer green. Pastures, still green from abundant rains, are plentiful and spacious, and so the ax has been used only where foliage would interfere with work to be accomplished. On the hill commanding the farm thick oaks and tall poplars stand guard about the superintendent's house, a dwelling built in 1783. The customary prosaic drabness of endless poultry yards and sheds is overcome by the artistic spacing of many fruit trees, while behind the cattle barn trees, fifty or so yards apart, provide a boon to animals as pasture by affording ample shade.

Also on the farm, so concealed by pines and poplars as to be undiscernible unless one leaves the narrow road and wanders beneath the trees, is a steep ravine at the bottom of which a pond affords a home for clusters of lily pads. Originally an old ore pit that was abandoned when underground streams flooded the mine, it adds natural beauty to the farm without having necessitated the expenditure of a single dollar. The semi-circular sides of the ravine, sloping gently to the lake, form a natural amphitheatre where visiting farmers and their families hold picnics and meetings during summer days.

In fact, the preservation of the farm's natural beauty, points out Dr. Sheets, has been an objective ever since the first lot of ground was obtained. The farm's development has always been carried out with an eye to the future, new buildings being placed in positions that would be in contact with increased acreage should the latter be attainable by means of Government appropriations.

The proposed New York to Washington boulevard would pass through the farm for a mile and a half, and in the event of its construction the park commission can be counted on to utilize the scenic advantages that the farm offers. With the improvements now under way Beltsville, besides being the largest experimental farm of it kind, will be a Federal park that will be well worth an hour's sightseeing.

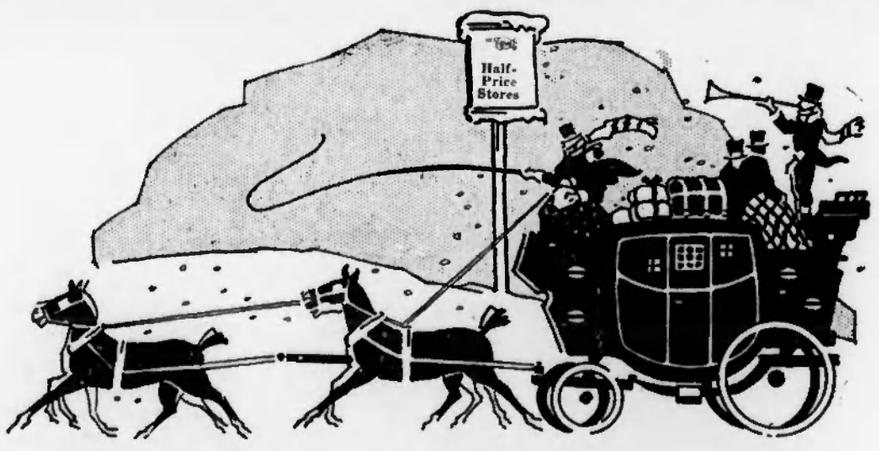
A Happy New Year



TO YOU AND YOURS

When Sunday midnight welcomes 1934 . . . and joyous friends hail each other with the greetings of the season . . . may we, too, add our wish that the New Year will bring to you and yours, Happiness and Prosperity!

The coming year holds forth nothing so great as Opportunity. Regardless of conditions, new developments political, social and economic, there will inevitably be three groups at this time next year as in every previous year: those who have prospered, those who have not, and those who have remained stationary. Whether these changes or non-changes will be in business, science, art, literature, education, music, religion or any other field depends upon the objectives of each individual person or group.

The only certainty is that for each and every one of us Opportunity will be as great as it has always been. Believing that in the opportunity to be of service to this community lies our greatest success, we join in expressing this belief. With a promise that every effort will be made to insure, through greater service to the community, not only the well-being of those dependent upon us for a livelihood, but each and every family upon whom our failure to succeed might cast a detrimental reflection, we join in wishing you "Happy New Year!"

This Greeting is Extended to All by The

ANOTHER GOVERNMENT LARK?

It has been announced officially at Washington that a plan is now being considered for government control of the great system of communication, the radio, the telephone, the telegraph and our international communications. The purpose is to put these into four monopolistic systems, all of which, of course, are to be rigidly supervised at Washington. Bills are now being drafted, it is said, by a committee working in cooperation with Secretary of Commerce Roper.

Three general proposals have been submitted by Mr. Roper: the first permitting the continuance of the systems as private enterprises as at present; the second, proposing government controlled monopolies, and the third providing for out and out government ownership. The administration, according to reports, favors the second of these three plans and bills will be presented in accordance with this preference.

It is added that the experience which the government gained in supervising and regulating the railroads during the World War will be used as the foundation for this latest government control. It had not been generally believed that this railroad experience during the Warld Was was an especially happy one. Certainly it was not happy from the standpoint of the man who used the railroads, or for the railroads themselves. At the end of the Wilson administration government control of railroads was about as popular as the mumps. It remains to be seen whether, in case Mr. Roper's ideas are enacted into law, the government control of these enterprises will prove any happier than the previous experience.

Probably one of the first questions which will occur to the average mind is just what it is all about and the reason for this regrouping and control. Some time ago the newspapers of the country were much perturbed by the thought that some sort of censorship of the press might grow out of the code provided to control this great system for disseminating news and information. This leads the Chicago Tribune to say editorially of this new proposal for regulating the great systems of communication: "That control of the means of communication means control of the thing communicated cannot be dismissed as an improbability, notwithstanding the many governmental disavowals of any intent to censor information and opinion. These disavowals have never been supported by guarantees which would satisfy the demands of Americans seeking to preserve unimpaired the groundwork of freedom in the United States. The government's position in this regard has not been reassuring but, on the contrary, all relevant evidence which is procured indicates a real desire on the part of federal administrators to support their projects by control of information and manipulation of opinion.

"Although at times the administrators remonstrate that it is absured to attribute such purpose to them and question the sincerity of their critics, each definite step they take is perceived as being in the direction of supervised channels and mediums of information with an unavoidable influence upon the character of the information and opinion communicated. Radio has felt this influence and the newspapers have been brought face to face, in spite of government denials, with the prospect of administration supervision of their production and their contents."

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Oakland Cornet Band went to The Republican office and rendered a few selections.

D. E. Offutt associated with him in his mercantile business in Oakland his eldest son Edward.

Daniel W. Dorsey, who was studying law in Oakland with Peddicord and Peddicord, spent the holidays with his parents in Grantsville.

Arch Cosner, resiling as Bismark, W. Va., near Gorman, was accidentally shot and lived only a few moments afterwards.

At an educational meeting in Oakland, the subject discussed was to devise some plan so as to form separate school districts throughout the county.

Many people of various communities were suffering from la grippe, according to local news letters.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

A diamond drill was unloaded and hauled to the Col. Woods farm where operators were to take out cores showing the geological formation of that section of the country, to see what veins of coal were there.

The government was being put to a test of being able to care for mail and packages, as this was the first parcel post Christmas.

Henry Lauer returned from a visit to his father and sister in Germany.

The Three Fork Coal Co. erected twenty homes for its employes at Maysville, this county.

The Davis Coal and Coke purchased another narrow guage locomotive to haul coal from Gobbler's Knob to old Hampshire dump.

George Little was laid up for several days when he strained his back helping to lift a hand car from the B. and O. tracks at Weber.

Nineteen Hundred and Thirty-Four

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

A timely warning on the alarming rise in the national debt of the United States was issued recently by the National Economy League. The statement issued by the League sets out that in the fiscal year which ended June 30, last, out national debt was increased in the sum of three billions of dollars. This, however, is only a small part of the story. It is conservatively estimated that the increase for the fiscal year which will end on June 30, 1934, will be in the neighborhood of four billions more. An increase of seven billions in two years is not to be taken lightly, even in a nation with the potential resources of the United States.

The League's statement sets out that these vast additions to debts are unprecedented in any country in time of peace, and that while a considerable portion of the recent expenditures is set down as "loans and investments," grave doubt is expressed as to whether any considerable part of the money will ever be returned to the federal treasury, and even then only after a period of several years.

Continuing, the report says:

"Another enormous increase of the debt during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, is threatened. No assurance has been given as to the extent of future emergency expenditures or as to whether there is any considered plan to balance the whole budget and bring the increase of the debt to a halt. Granting that large expenditures are justified in the emergency, in order to relieve distress and promote recovery, it must also be recognized that there is a limit to the government's capacity to borrow, even for these purposes."

As an illustration of the way the national debt is steadily mounting it may be stated that on June 30, 1933, it totaled $22,538,672,000, while on November 30 of this year it had increased to 23,534,116,000, so that the excess of expenditures over receipts during the five month period amounted to $995,444,000, or nearly $200,000,000 a month.

The national debt at its peak, following the World War, August 31, 1919, during the Wilson administration, was $26,594,267,000. This had been decreased to $16,931,197,000 at the end of the Coolidge administration, and reached the low point, December 31, 1930, $16,026,086,000, in the administration of President Hoover. The increase in the debt has been especially rapid during the past six or eight months. It is estimated that by the end of the fiscal year of 1934, it will again have reached the World War peak and perhaps mounted beyond that point.

These figures are staggering enough to furnish food for serious thought on the part of every American who has the future welfare of his country at heart. Many are now asking the question whether we are not mortgaging the next generation. But there is a prospect even more serious than this. May our burdens not rise to the point where the government will no longer be able to maintain its credit and there will be inflation and general ruin for all?

Of course, nobody wants a debased currency, who realizes the destructive influence it always has on the welfare of all the people of a nation, but unfortunately it is possible to be subject to these influences as a matter of inevitability when the credit and currency of a nation break down. To quote again from the report of the National Economy League:

"It is not therefore so much in a voluntary adoption of unsound money that the country's danger lies. It lies rather in the gradual creeping up of the national debt to a point where the use of unsound money is no longer preventable—a degradation forced by circumstances rather than by deliberate act. An excessive national debt leads by a gradual but inevitable process toward the printing of fiat money. There is a direct connection between an undue rise in a nation's debt and the soundness of its currency. It is this gradual trend of which the American people have to beware. The national debt, great as it is, is still supportable on the basis of a sound currency. But if its increase is much longer tolerated, the American people may find themselves no longer masters of their own decisions, and may wake up too late to repair the damage."

Here is the truth in a nutshell: a nation's debt when it becomes too great a burden, either taxes generations yet unborn, or leads to debased currency and national ruin. It may conceivably do both.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

SECOND CORINTHIANS

The Second Epistle to the Church at Corinth was written from Philippi and sent by Titus and Lucas. The special theme of this letter is the setting forth of the marks of Paul's ministry and to vindicate his apostleship. He declares that all true believers are living epistles, "written not with ink, but with the spirit of the living God: not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart." The superiority of the new dispensation is set forth, the fulness of revelation in Christ declared and the preaching of Christ commanded.

The great apostle dwells largely upon his own ministry. This is, indeed, the most personal of all Paul's epistles. He opens his heart and discloses his motives, his spiritual passion, and his tender love for the Church.

There are no definite divisions of thought in the epistle, but the subject matter may be arranged under several headings, the first of which deals with the characteristics of the apostle's ministry. Certain words immediately suggest themselves as key words of this theme: Comforting, suffering, sincerity, steadfastness, solicitude, triumph, self-sacrificing, spiritual, persuasive, reconciling, authoritative, self-supporting. Love of Christ was ever the controlling motive.

Surely if ever a ministry was attested Paul's was pre-eminently; by the call on the Damascus road, by unparalleled sufferings, by wonderful revelations received and by mighty deeds performed.

Among the choice selections of this letter is Paul's description of the ideal ministry, as set forth by him in the fourth chapter, verses 1-18. The heart of the message is in verse 5: "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake."

Paul's triumph over death, chapter 5:1-9 is incomparable: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle is dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of Him."

The call to separation from the world, in Chapter 6:14-18, does not strike a popular note in any age; but the necessity of living above the material plane is one that all thoughtful men and women must recognize.

The list of sufferings endured by Paul, as set forth in Chapter 11:24-33, marks him as a fellow sufferer with Christ. Beaten, stoned, imprisoned, shipwrecked, in the desert, in wilderness, insufficiently clad, athirst, and hungered, he never lost the vision glorious, but ever pressed on toward the mark of the prize of his high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

RURAL SANITATION PLAN TO BE OF GREAT BENEFIT

County-wide Plans Being Organized on Basis of Population

Private homes, school property, tourist camps, dairies, canneries, oyster and crab houses and small communities without sewerage facilities, will benefit by the State-wide rural sanitation campaign that is being worked out by the Maryland State Department of Health and the U. S. Public Health Service. Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, is director for Maryland, and Mrs. J. P. Clawson is assistant director of community sanitation.

The State has been divided into four districts with a district supervisor in charge of the work in each district and a local supervisor handling the work in each county. In outlining the plans for Maryland, Dr. Riley said:

"The county-wide plans are being organized on the basis of population with particular reference to that part of the population and to the properties that are without sewerage facilities.

"The aim of the Department is to bring about the installation of sanitary toilets for all properties—public or private—that are now without them. The work will give employment to men on the unemployed lists who will be paid out of the money appropriated from Federal funds. Lumber and other material must be provided for sanitary projects by the owner or occupant of the property.

"Since a great many of the schools in the counties are without sanitary toilet facilities, a special effort is being made to have such conditions improved. The County Superintendents of Schools have been notified that school sanitation projects should be included in the local Civic Works Administration program and that they are eligible for both labor and material.

"In order that they may benefit by the aid offered in this way, persons who are interested in improving the sanitary conditions in or near their homes, are advised to write to, or to get in touch with the county health officer. All work of this character must be under way within a given date. Construction work will be supervised by the County Supervisor of Community Sanitation Projects."

Merchants Express Themselves As Being Satisfied with the Christmas Business

Almost without exception merchants and business men of Oakland were well satisfied with the Christmas trade given by the public.

Stores were packed during the final pre-Christmas shopping days and late Saturday night all seemed cleaned out of the more appropriate and acceptable merchandise.

One store, did the largest business it had done since It opened, while another store did next to the largest busines lt had experienced in over forty years. Both these stores were users of The Republican in placing before the buying public their wares.

All merchants were of the opinion that the Christmas trade was better than even hoped for.

Her New Year's Resolution

By Helen Gaisford

JOHN LARKIN was too busy for frivolities on New Year's Eve. He sat at his massive desk till eleven, and then, to rest his eyes, turned off his lamp and sat in darkness, watching the lights and figures on the street below.

When he woke with a start an hour later at the sound of horns and sirens, he was cold and stiff. Suddenly he realized that some one else was in the room. He sat very quiet, scarcely breathing. A beam of light flashed and was gone. A moment later the unseen visitor had picked out the safe, and delicate fingers twirled the dial.

Although he realized that a shot might pass unnoticed in the din outside, he could scarcely sit and be robbed. With a sudden lunge he grasped both of the intruder's wrists—and in his arms lay a frail form, quite motionless. He looked for a weapon, found none, and turned on the lights.

"A girl," he exclaimed, "in boy's clothes!"

She stirred and sat up.

"Well," he demanded. "Tell me what you wanted in my safe."

"Nothing. Let me go."

"I suppose you were responsible for those letters that were stolen last week. But they were in code, so you came back for the key."

"Do you mean these?" She took from her shirt a sheaf of papers. "I was going to put them back. I have decoded them."

He took the papers. Above the code was a perfect translation. He looked at her a long time. "Don't, please," she said, and covered her face with her hands.

"Did anyone ever tell you how beautiful you are?" he asked. "White and dainty like those snowflakes falling outside."

She shrugged. "I suppose if you were going to call the police you would have done so by now."

"Yes."

"Are you going to let me go?"

"More than that. I'm going to take you home."

"I can get home all right. Even if anyone recognizes this as a disguise they will think it part of the night's celebration."

"As you say. But won't you tell me why at midnight on New Year's Eve, a beautiful woman returns a cleverly decoded message to my safe?"

"Yes," she answered. "Sit down.

"A week ago," she began, "I was way down on my luck. I have always been rather a gambler, and I vowed that I would either be well off or flat broke by the last day of the year.

"That night I read in the paper of your exploits in the stock market—how everything seemed to rise or fall at your command. I decided to throw my lot with yours—only I knew that of course you would not divulge your methods to a stranger."

"When the stranger is so beautiful one might do many things," he murmured. "Was your ruse successful?"

"Very. I now have ten times what I had then."

"But I don't understand how you got into my office, and found the combination to my safe."

She laughed. "That was easy. My father was a locksmith; when I was a child locks and their mechanisms were my toys. I could open them by touch."

"And decoded the messages."

"That did take work. I sat up all that night, trying again and again. You see, the possibility of a code had not occurred to me when I first decided to rummage among your personal effects. That was why I had to take the papers away, instead of just reading them. But at last I was lucky, and once I got a start, it was just a question of time."

"You have a good start into the New Year as a safe-breaker," he observed.

"Please don't say that. I was so desperate, and it hasn't hurt anyone."

"But it has," he insisted. "I'll never be the same unless I am sure you are keeping out of such devilitry."

"If I make a New Year's resolution never to crack another safe will that satisfy you?"

"Partly," he answered, as he opened the door for her, "only I think I had better come around now and then to see that you keep it. What are you doing this coming year?"

Football an Old Time New Year's Celebration

ONE of the most peculiar and ancient of the New Year's celebrations is that held before the cathedral at Kirkwall, in the Orkneys. The inhabitants, according to old Norse customs, divide into two sections, and meet at the market cross to have a general game of football. All living above the cathedral play to get the ball to the country district, those residing before the cathedral fighting to get it to the sea, the whole game being played through the principal streets of the town, and hundreds of players of all grades of society often take part in the game.

The Passing Year

By Henry Loukusa, in Detroit News

THE year that we measured has ended;
And has fused with the eons sublime.
The land-marks we knew have all blended
In the age old image of time.

Its suns and its shadows have perished,
Like the loves that we quickly forget;
But the spring and the autumn it cherished
Still haunt with a tinge of regret.

We meet on this threshold each season;
And we sigh as the sands must drift by.
Each grain is as precious as reason,
For they total the years 'til we die.

New Year's in the Family

By Charles Frederick Wadsworth

JIM TROMAN stamped the snow from his feet and entered the front door of his home.

He stood straight, with chin up and a good-humoredly challenging look in his eye.

Anne Troman, busy preparing the table for the evening meal, looked up.

"Well, Father," she smiled, "you look pretty well pleased with yourself this evening."

"I don't know how I look, but I feel like a million dollars!" was Jim's reply.

"And why?" Anne wanted to know.

"Just because," Jim spoke deliberately and impressively, "I am going to start the New Year with a clean slate. I have paid every bill I owed. No man can say I owe him a dime. And I have yet one day to go before New Year's!"

"That's surely is fine," said Anne. "It does make us feel good, doesn't it?"

"Hold on there, Daddy Jim," warned little Bert. "You haven't paid me back that three dollars and thirty-one cents I let you have some time ago out of my bank."

"Nor the two dollars and eighty-six cents I let you have out of my bank," little Agnes reminded him.

Daddy Jim laughed. "Oh, that is all in the family. You know I'll pay you back, don't you?"

"Of course," said Bert, "but so did all those other folks you paid off. So why did you think you had to pay them and not us?"

"Because," said Daddy Jim, "they are business people and need the money to use in their business and make more money."

"Well, so do I want to make more money," argued Bert gravely. "I want to start a savings account the first of the year, and get interest on my money."

"Me, too," chimed in little Agnes.

Anne laughed as Daddy Jim's eyes widened. "I think the children have one on you there, Father."

"Yes, I guess they have, at that," said Jim, leaning back in his chair to get his hand into his trousers pocket. "Now, let me see. Here is a five-dollar bill, three ones, and a dollar fifty-nine in change. After paying my young creditors I would have three dollars and forty-one cents left for a New Year's dinner."

Daddy Jim looked at Anne inquiringly. She smiled.

"That will do very nicely," she said.

"Okay," said Jim heartily. "Here is the whole works. Pay the claims of our distinguished little creditors, and look after the big dinner with what's left."

He held the money out to her.

"And as for the dinner," she assured him, "I am surely going to surprise you!"

DON CARLTON gripped the wheel tightly as the car plowed a zig zag path through the mire of the country road. What a fool he had been to allow himself to be talked into taking the short cut between Webster and Holton! But he had been in such a hurry to get back to Chicago to join with the crowd in welcoming in the New Year. If only he had made sufficient inquiry he could have found out about this awful detour. He hadn't thought there were any roads left that were quite so bad, and he couldn't have foreseen the quick and annoying thaw that had set in.

Down the sleep grade the big car careened—now on one side of the road, now on the other. He couldn't hold it to the ruts. It got more and more beyond his control every minute—until finally the left rear wheel slid into the heavy three-foot bank at the side.

Don made a sound that was almost a groan. He was beyond speech for the moment. Could anything be worse? Marooned in the dark on a country road, and on New Year's Eve! As hungry as a hawk, without even a sandwich to bite on. Hang it all, anyway! Why hadn't he used a little common sense?

Stumbling out of his seat, he stood upon the running board for a moment. There didn't seem to be a thing that he could do. The heavy night was all around him, and there probably wasn't a house within miles.

But there was! For the friendly light of a Christmas candle was blinking at him from the window of a small cottage that stood back some distance from the road!

Braving the sticky mud that made walking so difficult, Don approached the house and knocked.

"I—I beg your pardon for bothering you," he said apologetically, "but my car got stalled out in front and I thought maybe I could use your telephone."

"I—I Beg Your Pardon for Bothering You."

There was something likable in the face of the lad standing inside the door. "I'm sorry, we've got no phone, mister, but—but I know mam would be glad to have you come in. Wouldn't you, mam?" He turned toward a slender and charming dark-haired woman as he spoke.

"Why, of course," she said, with a smile. "We're always glad to assist a stranger, and—and we can fix you something to eat, and you can stay here until some one comes along to help you."

Soon the appetizing odors of ham and eggs and coffee filled the room. Don inhaled the fragrance while he talked to the children. He found the other three just as pleasant as the boy who had opened the door. There was something especially likable about them all.

Don did a lot of thinking while he ate the delicious meal. His sharp eyes had taken in the situation at a glance. There was poverty in the little home—not the kind that shows itself to the world unashamed—but the shabby refinement. A few new toys of the cheapest kind were the only things to show that Christmas had come to the little family.

He thought with a thrill of the package that lay under the back seat of his car. He was glad now that a mistake had been made on the shipment to the Nelson Stores and they had asked him to bring the things into the factory branch for credit.

But instead of going to the factory branch, he made up his mind that the contents of the package would remain in the Dalton cottage. And he felt quite sure that he was going to have a lot more fun out of the thing he was going to do than he ever could have celebrating the New Year with his bachelor friends in Chicago.

An hour later, after help had come along, and while he was being towed to the highway, there echoed in his ears above the plop-plop of the horses' feet, the hearty thanks and good wishes for a happy New Year that the Dalton family had repeated with such sincerity. And he felt that such good wishes must come true.

MT. LAKE PARK

You may brag about your pickles,
'Bout your ale and beer and stout,
But nothing adds zest to the turkey
Like old-fashioned, homemade kraut.

It is tickling to your schnozzle
And it makes a dandy filler,
And no one makes it quite as good
As our old friend Nelson Miller.

The verse is rotten, but the kraut was good.

It was Christmas Eve. There was wafted on the breeze an odor at once zestful and appetizing. We wondered.

Presently there was an alarm at the outer door, and there stood Nelse Miller with the source of the odor in his hand. It had preceded him by many blocks.

And the next day, with the aroma of the cooking increasing our already overdue appetite, we wondered if half enough had been cooked. At dinner, with generous helping before us, flanked by a like helping of mashed potatoes, we knew that Nelse had made a friend for life. That kraut was just right—schmell and everything.

Old timers can recall when winter started off in November with a heavy fall of snow, and the thermometer hovered around zero to ten below for weeks. Considering the wonderful weather up to and including Christmas Day, we have no reason to complain of the present cold spell. Variety is the spice of life. In any event, our complaints in that respect just don't register. The weather man just goes about his business of manufacturing the kind of weather that suits him. And he is not under the restrictions of a Code.

Lowell Thomas should visit Mt. Lake Park in the interest of his tall story club. A short time ago Foster Falkenstine, while going home after delivering milk, spied a rabbit in the F. E. Baker yard. He hurled an empty bottle and missed by a hair (no pun). The bunny glanced around and seeing who it was and the kind of weapon, treated the situation with contempt and hopped away only about ten feet. That was the mistake of his young life. For whiz, went another bottle and the bunny joined his honored ancestors.

It looks as though G street, running from the state road past the auditorium grounds to the Dr. Carr property, is going to be improved by hard surfacing. Engineers have been at work and the grade and location stakes have been driven. If it it an assured fact, and we understand it is, that was good work on the part of the Mayor and Council.

Those who have attended camp-meetings for the past forty years and those who attend in the future, will note a lone pine tree standing in the grove of oaks around the old auditorium. The older ones will know, and the younger generation will be told that it stands as a memorial to a man devoted to the Mt. Lake Park Camp-meeting—Andy Dolbow. It was dedicated to him last Saturday evening with fitting ceremonies and is a community Christmas tree.

The Baptist U. B. ceremonies were well attended and thoroughly enjoyed.

Wednesday morning is usually our time for gathering personals. But with the thermometer hovering around zero, and 8 or 10 inches of snow on the ground and no paths broken, what would you do? Well, that's just what we did.

The Loch Lynn U. B. Ladies Aid society will hold a social January 1, in the Ladies Aid Hall, beginning at 7:30. The members are requested to turn in the holiday gift cards, each one who returns card with one dollar will be served free refreshments. Ice cream, cake, coffee, and home made candy will be on sale.

DIED.

MRS. SAVILLA BEACHY MILLER

Mrs. Savilla Beachy Miller, widow of the late Joel J. Miller, aged 88, of Grantsville, died at her home last Wednesday evening.

She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Beachy, and was born at Springs, Pa.

The following children survive: Mrs. S. N. Yoder, Pinto; Mrs. H. S. Yoder, Jonas J., Alvin J., and Milton J. Miller, Grantsville; Mrs. L. J. Schrock, Greenwood, Del.; also half brothers and sisters: Jonas Beachy, Ohio; Noah Beachy, Boynton, Pa.; David Beachy, Illinois; Cornelius Beachy, Ohio; Mrs. Christiana Swartzentruber, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Daniel Swartzentruber, of Gortner; and Mrs. E. S. Miller, of Springs, Pa.

The funeral was held Friday from the Maple Glen Amish Mennonite church at 10 o'clock, Rev. Nevin Bender, Greenwood, Del.; Rev. C. D. Miller, Rev. Shem Peasley, Springs, Pa., officiating. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery.

RECOMMEND SAVAGE RIVER SITE FOR RESERVOIR DAM

Savage Mountains eight miles east of Grantsville and flowing generally southward it empties into the Potomac River near Bloomington, also in Garrett county.

The report of the engineers considers a three-fold purpose in regulating the flow of the Upper Potomac River.

The report cites that none of the streams entering the Potomac between Cumberland and Piedmont are large enough or suitable for storage purposes. The most important streams are the Savage River of 120 square miles of drainage area, George's Creek with 76 square miles, Abram's Creek, 38 square miles and Stony River with 58.5 square miles.

The Savage and Stony rivers are given consideration. They have been mapped by the U. S. Geological Survey. James H. Fuertes, engineer in 1911 made a survey of the Savage River for Cumberland.

Mark W. Roe, chairman of the Upper Potomac River Board last Friday summarized the report of the engineers who made a survey of the watersheds of the Savage and Stony rivers, in connection with plans to build an impounding dam to assure an even flow in the Potomac River. His summary was as follows:

"The Upper Potomac River Board has received its report from the consulting engineering firm of Gannett, Seelye & Fleming, of Harrisburg, Pa., who were retained by the industries, city and county to make the investigation. The report is very concise and conclusive, as summarized herewith:

A—Dilution of the sewerage discharged in the river from towns along its banks, Cumberland being the largest contributor.

B—The increase of dry weather flow to meet the needs of present industries and those to come, using water from the river.

C—Such mitigation of flood flow as might be effected by a large reservoir on one of its main tributaries.

"There are several streams which empty into the Potomac above Cumberland, but none of the streams entering between Cumberland and Piedmont are large enough or suitable for storage purposes. The most important streams are the Savage River of 120 square miles drainage area; Stony River with 58.5 square miles; George's Creek with 76 square miles, and Abram' Creek with 38 square miles. Abram's Creek is the smallest and the slopes so steep that large storage is impossible.

Streams Flow Studied

"George's Creek is paralleled by a railroad and is impregnated with acid water from coal mines, hence its elimination.

"Stony River enters the Potomac near Schell, 26 miles above Luke, and could be made available.

"Savage River enters the Potomac nearly a mile above Luke and could be made available.

"Hence these two last rivers will have our consideration. Both streams have been mapped by the U. S. Geological Survey and Mr. Fuertes in 1911 made a survey of Savage River for the City of Cumberland.

"After study of available data and these maps, and an inspection of the streams the best sites of each were selected and retailed studies made.

Industrial Cooperation

"The first problem was to find out from records over the past five years the amount of water used and the average normal increase for each of the industries, together with their possible future requirements. The industries contributing to this data are:

West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co.; Celanese Corporation; The Kelly-Sprinfield Tire Co.; Potomac Edison Company.

"The West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company at Luke, Maryland, is the first user of water in their pulp and paper manufacture. Their requirements are 25,000,000 gallons per day, or about 750,000,000 gallons per month. Their dry weather requirements are now met by their own dam on Stony River, some 40 miles away.

"The next user is the Celanese Corporation of America. Their requirements are 27,000,000 gallons per day or 800,000,000 gallons per month and have been increasing each year very materially. They also figure their future requirements at about 70,000,000 gallons per day, but through re-use and cooling ponds this can be kept to the make-up requirements of about 18,000,000 gallons per day or nearly 500,000,000 gallons per month, considering every day operation, but it would be to their interest to have nearly 70,000,000 gallons requirements.

"The next is the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company who use about 25,000,000 gallons per day, with a probable increase up to 40,000,000 gallons per day, or approximately 1,000,000,000 gallons per month. This plant takes its water from the pool above the C. & O. dam, so that under present dry conditions it reuses the river water during the dry period. This re-use heats the water and reduces its efficiency for condensers and cooling.

"The next user is the Potomac Edison Company, which uses at its river plant about 50,000,000 gallons per day for condensing purposes and will eventually require double this amount This company also takes its water from the pool above the dam, using the warm water discharged from the plants above, which reduces its efficiency very perceptibly. Its operating conditions would therefore be greatly benefitted if it could be assured of a flow of 1,000,000,000 gallons per month or more passing its plant.

"The City of Cumberland, with a population of 40,000 has about 6,000,000 gallons per day of sanitary sewage going into the river below the dam after leaving the settling beds (now provided for) which is an important matter and unless provided for in dilution by increased stream flow must be rectified by a costly sewage disposal plant. Their requirements for proper dilution will be about 104,000,000 gallons per day, which is about 79,000,000 gallons more than the flow of the river and Will's Creek in the dry spell of 1930.

More Water Needed

"The amount of water which these users have stated as their least requirements are reasonable in light of the actual records of use as submitted and examined, but each would like more water than the figures given on account of reuse of water at reduced efficiency, hence the endeavor to make as much water available as possible at a reasonable cost.

"It was first necessary to determine the flow of the stream in the dry period to know how much water must be impounded to supply the makeup. The rainfall for the year 1930, from available records, shows that the drought was the worst in fifty years.

"The industries and the U. S. Government have been maintaining jointly for the last five years a number of gauging and sampling stations along the Upper Potomac, at Will's Creek and below Wilcy's Ford to determine the quantity and quality of the Potomac River water.

"One station at Bloomington, just above Luke, Md., has been in operation for seven years gauging the drainage area of 287 square miles of territory; therefore, the gaugings of this station afford a reliable record.

Flow Compared

"The flow at Cumberland, with three times the area, is not much greater than at Bloomington. There were only 12,000,000 gallons per day in September, 1930, greater at Cumberland than at Bloomington and 9,000,000 more in October, 1930. Hence the computations herein figured are based on the flow at Bloomington, for if enough water passes Bloomington there certainly would be enough at Cumberland with the above pick-up. At Bloomington the records show a flow of 30,000,000 gallons per day in August to 12,200,000 in November, 1930, our driest month. These measurements were closely checked by the pulp and paper mill at Luke when all the water coming down the river was passed through the company meters during parts of October and November. During this period the paper company was drawing water from its dam on Stony river at a rate of about 15,000,000 gallons per day, a total of 1,286,500,000 gallons over the six months' period from July to December inclusive. Comparing this flow with the drainage area on the Savage River and its flow would give an approximate net flow of 5,700,000 gallons for the Potomac at Bloomington. In fact, if it were not for the amount of water the paper company released from its dam on Stony River in the driest four months the industries along the river would have had to shut down and the sewage condition along the river would be unbearable. Not all the water released from the Stony River dam would reach the paper company or downstream concerns on account of seepage and evaporation in its travels which is estimated anywhere from 10 per cent to 50 per cent, depending upon weather conditions.

Drought Cited

"The Savage River joins the Potomac just below the gauging station at Bloomington and its flow should be added to that of the Potomac, as shown by the gauging station, to give the flow at Luke. The average flow per day of the Savage River was 3,700,000 gallons and varied from 1,500,000 gallons in October to 5,100,000 gallons in July of 1930. Having determined the flow during the worst drought on record it is possible to compute and arrive at a volume of storage necessary to make up the deficit.

"From the figures obtained from the manufacturers it would seem desirable to maintain a minimum flow of 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 gallons per day during the driest period.

"The Potomac River above Cumberland has a drainage area of 877 square miles, but its flow at Cumberland is hard to obtain as the gauging station is two miles below Will's Creek and the C. & O. canal takes its water above the dam.

"However, considering the flow of Will's Creek at 7,000,000 and city sewage of 6,000,000 gallons would leave a net flow of approximately 17,000,000 gallons as the minimum daily flow coming into the pool above the dam This flow checks with Mr. Fuertes' report of 1911 when he estimated a flow of about 8,000,000 gallons per day before the Stony River dam was built.

Consumption Calculated

"In considering the Savage River the records show that for the year 1930-31 the discharge of the river amounted to a mean daily flow of 112 cubic feet per second, or 72,000,000 gallons per day, equal to 26,500,000,000 gallons per year in the worst drought year on record.

"The calculation of consumption by the industries requires a storage of about 4,500,000,000, hence the Savage River is easily capable of supplying this amount as most of the run-off was through the winter months.

"The Stony River does not have records of flow, but in comparison with Savage River area and rainfall should give a yield of 7,000,000,000 gallons which with the losses in stream flow, would give approximately the required minimum at Luke, 40 miles away.

"The Savage River valley is about twenty miles long by 4-5 miles wide and nearly uninhabited. The B. & O. Railroad follows the main stream, but at an elevation of 240 feet above the river and would not interfere with a dam of reasonable height. There is also an abandoned lumber tramway throughout the valley and a rough country road. The basin of the river has little or no coal on it, but is largely forested. The valleys are precipitous and the run-off rapid.

Two Dams Designed

"The selection of the dam site is just below the junction of Crabtree Creek and was originally surveyed by Mr. Fuertes in 1911, which survey and information was made available for our use. Other dam sites exist further up the stream, but are not as desirable and do not provide as extensive storage.

"Two dams have been designed on this site, both earth-filled structures—one of 135 feet high with an ample spillway for anticipated flood conditions to impound 4,500,000,000 gallons to permit a uniform flow of 50,000,000 gallons daily into the Potomac; a second dam 20 feet higher for the storage of 6,500,000,000 gallons, sufficient to maintain 60,000,000,000 gallons flow per day into the Potomac.

"The cost of the 135 foot dam storing 4,500,000,000 gallons is estimated at $990,000.00, including land, cleaning, engineering, etc.

"The cost of the 20 foot higher dam for storing 6,500,000,000 gallons is estimated at $1,260,000.00.

"This first dam would cost $220.00 per million gallons of water stored and the second or higher dam would cost $194.00 per million gallons and supply 50 per cent more water.

"The Stony River valley is a gorge for considerable distance, but at about 12½ miles from the mouth of the stream and seven miles below the present (paper mill) dam is a site at which a dam can be built about 125 feet high, backing the water up within 1½ miles of the present dam.

Reservoir Planned

"The reservoir site selected has no roads, houses or farm land and belongs largely to one holding. The site is some 17 miles from the nearest railroad and further from Piedmont.

"Two dams have been designed for this site, both of earth-filled structures—one 105 feet high with ample spillways, etc., to impound 6,500,000,000 gallons; the other, 125 feet high to impound 11,500,000,000 gallons. Either is practical, except the larger reservoir could not be filled except in wet years, while the smaller could be filled almost every year.

"The cost of the 105 feet dam is estimated at $956,000.00, while the higher one is estimated at $1,220,000.00.

"Comparing the Savage and Stony River reservoir sites as follows:

"The drainage area above Savage River dam is three times larger than Stony River and can be filled in the driest years, while the site required on the Stony River cannot always be filled in very dry years.

"The dam on the Savage River five miles from Piedmont would be easily accessible, while Stony River is forty miles away. Water from Savage reservoir would reach the Potomac at Luke in a few hours, while it would take two days from Stony River. The wastage would be less from Savage on account of shorter stream flow.

"Either reservoir when construted should be operated in conjunction with existing reservoir on Stony River.

In Conclusion

"The dam on the Savage River just below Crabtree Creek is the better development for the conservation of the Potomac and recommend that water to improve the dry weather flow a dam 155 feet high storing 6,500,000,000 gallons be constructed at a cost of $1,260,000.00.

"The 135 foot dam would just about meet present-day requirements and leave no margin for growth.

"The higher dam, costing 25 per cent more, would store 50 per cent more water. This would result in a much improved flow for all purposes from Luke to Cumberland and even to Washington, to such a degree that it is believed purification would be unnecessary at this time and for some time to come and also improve its quality for all industrial uses.

"The report is accompanied by data tables, blueprints and maps and will be immediately presented to the Board of the Maryland Division of the NRA for quick action.
